Fund Delay May Hike Bay Recreation Cost

Park Funds Eliminated From National Budget

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

A delay of at least one year to start buying private land for the Golden Gate National Recreation Area has been threatened by the Nixon administration's proposed new budget.

The recreation area's superintendent acknowledged the delay probably will mean the authorized ceiling of $61.6 million to buy the 16,211 acres of private land will prove too little because of inflation.

The $61.6 million was based on National Park Service estimates of land values last year, a figure that probably would hold up for only three years, Supt. William J. Whalen told the Independent-Journal today.

He stressed that the proposed $268 billion budget contained no money for park service land acquisition anywhere in the nation, and that the new recreation area was not being "picked on."

Whalen speculated that the prospect of getting needed funds in fiscal 1974-75 were "very good." He said the park service will "ask for just as much money as we can get," but did not know how much it had asked the administration to include in the proposed budget.

Whalen said there may be some surplus park service funds — perhaps $2 million to $6 million — available this fiscal year to start buying the private holdings. All but 11 of the 16,211 acres are in Marin between the Golden Gate Headlands and Point Reyes National Seashore.

The 34,000-acre recreation area, which consists largely of federal, state and San Francisco county lands, stretches along the ocean south to the San Mateo County line and includes Alcatraz and Angel islands.

Whalen predicted that despite the first year's delay, purchase of the private lands will "move much quicker" than the 10 years it took at the national seashore.

Pledges by the park service last year to buy all the private property within three years, he noted, were contingent on getting the necessary funds in time.

The budget does propose $2.5 million to start opening to the public the federal, state and county lands. Whalen said this money, if appropriated, should allow more public use of forts Barry, Baker and Cronkhite on the Marin headlands.

The recreation area bill also authorized $58 million to develop the land for public recreation, but none of this was sought by the park service in the proposed budget.

The bill provided that the government could pay property owners 10 per cent down, with the rest of the purchase price spread, with interest, over 10 years. The administration, however, rejected this because it would commit payments from future budgets.

Congressmen Told Budget Hikes Would Raise Taxes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Any additions by Congress to President Nixon's proposed $268.7 billion budget would lead to tax increases and more inflation, Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz testified today.

If Congress cooperates to hold down spending, the increase in consumer prices will slow to 2.5 per cent and unemployment will drop to about 4.5 per cent in the year beginning July 1, Shultz told the House Appropriations Committee.

"In order to prevent a resurgence of inflation, and to prevent also an increase in taxes, we again need close cooperation between the Congress and the executive branch," Shultz said.

Shultz, Budget Director Roy L. Ash and Chairman Herbert Stein of the Council of Economic Advisers appeared at the hearing to justify the administration's budget requests.

The issue of congressional appropriations and White House refusal to spend some of them has become one of the main points of contention between the Democratic-controlled Congress and the Republican administration.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, suggested Sunday that Congress resort to "crude means" in its contest with the executive branch, while White House adviser John D, Erlichman defended President Nixon's refusal to spend money he considers unnecessary.

In his prepared testimony, Shultz called for cooperation between Capitol Hill and the White House.

"Such cooperation is vital to preserve the integrity of fiscal policy," he said. "... Only this way can we maintain a healthy economic environment in which the economy can grow, the number of unemployed can be reduced and the rate of inflation can continue to slow.

"If we fail in this endeavor, if federal spending soars beyond full employment revenues, it cannot help but lead to more inflation or more taxation or both."

Stein said that if Nixon's budget proposals are followed, "there is every indication that the forces at work ... will produce continued vigorous expansion in the economy."

THE DRINKING DRIVER

Arrests, Convictions Zooming

By LARRY MOWELL
(First of two articles)

The threat of arrest and jail hasn't stopped droves of motorists from driving while intoxicated at one time or another, but law enforcement officers are hoping arrest, conviction and education will have a more sobering effect.

Statistics show the deck has been stacked more and more in recent years against the drunken driver trying to weave his way home to bed.

In 1968, the Marin County District Attorney's office filed 656 drunken driving complaints, but charged nearly twice as many the following year. By 1970, the figure swelled to 1,520. An all-time high of 2,383 was reached in 1971 before the total dipped last year to 1,975.

At least 90 per cent of those charged were convicted, according to Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Bales.

During the past two years, drunken driving has accounted for more than one quarter of the local prosecutions, but the lawbreakers are seldom hardened criminals or skid row winos.

"It is the most pervasive, most socially acceptable drug problem we have," Judge David R. Baty of Marin Municipal Court said.

Businessmen and laborers, attorneys and policemen, doctors and housewives, politicians and reporters all have felt the sting of an enforced tour of the county jail drunk tank and subsequent criminal charges.

"Some of the nicest people in the world get picked up for this," attorney Leonard Shaw said.

The bumper crop of arrests is due to the California Highway Patrol, which posts a virtual picket line along Highway 101 in Marin each night. Patrol arrests soared from 471 in 1968 to 2,091 in 1971, according to information officer Keith E. Chapman.

Patrol Commissioner Walter Pudinski attributed the spiraling total to a policy of keeping patrolmen rolling on the lookout for drunken drivers instead of parking in speed traps.

That policy is reflected in the statewide figures. Drunken driving arrests by the highway patrol rose 17 per cent to 95,667 in 1972, despite a 14 per cent drop in all citations and arrests from 1971.

Marin's contribution to the total is gleaned primarily from the 20 miles of Highway 101 between the Golden Gate Bridge and Sonoma County line.

In the early morning hours when weaving cars are most prevalent, eight to ten patrol cars are on the move compared to two or three eight years ago, according to Chapman.

One reason for the open season on drunken drivers is this statistic: 16 of the 42 fatal traffic accidents in Marin last year involved drunks, Chapman said.

But how many highballs and beers are too many? Is the fellow who boasts he can drink everyone else under the table and who proceeds to do so any more sober than his companions?

Engineers Say BART System Unsafe Under Full Operation

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The Bay Area Rapid Transit system as presently designed "will not provide adequate passenger safety" under full-scale operation, a three-member engineering panel reported to the legislature today.

But changes can be made in the $1.4 billion system "that will provide adequate passenger safety under all service conditions," the group told the Senate Public Utilities Committee, which asked for the study.

Presently the system operates in the East Bay on a combination manual-automatic technique where one train cannot move ahead to the next station until the train operator receives a telephone call from that station saying the track is clear.

This system has been instituted because once BART first got under way Sept. 11, there were some problems detecting trains that were stopped on the tracks, an aide to the Public Utilities Committee said in an interview.

Bob Foster, the committee aide, said BART officials say they think they have a mechanical solution for this problem which would involve a "track scrubber" brush that cleans wheels so it will be possible to insure effectiveness of the designed system for detecting when a train is stalled or stopped on the tracks.

BART information officer Mike Healy said BART has plans to install scrubbers on all trains. He said tests have proved the devices "one hundred per cent effective" in detecting dead trains.

"They've been very successful," Healy said when contacted at BART's Oakland headquarters. "The question is when and how to put them on. Initially we are putting scrubbers on about 10 cars."

Healy said BART officials have not seen the engineers' full report yet, but added that he believes it notes BART has already implemented some of the recommendations.

Under "full operation," the BART system would have to operate on an automatic basis once the San Francisco branch of the tracks is completed, Foster said.

After eight years of construction, the 28-mile section between Oakland and Fremont was opened. A week ago the operating line was extended 11 miles to Richmond.

The study panel was composed of Dr. Clarence A. Lovell of Fairfax, Va., Dr. Bernard M. Oliver of Palo Alto, and Dr. William M. Brobeck of Berkeley.

Viet Cong, South Vietnamese Holds First Talks On Future

PARIS (UPI) — Viet Cong and South Vietnamese officials met for the first time today on the political future of their wartorn country, announced agreement on a number of procedural matters and decided to meet again Wednesday.

The two sides, led by deputy delegation members, met for the first time without their North Vietnamese and U.S. allies. The talks are being held under a requirement of the Vietnam peace pact, signed in Paris 10 days ago.

In sidewalk statements to reporters after the more than two hour meeting at the Kleber Avenue conference center where the Vietnam accords were signed, the delegations said:

"At the preparatory meeting today on the procedure for the official negotiations between the two South Vietnam parties as called for by the Paris agreement on Vietnam, the two delegations agreed on a certain number of points."

Dinh Ba Thi, deputy leader of the four-man Viet Cong delegation, said: "Some points remain to be settled.

The Saigon mission leader, Nguyen Phuong Thiep, said: "We have discussed the modalities concerning the procedure for the opening of consultations as foreseen by the Paris agreement. We have agreed on a certain number of procedural points. We shall continue our discussion on Wednesday."

Neither side gave any indication which points were agreed upon and which remained to be settled.

Thiep said Saigon was determined to achieve a correctly applied and respected peace agreement.

"I wish to recall," he said, "our desire to open consultations with the other party as quickly as possible with a view to forming the National Reconciliation Council and thus achieve at the soonest date the most satisfactory solution to the political problems in South Vietnam."

Under the peace accord signed Jan. 27, the two sides must seek to establish a National Council within three months to supervise free elections in South Vietnam.

Dinh Ba Thi, leading the Viet Cong delegation, said, "Since the signing of the Paris accord, the Provisional Revolutionary Government has strictly respected and seriously applied the agreement.

"As to the internal problems, we believe that the sooner they are solved the better--and that they be solved within 90 days in a spirit of reconcilation and concord and mutual respect.

"It is in this spirit that we shall spare no effort to ensure the success of today's preliminary meeting," Thi said.

The meeting is intended to decide the level at which the political talks are held, the site and the frequency of meetings.

VITAL HIGHWAY — Cambodian troops today reopened Highway 4, vital "Road to the Sea," that was severed three days ago by Communist troops. The strategic highway, pinpointed on this UPI newsmap, connects the capital of Phnom Penh with Cambodia's only deep sea port facility at Kompong Song.

Cambodians Reopen Vital Highway To Sea

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Cambodian troops today reopened Highway 4, the vital link between the capital and the nation's only deepwater port at Kompong Thom that was severed by Communist troops three days ago.

Elsewhere in the country, the Cambodian command said Communist troops cut Highway 2 and struck at government positions along Highway 5 early today.

Western military observers speculated that the Khmer Rouge (Cambodian Communists) struck at Highway 4, 34 miles southwest of Phnom Penh, primarily as a diversionary tactic allowing them to move food and supplies into their hideouts in the northern mountains.

A government armored unit moved down Highway 4 today to the cheers of infantrymen still combing the fields either side of the road.

"Most of the Communists have been gone since yesterday," he said. "In the last 48 hours we've had two killed and about 25 wounded—all by sniper machinegun fire."

Prisoner Release Seen At Least A Week Away

SAIGON (UPI) — Michael Gauvin, the Canadian chief delegate to the International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS), said tonight that he presumed the release of Vietnam war prisoners would begin in "a week or so," an indication the release may not come at midweek as expected.

Communist attacks dropped to a new low today as two parallel cease-fire observation teams flew into regional headquarters throughout the country, but there was a sharp tank battle near Hue in which six of nearly 30 attacking Communist tanks were destroyed.

Gauvin emerged from a four-hour meeting of the ICCS chiefs and said, "We have been warned about the possibility of an exchange of prisoners and to be ready. We are ready and I just forewarned the commission."

Asked when the release of prisoners would begin, Gauvin said, "Within, I presume, a week or so. I don't know where and I don't know when. But I know it is in the offing."

Gauvin's statement appeared to back away from his comment after a meeting Sunday that prisoner releases might begin by the middle of this week.

The ICCS discussed cease-fire violation complaints and named Gauvin chairman for the first month of operation. The ICCS chairmanship will rotate on the monthly alphabetical order of Canada, Hungary, Indonesia and Poland.

On reports of the cease-fire violations he said, "We have asked them (the regional ICCS teams) to get in touch with the Joint Military Commission (JMC) teams which should be in place very soon, to provide the necessary liaison so they can do the necessary investigation."

Both members of the ICCS and the JMC, made up of the United States, the Viet Cong and North and South Vietnam, sent their first permanent teams into a number of regional headquarters today. Their activities were kept secret from newsmen who were barred from observing their operations.

Bar Backs Protection Of Newsmen

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A lawyers group said today federal legislation to protect reporters from forced disclosure of sources or unpublished information received in confidence is constitutional and should be approved by Congress.

The Association of the Bar of the City of New York submitted the proposal to a House subcommittee as it opened hearings on bills aimed at shielding newsmen and news media materials from subpoena.

Contempt-of-court citations against newsmen have been on the increase, bringing protests from journalists and members of Congress that the people's access to information is gravely endangered. Some reporters fear that forced disclosure of sources could keep tipsters from revealing vital information on unannounced government policy or corruption.

Benno C. Schmidt Jr., professor of Law at Columbia University, said the bar association believes the legislation should protect only professional journalists receiving confidential information.

A reporter's eyewitness observations of public events would not be protected and even confidential information should be compelled under certain circumstances, Schmidt said.

Agnew May Welcome Prisoners

CLARK AIR BASE, Philippines (UPI) — The top medical officer at Clark Air Base indicated today that Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, currently on a Southeast Asian tour, may welcome the first group of American POWs leaving Hanoi.

Col. John W. Ord, commander of the Clark Air Base Hospital said he wanted to shield the returning POWs from any "large crowd-type of hullabaloo" and said he was counting on Agnew's "wisdom" to employ the "gentle approach."

Agnew, who is touring Indochina countries to explain the U.S. role in post-war Vietnam, was in Singapore today and is scheduled to visit Manila—though not necessarily Clark Air Base—on Friday. Of a possible Agnew visit to Clark, Ord said:

"I'm sure Mr. Agnew is fully aware of the requirement to approach gently any of our returnees. The thing that would really bother me is if this became a large crowd-type of hullabaloo sort of thing. Certainly any individual with the wisdom of someone like Mr. Agnew could handle that kind of thing superbly, and I would have no problem in my mind relative to that."

Ord, 49, a native of Baker, Ore., repeatedly emphasized at a news conference that the POWs will be given unhurried but thorough medical examinations free from harassment and fatigue when they arrive from North Vietnam.

Reports from Saigon indicated that the first of 562 known prisoners may begin arriving at Clark sometime this week. Ord said that rest, excellent food and good medical treatment were his prescription for a speedy return to the United States, possibly within 72 hours for a "fair percentage" of the men after their arrival.

Ord added that the 60 physicians who will treat the prisoners will be on the alert for any contingency, including tropical ailments and psychiatric problems.

Asked if any sort of fanfare or elaborate welcoming ceremonies, including an appearance by Agnew, might cause the returnees stress, Ord said, "We have to presume that many of the men for a long period of time have not been used to high pressure (or) large groups of people around them—really with them as the focus of attention.

"And it would seem to me it would be desirable to shield the men from that sort of thing until we have a chance to look at them from a medical standpoint," he said.

Ord said it was impossible for him to give a "moment by moment" schedule of the returnees. In general, he said, the POWs upon their entry at the 270-bed Clark hospital will be quickly checked to determine the presence or absence of medical problems and to make decisions on individual diets.

After their first rest period, the men will provide blood and urine samples, followed by a "detailed history and physical examination" and then a series of X-rays.

One of the early decisions, Ord said, will be to determine when each returnee will be able to meet his personal "escort," one of the 380 men chosen to ease the POWs' return and provide him with companionship and answers to any of his questions. The escorts also will ask the returnees for information about other prisoners and missing men.

Ord said there were about 60 physicians representing all medical specialities at the hospital.

Cabinet Shuffled

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Prime Minister Indira Gandi shuffled her cabinet Sunday night and expanded its membership from 54 to 60. She also took over the key portfolio of home affairs in order to personally supervise the federation of India's 21 states.

Food Spokesman Favors Controls

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A spokesman for the supermarket industry said today he agreed with President Nixon's decision to keep the food industry under mandatory economic controls.

Clarence G. Adamy, president of the National Association of Food Chains, said supermarket operators had suffered as much as anyone from inflation, and that the industry's return on investments was down to 0.3 per cent, the lowest in recent history.

Adamy asked the Senate Banking Committee to extend Nixon's power for one year—to April 30, 1974—to set wage and price controls. Nixon removed controls from most of the economy except the food, construction and health industries.

"We, as an industry, have an enormous stake in returning this country to a period of price stability—and especially food price stability—and we support every reasonable effort to bring this about," Adamy said.

Adamy said that uncertainty over possible union requests for big wage settlements in 1973 made it clear that Nixon's power to intervene in the economy "must be maintained at least for another year and possibly for a long time in the future."

Another witness, Arthur N. Okun, who was on the Council of Economic Advisers under Presidents John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson, also testified the Economic Stabilization Act should be extended for one year.

"I am convinced that the diligent pursuit of a wage-price restraint program is critical to our chances of attaining prosperity without increased inflation in 1973 and the years ahead," said Okun, now a senior fellow at the Brookings Institution in Washington.

He said Phase I and II of Nixon's economic policies "contributed significantly in my judgment, to a deceleration of inflation in the last year and a half even as the economy moved into a period of vigorous recovery."

He said that while Phase III is "potentially effective in principle, none-the-less, at the present time I cannot have complete confidence that the program will be implemented with full effectiveness in practice."

He said one of his major criticisms was that big companies and unions are required to report wage or price increases only at quarterly intervals rather than reporting them in advance before they are implemented.

Cleveland School Strike Settled, Others Go On

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Cleveland's 140,000 public school students were due back in the classroom today after negotiators for 3,200 striking non-teaching employes and the Cleveland Board of Education reached tentative agreement on a one-year contract. But strikes affecting another 388,000 pupils continued today in Philadelphia and St. Louis.

"It's a total victory for the unions," said attorney John R. Climaco who represented the striking custodians. "We got all the things we asked except the money, which we are going to talk about at a later date."

The contract calls for numerous adjustments in working conditions, the evening-out of vacation schedules and sets a limit of 23 hours overtime each non-academic employe can work. Some employes had been working as much as 60 hours each week.

The strike began last Wednesday, with the city's teachers refusing to cross picket lines.

In Philadelphia, negotiators for the striking teachers and the board of education held an unprecedented televised meeting Sunday, making public for the first time the differences that have blocked a contract settlement for 15 months.

The strike entered its fifth week today with 285,000 public school students remaining on extended vacation.

John Ryan, chief negotiator for the Philadelphia Federation of Teachers, said the union had cut its wage demands by 25 per cent. He placed the price of a three-year package at $84 million.

The school board repeated its offer of a $32 million wage package.

The St. Louis strike entered its third week today, with the board of education threatening to press contempt-of-court proceedings against the city's 4,000 teachers.

Teacher's in Missouri's largest city have ignored two temporary restraining orders and a temporary injunction issued against the strike and pickets.

A hearing was to be held today before Circuit Court Judge Thomas F. McGuire, and board vice president Dr. Andrew Doyle said Sunday he "wouldn't be surprised" if the board sought the contempt of court citations.

The board has maintained the teachers are violating state laws that prohibit teachers' strikes and collective bargaining with teachers.

Heath Opposes Withdrawal Of Europe Troops

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Prime Minister Edward Heath of Britain believes the unilateral withdrawal of some of the 300,000 U.S. troops in Europe might force a number of West European nations to "make a deal" with the Soviet Union.

"If the United States withdraws, this would encourage the Soviet Union to use its influence in a variety of ways," Heath said. "There are a number of European countries which would not stand up ... who would be likely to make a deal with the Soviet Union."

Heath, whose remarks were made in a television interview broadcast Sunday, did not identify the countries. However, he presumably was referring to Norway and Denmark, located on the northern flank of the NATO region. Heath insisted Great Britain would not be intimidated by the Russians.

The British prime minister was interviewed on NBC's "Meet the Press."

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Lindy Boggs Wins

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Louisiana Democrats chose Lindy Boggs, widow of former House Majority Leader T. Hale Boggs, to take her missing husband's place in Congress.

Mrs. Boggs, 56, crushed four opponents in a special primary election Saturday. She polled more than 70 per cent of an exceptionally light vote, leaving her opponents to split up 14,903 of the 56,084 ballots cast.

She still must defeat Republican candidate Robert E. Lee March 20 in a special election, but since Louisiana is traditionally a solid Democratic state she is considered a shoo-in.

She would be the first woman Louisiana has ever elected to Congress, although two women have been appointed to the Senate to fill out brief terms of senators who died in office.

Eye Danger

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — More than half the eye makeup used by American women may be contaminated by bacteria and fungus, can cause infections and in some cases severe loss of vision, a Georgia researcher reported Sunday.

"When one considers that millions of women are using eye cosmetics on a daily or occasional basis, the fact that a significant percentage of the makeup in use may be contaminated with micro-organisms, some capable of causing severe eye infections, then the problem seems of some importance," said Dr. Louis A. Wilson.

Wilson, an associate professor of opthalmology at the Medical College of Georgia in Augusta, Ga., addressed a science writers seminar sponsored by Research to Prevent Blindness Inc.

Wilson said that "to date 1,031 eye cosmetics — mascara, eye shadow, eye liner, etc. from 460 women have been evaluated for bacterial and fungal contamination.

Missile Boats

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Israel said Sunday it is building a fleet of high-speed missile boats named "Flash," a $10 million craft the builder calls the first of its kind and one of the world's most sophisticated types.

The announcement moves Israel a step nearer its declared goal of not relying on foreign countries for weapons.

Ever since France decided in 1967 to halt the flow of its equipment to the Middle East, the armed forces have striven to become self-sufficient. France was the leading supplier of planes and boats to Israel until then.

Rear Adm. Benjamin Telem, the navy commander, said Sunday that the boat will triple Israel's sea strike range to several thousand miles while increasing its waterborne firepower and accuracy.

Offer Rejected

VIENNA (UPI) — Western diplomats said today they rejected a Soviet offer to start the long-delayed talks on mutual East-West reductions in troops and arms in central Europe now despite lack of agreement on how to conduct them.

The Soviet Union suggested an "unstructured" meeting for today similar to one held last Wednesday that officially opened preliminary talks on Mutual and Balanced Force Reductions.

Diplomats said they did not think full-scale talks could start before Wednesday or Thursday at the earliest.

Among the problems are such questions as the seating of delegates and the chairmanship. But the diplomats said the most serious problem was the status of Romania and Bulgaria —two Warsaw Pact nations left out of planning for MBFR because they have no troops in central Europe.

Crucifixion

SANTO DOMINGO (UPI) — The 31-year-old wife of a self-styled French yogi was removed from a cross Sunday after a 52-hour ordeal she carried out as part of a "sacrifice for world peace."

Mrs. Patrick Tamao was treated in a hospital and released. Doctors said she was in good condition.

Earlier, her husband also underwent a self-ordered crucifixion for the same reason.

Doctors examined Mrs. Tamao immediately after she was removed from the cross and said her condition was good although she was pale and suffered a slight fever.

Patrolman Not Be Retried For Shooting

EUREKA (AP) — Former Highway Patrolman Robert Hahn will not be retried on manslaughter charges stemming from the fatal shooting of a logger, Humboldt County authorities say.

Hahn, whose first trial ended in a hung jury last December, was charged with involuntary manslaughter in the slaying of William Smith, 37, of Westhaven. He was dismissed from the patrol after failing to report the shooting.

After reviewing the evidence and interviewing jurors who split 10-2 for acquittal, Dist. Atty. William Ferroggiaro said Sunday he decided not to retry Hahn.

During the trial, Hahn, 43, claimed his gun discharged accidentally as he chased Smith, who had driven his motorcycle into a ditch alongside U.S. 101.

Hahn, now a trailer court operator, says he will ask to be reinstated as a patrolman.

Arson Suspect

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — Three victims of a weekend fire in a crowded cafeteria have identified Charles Cornell Reardon, 49, as the little man in a yellow suit who started a fire that injured 13 persons.

Police said yesterday three victims of the Concord cafeteria fire picked Reardon out of a lineup with five other men at police headquarters.

Reardon, a frequent customer of the cafeteria on Collins Avenue, was ordered held without bond for a mental competency hearing today before Ciruit Court Judge Gene Williams. City Court Judge Richard S. Hickey denied bail to Reardon and referred the case to circuit court, which must rule on mental competency.

Irish Violence

BELFAST (UPI) — Security chiefs said today the latest surge of violence in Northern Ireland has brought the province to the brink of civil war. Sources said officials were considering a curfew in Belfast to curb the bloodshed.

The possibility of a curfew and more British troops to enforce it arose today in the wake of weekend shooting sprees that left 10 men dead and at least 28 more wounded. It made it the bloodiest weekend in a year.

Skiers Killed

INNSBRUCK, Austria (UPI) — Avalanches in two Austrian winter resorts killed 11 persons yesterday, 10 of them members of a West German club trapped when snow crashed down on them. Two other persons were seriously injured.

The biggest avalanche was near the village of Gerlos where the "white death" buried 24 Bavarians on a weekend ski outing. Ten were killed.

The other avalanche occurred in the Tyrolian village of St. Anton, the scene of annual World Cup ski races. One West German skier died.

Body Sought

EAGLE GROVE, Iowa (UPI) — Authorities today renewed their search for the body of a woman still believed to be trapped in the ruins of two buildings that were leveled by a gas explosion.

Twelve bodies were recovered earlier from the tons of debris that was once the Chatterbox Cafe and Coast to Coast Store, but the body of Mrs. Lucille Anderson, 55, a cook at the cafe, was still missing. All the victims were killed by the force of the Friday night explosion.

Searchers poured through the rubble from daybreak to sunset Sunday in vain for Mrs. Anderson's body. A spokesman at the Eagle Grove Police Department said the search was to resume at dawn.

Over 30 Years Experience In Nutrition
HERE'S HEALTH!
by JUNE EMBURY

The recent National Health Federation convention in Los Angeles was a rewarding experience. Along with such great familiar lecturers as Adelle Davis, we heard new ones, such as the renowned Emanuel Cheraskin, who holds degrees in both medicine and dentistry! He's uncommonly open-minded in his efforts to learn and teach us how to meet an age-old challenge: living with the environment.
Professor Cheraskin investigates new approaches and old ones as they come to his attention, including some labelled "quackery" by orthodoxy. He urges us to make allowances as we adapt to the environment. For example, by taking supplements such as vitamins E and C and minerals. Incidentally, Dr. Cheraskin was keenly interested in our Birkenstock "happy feet" sandals because they're made to provide maximum freedom with flexible support.

VITAL HIGHWAY — Cambodian troops today reopened Highway 4, vital "Road to the Sea," that was severed three days ago by Communist troops. The strategic highway, pinpointed on this UPI newsmap, connects the capital of Phnom Penh with Cambodia's only deep sea port facility at Kompong Song.

Cambodians Reopen Vital Highway To Sea

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Cambodian troops today reopened Highway 4, the vital link between the capital and the nation's only deepwater port at Kompong Thom that was severed by Communist troops three days ago.

Elsewhere in the country, the Cambodian command said Communist troops cut Highway 2 and struck at government positions along Highway 5 early today.

Western military observers speculated that the Khmer Rouge (Cambodian Communists) struck at Highway 4, 34 miles southwest of Phnom Penh, primarily as a diversionary tactic allowing them to move food and supplies into their hideouts in the northern mountains.

A government armored unit moved down Highway 4 today to the cheers of infantrymen still combing the fields either side of the road.

"Most of the Communists have been gone since yesterday," he said. "In the last 48 hours we've had two killed and about 25 wounded—all by sniper machinegun fire."

Prisoner Release Seen At Least A Week Away

SAIGON (UPI) — Michael Gauvin, the Canadian chief delegate to the International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS), said tonight that he presumed the release of Vietnam war prisoners would begin in "a week or so," an indication the release may not come at midweek as expected.

Communist attacks dropped to a new low today as two parallel cease-fire observation teams flew into regional headquarters throughout the country, but there was a sharp tank battle near Hue in which six of nearly 30 attacking Communist tanks were destroyed.

Gauvin emerged from a four-hour meeting of the ICCS chiefs and said, "We have been warned about the possibility of an exchange of prisoners and to be ready. We are ready and I just forewarned the commission."

Asked when the release of prisoners would begin, Gauvin said, "Within, I presume, a week or so. I don't know where and I don't know when. But I know it is in the offing."

Gauvin's statement appeared to back away from his comment after a meeting Sunday that prisoner releases might begin by the middle of this week.

The ICCS discussed cease-fire violation complaints and named Gauvin chairman for the first month of operation. The ICCS chairmanship will rotate on the monthly alphabetical order of Canada, Hungary, Indonesia and Poland.

On reports of the cease-fire violations he said, "We have asked them (the regional ICCS teams) to get in touch with the Joint Military Commission (JMC) teams which should be in place very soon, to provide the necessary liaison so they can do the necessary investigation."

Both members of the ICCS and the JMC, made up of the United States, the Viet Cong and North and South Vietnam, sent their first permanent teams into a number of regional headquarters today. Their activities were kept secret from newsmen who were barred from observing their operations.

The recent National Health Federation convention in Los Angeles was a rewarding experience. Along with such great familiar lecturers as Adelle Davis, we heard new ones, such as the renowned Emanuel Cheraskin, who holds degrees in both medicine and dentistry! He's uncommonly open-minded in his efforts to learn and teach us how to meet an age-old challenge: living with the environment.
Professor Cheraskin investigates new approaches and old ones as they come to his attention, including some labelled "quackery" by orthodoxy. He urges us to make allowances as we adapt to the environment. For example, by taking supplements such as vitamins E and C and minerals. Incidentally, Dr. Cheraskin was keenly interested in our Birkenstock "happy feet" sandals because they're made to provide maximum freedom with flexible support.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Lindy Boggs Wins

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Louisiana Democrats chose Lindy Boggs, widow of former House Majority Leader T. Hale Boggs, to take her missing husband's place in Congress.

Mrs. Boggs, 56, crushed four opponents in a special primary election Saturday. She polled more than 70 per cent of an exceptionally light vote, leaving her opponents to split up 14,903 of the 56,084 ballots cast.

She still must defeat Republican candidate Robert E. Lee March 20 in a special election, but since Louisiana is traditionally a solid Democratic state she is considered a shoo-in.

She would be the first woman Louisiana has ever elected to Congress, although two women have been appointed to the Senate to fill out brief terms of senators who died in office.

Eye Danger

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — More than half the eye makeup used by American women may be contaminated by bacteria and fungus, can cause infections and in some cases severe loss of vision, a Georgia researcher reported Sunday.

"When one considers that millions of women are using eye cosmetics on a daily or occasional basis, the fact that a significant percentage of the makeup in use may be contaminated with micro-organisms, some capable of causing severe eye infections, then the problem seems of some importance," said Dr. Louis A. Wilson.

Wilson, an associate professor of opthalmology at the Medical College of Georgia in Augusta, Ga., addressed a science writers seminar sponsored by Research to Prevent Blindness Inc.

Wilson said that "to date 1,031 eye cosmetics — mascara, eye shadow, eye liner, etc. from 460 women have been evaluated for bacterial and fungal contamination.

Missile Boats

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Israel said Sunday it is building a fleet of high-speed missile boats named "Flash," a $10 million craft the builder calls the first of its kind and one of the world's most sophisticated types.

The announcement moves Israel a step nearer its declared goal of not relying on foreign countries for weapons.

Ever since France decided in 1967 to halt the flow of its equipment to the Middle East, the armed forces have striven to become self-sufficient. France was the leading supplier of planes and boats to Israel until then.

Rear Adm. Benjamin Telem, the navy commander, said Sunday that the boat will triple Israel's sea strike range to several thousand miles while increasing its waterborne firepower and accuracy.

Offer Rejected

VIENNA (UPI) — Western diplomats said today they rejected a Soviet offer to start the long-delayed talks on mutual East-West reductions in troops and arms in central Europe now despite lack of agreement on how to conduct them.

The Soviet Union suggested an "unstructured" meeting for today similar to one held last Wednesday that officially opened preliminary talks on Mutual and Balanced Force Reductions.

Diplomats said they did not think full-scale talks could start before Wednesday or Thursday at the earliest.

Among the problems are such questions as the seating of delegates and the chairmanship. But the diplomats said the most serious problem was the status of Romania and Bulgaria —two Warsaw Pact nations left out of planning for MBFR because they have no troops in central Europe.

Crucifixion

SANTO DOMINGO (UPI) — The 31-year-old wife of a self-styled French yogi was removed from a cross Sunday after a 52-hour ordeal she carried out as part of a "sacrifice for world peace."

Mrs. Patrick Tamao was treated in a hospital and released. Doctors said she was in good condition.

Earlier, her husband also underwent a self-ordered crucifixion for the same reason.

Doctors examined Mrs. Tamao immediately after she was removed from the cross and said her condition was good although she was pale and suffered a slight fever.

Patrolman Not Be Retried For Shooting

EUREKA (AP) — Former Highway Patrolman Robert Hahn will not be retried on manslaughter charges stemming from the fatal shooting of a logger, Humboldt County authorities say.

Hahn, whose first trial ended in a hung jury last December, was charged with involuntary manslaughter in the slaying of William Smith, 37, of Westhaven. He was dismissed from the patrol after failing to report the shooting.

After reviewing the evidence and interviewing jurors who split 10-2 for acquittal, Dist. Atty. William Ferroggiaro said Sunday he decided not to retry Hahn.

During the trial, Hahn, 43, claimed his gun discharged accidentally as he chased Smith, who had driven his motorcycle into a ditch alongside U.S. 101.

Hahn, now a trailer court operator, says he will ask to be reinstated as a patrolman.

Arson Suspect

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — Three victims of a weekend fire in a crowded cafeteria have identified Charles Cornell Reardon, 49, as the little man in a yellow suit who started a fire that injured 13 persons.

Police said yesterday three victims of the Concord cafeteria fire picked Reardon out of a lineup with five other men at police headquarters.

Reardon, a frequent customer of the cafeteria on Collins Avenue, was ordered held without bond for a mental competency hearing today before Ciruit Court Judge Gene Williams. City Court Judge Richard S. Hickey denied bail to Reardon and referred the case to circuit court, which must rule on mental competency.

Irish Violence

BELFAST (UPI) — Security chiefs said today the latest surge of violence in Northern Ireland has brought the province to the brink of civil war. Sources said officials were considering a curfew in Belfast to curb the bloodshed.

The possibility of a curfew and more British troops to enforce it arose today in the wake of weekend shooting sprees that left 10 men dead and at least 28 more wounded. It made it the bloodiest weekend in a year.

Skiers Killed

INNSBRUCK, Austria (UPI) — Avalanches in two Austrian winter resorts killed 11 persons yesterday, 10 of them members of a West German club trapped when snow crashed down on them. Two other persons were seriously injured.

The biggest avalanche was near the village of Gerlos where the "white death" buried 24 Bavarians on a weekend ski outing. Ten were killed.

The other avalanche occurred in the Tyrolian village of St. Anton, the scene of annual World Cup ski races. One West German skier died.

Body Sought

EAGLE GROVE, Iowa (UPI) — Authorities today renewed their search for the body of a woman still believed to be trapped in the ruins of two buildings that were leveled by a gas explosion.

Twelve bodies were recovered earlier from the tons of debris that was once the Chatterbox Cafe and Coast to Coast Store, but the body of Mrs. Lucille Anderson, 55, a cook at the cafe, was still missing. All the victims were killed by the force of the Friday night explosion.

Searchers poured through the rubble from daybreak to sunset Sunday in vain for Mrs. Anderson's body. A spokesman at the Eagle Grove Police Department said the search was to resume at dawn.

Convict Wants The Public To See 'Inside' San Quentin

Model Prisoner Cites Harmful Atmosphere

By PAT ANGLE

A "model prisoner" at San Quentin who has spent nearly a third of his life behind bars believes the people of California must demand the right to visit the prison, talk with the inmates and see for themselves what is happening in the world beyond its walls.

"This prison doesn't rehabilitate men; it turns them into animals, then lets them loose on society," said 32-year-old Robert Lokey. "It harms those outside as much as those within and the forces operating San Quentin have no right to keep the people from learning just what they have bought with their tax dollars."

The boyish-looking convict, interviewed after he asked the Independent-Journal for a chance to tell the public about conditions at the institution, charged that San Quentin inmates are treated worse than those in other prisons.

He also contended that the prison administration encourages inmate disturbances for economic reasons and said that many men who have managed to rehabilitate themselves despite the system are being imprisoned long after they are capable of returning to the community.

Lokey, who is serving a life sentence without possibility of parole, has been at San Quentin since 1962. He was convicted of fatally shooting a man during the kidnaping and robbery of a young San Diego couple.

He is not one of the prison's troublemakers or militants, according to prison officials, but rather recognized as a man "who has made a very constructive adjustment and considerable personal advancement" while serving time.

During his confinement, Lokey has completed his high school education, a course in office machine technology and obtained an associate of arts degree, graduating with honors from the College of Marin prison program. In addition, he has invented an electric saw which shuts off automatically when a hand (or any part of the body) comes near it, and a portable braille writing machine.

Yet, despite his many achievements and "good adjustment" while at San Quentin, the inmate sees the prison as "a terrible sore, a cancer" where convicts receive treatment inferior to those in other institutions.

"Why are some men here allowed only one change of clothing a week to work and live in until they stink to high heaven, when in other places, they get two or more?" he asked.

Lokey also said that convicted felons in other institutions are all permitted radios in their cells, "but only the privileged few get them here.

"Why are we confined in tiny, four-foot wide cells, while those elsewhere are twice as large? We have no hot water in our cells as other convicts do. There is no diet food prepared here for people with stomach disorders, while there are diet lines at other places."

In addition, Lokey charged that other prisoners around the state have it better because they can purchase television sets for their cells, wear their hair the way they want to and wear civilian clothes.

"I'm not advocating the prisoners be coddled, although many people will probably think so," he said. "But it's important that the people of this state realize that being confined for years in little concrete blocks is punishment enough for a man. It's not necessary to harass him, feed him garbage and take away everything that makes life bearable, like clean clothes."

Lokey accused prison personnel and administrators of abetting and encouraging disturbances and strikes among the inmate population.

"A black convict stabs a white inmate and over the prison's intercom system, an official says: 'All right, we know you're having a race riot in there; you'd better cut it out or we'll come in with guns.'"

Likewise, he said, it is often the guards who spread rumors of a strike, leaving the inmates "in fear, worrying, wondering what to do. If they strike, they will be punished; if they don't, they could be killed for failing to go along with their brothers."

Lokey said he believes that the strikes and disturbances are designed and planned by officialdom — with a purpose. "Afterwards, the convicts are at each others throats. . .ano ther San Quentin yearly budget has been justified, more pay for guards, more operating money. . ."

Although San Quentin is scheduled to cease operation as a maximum security institution next year, the inmate thinks it will remain in its present capacity for some time, "even though it should have been closed during the last century.

"There are forces in this state that want to keep this prison open at all costs, people like legislators and others who don't care what kind of treatment is given to 'those criminals,' " he said. "They are the ones who think the worse the treatment is, the better."

He described as another needless cruelty the failure of many to obtain paroles even though they have rehabilitated themselves. He cites his own case as an example.

"I'm the epitome of the rehabilitated man. I was born in here, because I wasn't anything when I came in. Nobody around here can say I've caused any trouble."

To be freed, Lokey's no-parole sentence must be commuted by the governor. His case has been before the Adult Authority — which makes recommendations on commutations — three times. Each time the authority has refused to recommend that he be given his freedom.

Although a two-man committee from the Authority suggested after interviewing him in November of 1971 that his sentence be commuted, the recommendation was turned down by the full board two months later.

"They've told me I'm doing beautifully, that I had a good possibility of freedom, but nothing has happened. Why won't they give me a chance?" Lokey asked.

Lokey's brother, Galen, now on parole after serving nine years in prison for his part in the kidnaping-murder, also said he believes his brother has changed drastically — for the better — while in prison.

"When this happened, Bob was just a motorcycle bum, irresponsible, unreliable, with no goals, just living from day to day," the younger Lokey said. "Now he's completely different; he has definite goals. He wants to help other people, that's why he invented the braille-writer for blind people."

"Hell, yes, the guy should have his chance," said one prison official who refused to be quoted in the matter.

One person who is convinced that Lokey should spend the rest of his life in prison is Sen. H. L. Richardson, R-Arcadia, a member of the state's Select Committee on Penal Institutions. Richardson says he makes it a practice to review all commutation requests "because I'm interested."

"If Lokey were freed, after serving only 10 years, we would be destroying any kind of deterrent effect of the law," Richardson said. "Does a man have a right to viciously assault a woman, murder her husband and be back out on the street in such a short time?"

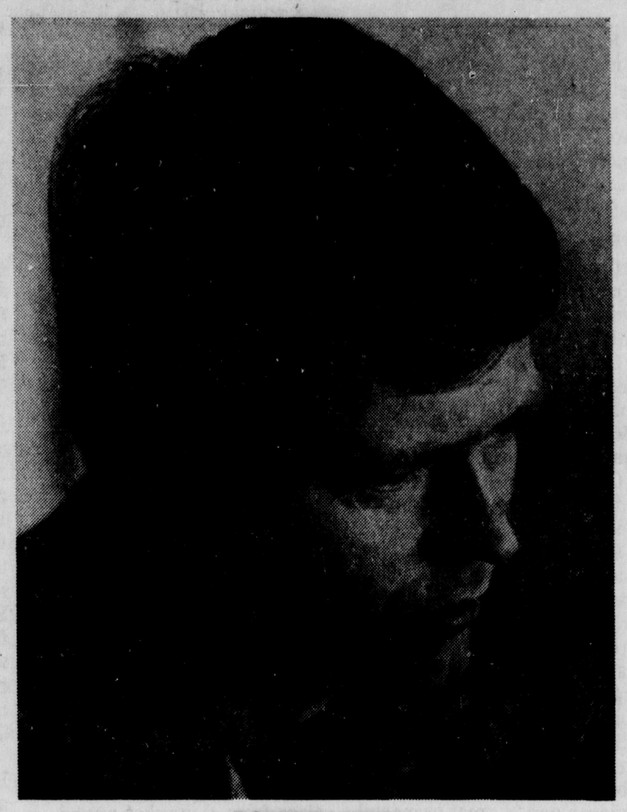
Richardson, who acknowledges lobbying state penal officials against the inmate's release, said he will continue to fight to keep Lokey in prison, adding he is not concerned about whether or not he seems to be rehabilitated.

"His crime was a heinous one, coldly premeditated and I don't believe people who plan and carry out acts like that should ever be freed," the senator said. "Besides, Lokey has an extensive prior record of arrests for burglary and assault in several states; he wasn't a juvenile without prior run-ins with the law when he committed the crime he is now imprisoned for."

He added: "So I decide to work to free Lokey and he kills someone again. What do I say to the person's family. . .'Gee, I made a mistake' or 'I'm sorry.' "

The plight of the prisoner and its adverse effect on society as a whole will continue, according to Lokey, "until the people of the state arouse themselves to begin to question these conditions in their prisons and look into them.

"I'd like to come to my cellblock (where minimum security prisoners live) and talk to people and see what it's like in here," he said. "I can promise they'll be in no more danger than walking out on the street."



ROBERT LOKEY

"The forces operating San Quentin have no right to keep the people from learning just what they have bought with their tax dollars."

Warden Says Inmate Has Personal Burden

"Bob Lokey has suffered a very great personal disappointment (in not being paroled) and that's why he's saying these things," Associate Warden James W. L. Park said in reply to Lokey's charges about conditions at San Quentin.

Although Park declined to say whether he thought the convicted murderer should have his freedom, he did have good words about the man's prison record.

"He's made some very positive accomplishments here. He's made a constructive adjustment and considerable personal advancement."

"But the intention of the Legislature that passes that law was that the guy was going to spend the rest of his life in prison," the associate warden said. "It's up to the man himself to convince the governor's office that he poses no further threat to the community, that he has made a change substantial enough to override the will of the people."

Park also concurred in Lokey's contention that there are forces in the state that want to keep the antiquated prison open. "That's true," he admitted.

"The only way to close San Quentin is to build new prisons and there are many people on all sides of the political spectrum, who object to that.

"The radicals don't want any prisons at all.

"And the liberals are afraid we will build another bastille, which is the way they see San Quentin."

Park and Lee E. DeBord, prison information officer, also had replies for many of Lokey's other allegations:

DISTURBANCES — "Our people create about 10 per cent of the problems through ineptitude and not for any sinister reasons. Ninety per cent of our problems come to us in the men who are sent here, often failures who couldn't make it in other institutions." — Park.

INFERIOR TREATMENT — "The grass is always greener somewhere else. When I was at Soledad, I heard that everything worked great at San Quentin and terrible at Soledad. When I got here, I heard just the opposite" — DeBord.

CLOTHING — "Many of our men get two changes of blues (exterior clothing) twice a week, but some don't. Because of our large population, the laundry was not set up in a way to provide two changes for all. But we're looking at the situation now to see if we can change it." — DeBord.

HOT WATER — "When San Quentin was built, ordinary folk on the outside didn't have hot water in their homes. Now it would cost millions of dollars to install hot water throughout the prison. The Adjustment Center (a maximum security facility for problem prisoners) has hot water in cells because it was built in 1959." — Park

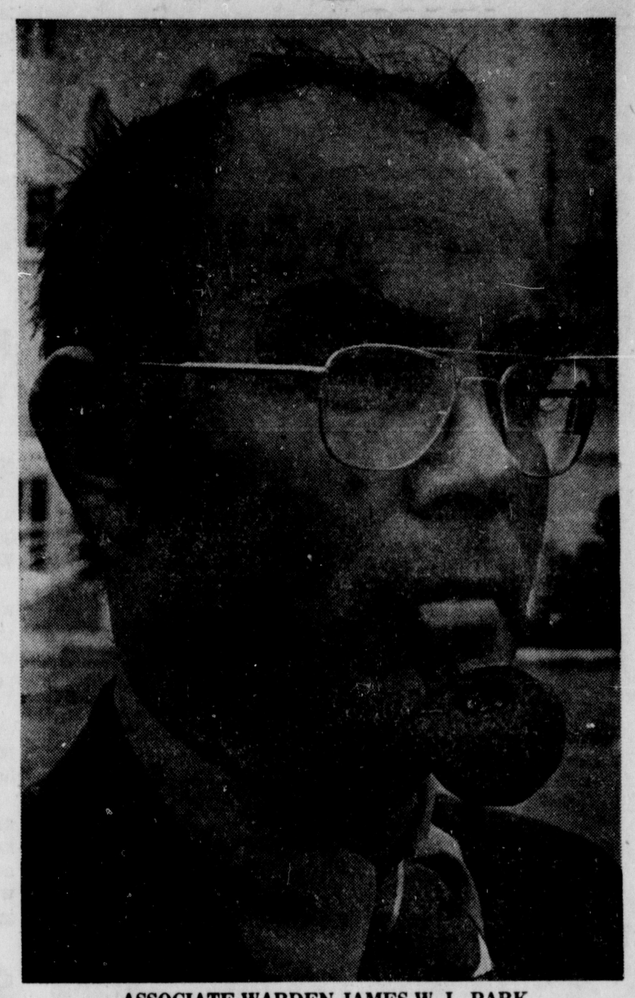
CELL SIZE — "Basically, our cells are the same size as most cells in other prisons. Many men don't spend more than seven hours a day in their cells." — Park.

TELEVISION — "We can't have individual televisions in the cells because our antique electrical system can't take the strain. We're trying to do something about this now" — Park.

DIET FOOD — "If a man needs a special diet, our medical staff wants him hospitalized so they can control it. Our doctors feel most people with stomach problems can select an adequate diet from the regular menu." — Park.

HAIR — "Allowing any kind of hair growth creates special security problems; some men could change their appearance every couple of weeks. Civilian clothing causes the same kind of problem; we feel a man wearing them would be able to walk out of here without too much trouble." — Park.

GUARD CRUELTY — "Like any other profession, we have some employees who are not the greatest in the world, who leave something to be desired. But most of our correction officers are good, dedicated people." — Park.



ASSOCIATE WARDEN JAMES W. L. PARK

"The conservatives don't want to spend the money. The radicals don't want any prisons at all. And the liberals are afraid we'll build another bastille. . . ."

"Besides, Lokey has an extensive prior record of arrests for burglary and assault in several states; he wasn't a juvenile without prior run-ins with the law when he committed the crime he is now imprisoned for."

He added: "So I decide to work to free Lokey and he kills someone again. What do I say to the person's family. . .'Gee, I made a mistake' or 'I'm sorry.'"

The plight of the prisoner and its adverse effect on society as a whole will continue, according to Lokey, "until the people of the state arouse themselves to begin to question these conditions in their prisons and look into them.

"I'd like to come to my cellblock (where minimum security prisoners live) and talk to people and see what it's like in here," he said. "I can promise they'll be in no more danger than walking out on the street."

ROBERT LOKEY

"The forces operating San Quentin have no right to keep the people from learning just what they have bought with their tax dollars."

Warden Says Inmate Has Personal Burden

"Bob Lokey has suffered a very great personal disappointment (in not being paroled) and that's why he's saying these things," Associate Warden James W. L. Park said in reply to Lokey's charges about conditions at San Quentin.

Although Park declined to say whether he thought the convicted murderer should have his freedom, he did have good words about the man's prison record.

"He's made some very positive accomplishments here. He's made a constructive adjustment and considerable personal advancement."

"But the intention of the Legislature that passes that law was that the guy was going to spend the rest of his life in prison," the associate warden said. "It's up to the man himself to convince the governor's office that he poses no further threat to the community, that he has made a change substantial enough to override the will of the people."

Park also concurred in Lokey's contention that there are forces in the state that want to keep the antiquated prison open. "That's true," he admitted.

"The only way to close San Quentin is to build new prisons and there are many people on all sides of the political spectrum, who object to that.

"The conservatives don't want to spend the money.

"The radicals don't want any prisons at all.

"And the liberals are afraid we will build another bastille, which is the way they see San Quentin."

Park and Lee E. DeBord, prison information officer, also had replies for many of Lokey's other allegations:

DISTURBANCES — "Our people create about 10 per cent of the problems through ineptitude and not for any sinister reasons. Ninety per cent of our problems come to us in the men who are sent here, often failures who couldn't make it in other institutions." — Park.

INFERIOR TREATMENT — "The grass is always greener somewhere else. When I was at Soledad, I heard that everything worked great at San Quentin and terrible at Soledad. When I got here, I heard just the opposite" — DeBord.

CLOTHING — "Many of our men get two changes of blues (exterior clothing) twice a week, but some don't. Because of our large population, the laundry was not set up in a way to provide two changes for all. But we're looking at the situation now to see if we can change it." — DeBord.

HOT WATER — "When San Quentin was built, ordinary folk on the outside didn't have hot water in their homes. Now it would cost millions of dollars to install hot water throughout the prison. The Adjustment Center (a maximum security facility for problem prisoners) has hot water in cells because it was built in 1959." — Park

CELL SIZE — "Basically, our cells are the same size as most cells in other prisons. Many men don't spend more than seven hours a day in their cells." — Park.

TELEVISION — "We can't have individual televisions in the cells because our antique electrical system can't take the strain. We're trying to do something about this now" — Park.

DIET FOOD — "If a man needs a special diet, our medical staff wants him hospitalized so they can control it. Our doctors feel most people with stomach problems can select an adequate diet from the regular menu." — Park.

HAIR — "Allowing any kind of hair growth creates special security problems; some men could change their appearance every couple of weeks. Civilian clothing causes the same kind of problem; we feel a man wearing them would be able to walk out of here without too much trouble." — Park.

GUARD CRUELTY — "Like any other profession, we have some employees who are not the greatest in the world, who leave something to be desired. But most of our correction officers are good, dedicated people." — Park.

SHAGGY DOG STOPPED TRAFFIC

This grey shaggy dog somehow made its way to the center divider on Highway 101 just north of the pedestrian overpass in San Rafael. California Highway patrolmen stopped traffic on Puerto Suello Hill about 8:30 a.m. after receiving many calls about 7 a.m. When the traffic stopped, the dog took off, running north, and was caught by Patrolman Harold A. Drady (left) who turned the dog over to Humane Deputy Roy Griggs (center) while Patrolman Richard J. Fenske looked on. The dog apparently was unhurt and was just frightened, patrolmen reported.

Arrests, Convictions Of Drunk Drivers Up

is presumed to be "under the influence of intoxicating liquor" and guilty of drunken driving.

Someone's size and weight influence the effects of one drink, but five drinks in an hour will push almost anyone over the limit, according to Raymond David, an alcohol analyst working in Marin's drug analysis laboratory. A glass of wine or beer has about the same effect as a shot glass of distilled liquor, he said.

For the mathematically inclined, he provided a formula: multiply the number of drinks equivalent to one ounce of 100 proof liquor by .025, then subtract .020 for each hour of drinking to determine the blood alcohol level in the system.

The formula adds up to bad news for revelers who try to sneak by. Liquored drivers are sitting ducks for highway patrolmen, who are trained to recognize their zany meanderings, but there is some safety in numbers. "There are a lot of them out there all the time," Chapman said.

He said drivers with blood alcohol levels between .13 and .25 have a "goofy, lightheaded numbing sensation" that causes all sorts of erratic driving. Officers look for cars going too slow or too fast, changing speeds rapidly, weaving across lane lines or having trouble in corners — almost anything that singles them out from normal traffic, Chapman said.

Some go 100 miles an hour and think they are going 35; others realize they are drunk and go very slowly. Chapman said he once stopped a drunken driver traveling four miles an hour on a freeway, but he added the very drunk, very bizarre motorist isn't the most serious threat.

"The guy that has a couple of belts after work is more dangerous than the guy that can't pronounce his name," Chapman said. "He is the guy you always hear saying, 'Yeah, I'm okay to drive.' "

That type is much more dangerous because he is so much more prevalent, Chapman said, but it takes practice to spot the slight driving imperfections that give away his condition.

Anyone with five or more drinks in his system loses depth perception, reaction time and his sense of speed, Chapman said. Those impairments mean when "you get an intoxicated driver in a lot of traffic, he is going to have an accident," he said.

When a officer stops a suspected drunken driver, he checks for the odor of distilled spirits, slurred speech and glassy eyes. If any symptoms are present, the driver is asked to perform balance tests. Such as walking heel to toe, leaning back with the eyes closed, and placing finger to nose.

Should the driver refuse or become belligerent, "he is going to get booked," Chapman said.

Every driver arrested also is required to submit to either a urine, breath or blood sample for analysis of alcohol in his system. If he refuses, it means automatic loss of license for six months.

At the Marin County Jail, each driver arrested is searched, fingerprinted, photographed, booked and placed in the drunk tank for at least four hours to sober up with all the other drunks.

Why do drivers risk arrest?

Chapman placed part of the blame on egos, which won't let drivers admit they have had too much to drink and on the lack of public transportation late at night.

But despite the patrol's emphasis on catching drunken drivers, Chapman said the real solution is to reach them before they get on the road and have a chance to injure or kill someone, including themselves.

SHAGGY DOG STOPPED TRAFFIC

This grey shaggy dog somehow made its way to the center divider on Highway 101 just north of the pedestrian overpass in San Rafael. California Highway patrolmen stopped traffic on Puerto Suello Hill about 8:30 a.m. after receiving many calls about 7 a.m. When the traffic stopped, the dog took off, running north, and was caught by Patrolman Harold A. Drady (left) who turned the dog over to Humane Deputy Roy Griggs (center) while Patrolman Richard J. Fenske looked on. The dog apparently was unhurt and was just frightened, patrolmen reported.

Arrests, Convictions Of Drunk Drivers Up

is presumed to be "under the influence of intoxicating liquor" and guilty of drunken driving.

Someone's size and weight influence the effects of one drink, but five drinks in an hour will push almost anyone over the limit, according to Raymond David, an alcohol analyst working in Marin's drug analysis laboratory. A glass of wine or beer has about the same effect as a shot glass of distilled liquor, he said.

For the mathematically inclined, he provided a formula: multiply the number of drinks equivalent to one ounce of 100 proof liquor by .025, then subtract .020 for each hour of drinking to determine the blood alcohol level in the system.

The formula adds up to bad news for revelers who try to sneak by. Liquored drivers are sitting ducks for highway patrolmen, who are trained to recognize their zany meanderings, but there is some safety in numbers. "There are a lot of them out there all the time," Chapman said.

He said drivers with blood alcohol levels between .13 and .25 have a "goofy, lightheaded numbing sensation" that causes all sorts of erratic driving. Officers look for cars going too slow or too fast, changing speeds rapidly, weaving across lane lines or having trouble in corners — almost anything that singles them out from normal traffic, Chapman said.

Some go 100 miles an hour and think they are going 35; others realize they are drunk and go very slowly. Chapman said he once stopped a drunken driver traveling four miles an hour on a freeway, but he added the very drunk, very bizarre motorist isn't the most serious threat.

"The guy that has a couple of belts after work is more dangerous than the guy that can't pronounce his name," Chapman said. "He is the guy you always hear saying, 'Yeah, I'm okay to drive.' "

That type is much more dangerous because he is so much more prevalent, Chapman said, but it takes practice to spot the slight driving imperfections that give away his condition.

Anyone with five or more drinks in his system loses depth perception, reaction time and his sense of speed, Chapman said. Those impairments mean when "you get an intoxicated driver in a lot of traffic, he is going to have an accident," he said.

When a officer stops a suspected drunken driver, he checks for the odor of distilled spirits, slurred speech and glassy eyes. If any symptoms are present, the driver is asked to perform balance tests. Such as walking heel to toe, leaning back with the eyes closed, and placing finger to nose.

Should the driver refuse or become belligerent, "he is going to get booked," Chapman said.

Every driver arrested also is required to submit to either a urine, breath or blood sample for analysis of alcohol in his system. If he refuses, it means automatic loss of license for six months.

At the Marin County Jail, each driver arrested is searched, fingerprinted, photographed, booked and placed in the drunk tank for at least four hours to sober up with all the other drunks.

Why do drivers risk arrest?

Chapman placed part of the blame on egos, which won't let drivers admit they have had too much to drink and on the lack of public transportation late at night.

But despite the patrol's emphasis on catching drunken drivers, Chapman said the real solution is to reach them before they get on the road and have a chance to injure or kill someone, including themselves.

(Tomorrow: How Marin courts try to stop the drunken driver from doing it again.)

Fund Drive Kicked Off At School

William R. Kimball Jr., a member of the board of trustees, has been named chairman for the drive, Future Imperative. Katharine F. Branson, first headmaster of the school, was honored at the party.

The main thrust of the drive will be to increase the school's endowment from the present $100,000 to $500,000 to ensure its future.

The drive will also seek $300,000 for a fine arts center and library building to be built on three levels at the site of the present faculty parking lot.

Another $220,000 will be sought to reduce outstanding debts of $650,000 and another $40,000 of the drive will be set aside for site development and renovation of older buildings. Plans call for centralizing all parking behind the dining hall and adding a visitors parking lot near the gymnasium.

Advanced contributions have totaled $340,000 and the goal is expected to be reached by December of 1974.

Bill Seeks Return Of Windfall

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Assemblyman William T. Bagley today introduced legislation requiring that nearly $10 million in interest profits go to property taxpayers instead of mortgage lenders.

The measures was prompted by a disclosure from mortgage lenders that their computers aren't programmed to identify the owner-occupied, singlefamily homes eligible for tax reductions in November.

Because of the computer snafus, the lending institutions will collect more money than necessary this year from about 3.6 million homeowners who allow their mortgage holders to pay their property taxes for them.

Bagley noted the lenders have said they won't be able to calculate the exact tax reduction attributable to each taxpayer until 1974.

Without his bill, Bagley said Sunday, the extra payments already programmed would mean "a windfall of close to $10 million" in interest profits for mortgage lenders from the impound accounts this year.

"To give anyone other than the taxpayer the interest-free use of the millions of dollars involved would subvert the intent of those of us who have sought property tax relief for so long," Bagley said.

The property tax relief was approved by the 1972 legislature in a $1.1 billion measure increasing the homeowner's property tax exemption from $750 to $1,750 this year.

Drug Case To Superior Court

A 25-year-old San Francisco man has been bound over to Marin Superior Court on four counts of possessing illegal drugs in Sausalito two years ago.

Ordered to appear Wednesday was Dana William Hope. Municipal Court Judge David R. Baty set the appearance after ruling there is enough evidence to try Hope.

Hope was charged with having heroin, cocaine, LSD and marijuana after Sausalito police raided a residence in 1971.

A warrant was issued July 8, 1971, when he missed a court date, but he was not found until Dec. 30.

Identical charges against 22-year-old Connie Lucille Fitzpatrick of Sausalito were dismissed last year by Baty. He ruled she had been denied a speedy trial.

Republicans Led By Luce, Haerle

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Two close political allies and former aides of Gov. Ronald Reagan have been elected to head the California Republican party.

Gordon C. Luce, 47, president of San Diego Federal Savings and Loan Association and former secretary of the state Business and Transportation Agency, was chosen by the Republican State Central Committee Saturday as its new chairman.

Luce, the former vice chairman, was unopposed. He will serve two years, spanning the 1974 gubernatorial and Senate elections.

Paul R. Haerle, 41, a San Francisco attorney and former Reagan appointments (patronage) secretary, was elected vice chairman. He will have the inside track to succeed Luce and become chairman during the 1976 presidential election.

Haerle, a resident of Strawberry, defeated Fresno attorney Truman Campbell by a lopsided 741-251 vote.

Luce and Haerle both were endorsed by Reagan.

Although they lean toward the party's conservative side, the two are regarded as good political tacticians who are more pragmatic than philosophical.

In an indirect slap at the Democrats' new state chairman, liberal Assemblyman John L. Burton of San Francisco, Luce told the GOP convention:

"The Democrats again in California have set their course for the radical left, judging from the party elections last weekend. For the second straight year, the Democrats will be controlled by the McGovern side of the party.

The convention provided a pre-primary arena for four gubernatorial contenders — Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke, former Lt. Gov. Robert H. Finch, Attorney General Evelle J. Younger and Controller Houston I. Flournoy. Reinecke got by far the warmest reception.

Gov. Ronald Reagan, who will not run for a third term, told delegates Republicans must sell their story to Democrats and independents so "they send men and women who share our dreams to the legislature, to the halls of Congress and — yes — to the courthouse and to city hall."

Reagan's press secretary, Edwin Gray, later said the governor did not intend to imply he favors politicizing local government through partisan elections and was referring to "philosophy not politics."

Delegates adopted a resolution urging the legislature to change the law so the party's national committeemen and women can be selected by the state central committee. Now they are chosen every four years by the state's delegation to the national convention.

The convention also adopted a resolution urging Reagan to veto any reapportionment bills which do not give the GOP a "fair and proper share" of legislative seats. Republican lawmakers are attempting to negotiate a redistricting compromise with Democrats and support it by overriding a Reagan veto if necessary.

Other officers elected were women's vice chairmen Laura Edwards, Lafayette, Elsie Buchneau, Madera, and Margaret Scott, Santa Monica; secretary Tirso Del Junco, Pasadena; assistant secretaries Bruce Hasenkamp, Menlo Park, and Cathy Swajian, Indio; treasurer Russell Collier, Menlo Park: assistant treasurer Verna Mattox, Torrance.

Members Vote To Continue Church Policy

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI) — Members of Jackson's First Baptist Church, the largest in the state, voted overwhelmingly Sunday "to contiue its policy of admitting to its services all who come to worship, but to deny admittance to demonstrators and publicity-seekers."

"This action was taken to clear up misunderstandings about church policy which have been in evidence recently," a church spokesman said.

Two groups, including blacks, said they were "physically blocked" from entering the church in downtown Jackson a week earlier by a church "greeting committee."

New Death Penalty Move Eyed

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Gov. Ronald Reagan may sponsor another ballot initiative to restore capital punishment if the legislature refuses to implement a measure approved last November by voters.

He disclosed this Saturday in an address to the Republican state convention.

Californians overwhelmingly endorsed a ballot measure in November to reopen the gas chamber, but left it up to the legislature to decide which crimes would be punishable by death.

The legislature is dominated by Democrats, and their leaders — including Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti—have predicted no implementing bills will be passed at the 1973-74 session.

"They said it is their duty when the people have made a mistake to make their own decisions for the people," Reagan told convention delegates. "We Republicans believe the people made a decision to put capital punishment back on the books and we are going to do our best to see it is done."

Then Reagan departed from his prepared text to add: "If not at the legislative level, we might as well let the people make another 'mistake.'"

Delegates loudly applauded.

Reagan's press secretary, Edwin Gray, elaborated later that the governor has been discussing with close aides the idea of sponsoring an initiative drive to place a measure on the 1974 ballot specifying the death penalty crimes.

Reagan Approves $1.8 Million Rural Legal Assistance Grant

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Gov. Ronald Reagan, once highly critical of the California Rural Legal Assistance program, quietly has approved a new $1.8 million federal grant to keep CRLA alive for another year.

His decision was conveyed to the federal government in a Nov. 28, 1972, letter written by Edwin Meese III, the governor's executive secretary. The letter was not released to the public.

The Reagan administration two years ago accused CRLA of inciting campus unrest, fomenting prison violence and failing to serve the legal needs of the poor.

Asked why Reagan changed his attitude toward the legal services organization, Meese told a San Francisco Examiner reporter: "Because our evaluation has shown they had complied with the conditions sufficiently for refunding.

"There has been an improvement in their performance and complaints have fallen off to near zero. I think they understood we meant business when we said begin acting like a professional legal organization or get out of business."

However, another administration official said the CRLA is doing nearly the same work it always has, but the organization has simply "changed style," indicating it is less flamboyant.

The governor once vetoed a CRLA grant and ordered a study of the organization. Federal antipoverty officials subsequently overrode his veto and a blue-ribbon panel of jurists investigating the feud chided Reagan for "unfairly and irresponsibly" attacking CRLA.

While the CRLA has received another year's funding, the Reagan administration reportedly has been drafting its own new proposals for providing legal assistance to the poor, mostly in urban areas.

Still Explosion Kills Operator

SPRINGFIELD, Tenn. (UPI) — convicted moonshiner Charles McGarnett, due to begin a one year prison term today, died Sunday when an illegal still exploded.

"He died making moonshine," said Robertson County sheriff's deputy Joe Robertson.

The 37-year-old Middle Tennessee resident was killed when a butane gas tank used to operate a "pretty big" still exploded, the deputy said, destroying the barn in which the still was housed.

McGarnett was to begin a prison sentence for making untaxed whisky, Robertson said.

SOME CAR BUYERS refuse to be carried away by flamboyant styling. Fine machinery and functional efficiency rank first in their demands.

These buyers will find a perfect match in the new Mercedes-Benz 280C Coupe. Here is a pillarless five-seater that makes its case on engineering depth instead of surface glitter.

The 280C weighs one and a half tons, carries five adults and costs $9,614.* Its first impression is one of understated elegance; but only as your experience deepens over the miles and the months will its mechanical virtues unfold.

A painless model change

Technically speaking, the 280C is a new model for 1973. Engineering changes from the preceding 250C include a new double-overhead-cam 2.8-litre engine, wider wheel rims, and radial ply tires.

But aside from a nameplate that now reads 280C instead of 250C, exterior changes were shunned. A handsome car remains a handsome car. Current Mercedes-Benz Coupe owners do not feel suddenly betrayed.

The painless model change. Some day it may be universal.

The engineers prevail—again

You can detect the fine hand of engineering logic even in the 280C's graceful roof line.

This hardtop roof is so carefully shaped that it neither cramps rear-seat headroom nor blocks the driver's rearward vision.

That roof is fused to a body built to rival Mercedes-Benz sedans for structural strength. Body panels are welded to a platform chassis rather than bolted to a frame. If you caught a raw Coupe body before painting began, you would count more than 6,000 individual welding points.

Separate subframes carry the engine and suspension. Rubber "biscuits" are strategically placed to help cushion the chassis against flexing motions of the engine and drive train.

Startling measurements

The 280C is lighter by more than 1000 lbs., shorter by as much as 3 feet than its major domestic coupe rivals. Yet observe that the 280C's 19.8 cubic feet of trunk space exceed them all, that important interior dimensions virtually match them all.

Note too that the 280C turns in a circle of only 36.4 feet, slightly tighter than a VW 1200 "Beetle." Those larger cars do not.

A trimmer car can use a trimmer engine size; the engineers capitalized on the 280's lighter weight by fitting it with a beautifully smooth new double-overhead-camshaft engine—an engine that revs up to 6500 rpm, feels unstrained at 80 mph, but displaces only 2.8 litres in cylinder capacity. Size of engines used by the 280's major price competitors: 7 litres and over.

Here is another technical fact to ponder. None of the 280C's heavyweight competitors, 7-litre engines and all, sees fit to offer—even as an extra-cost option—what this Coupe provides as standard equipment: four-wheel, caliper-type disc brakes.

280C roof line stresses function, not fashion

Power-assisted steering comes as standard too. It is remarkable for the precise steering feel it transmits; manual effort is reduced but sensitivity is not sacrificed. This is one power steering system designed to keep you in touch with the road.

That padded lever on the console is the shifter for a 4-speed automatic transmission, also standard. If you prefer shifting for yourself you can snap through the gears manually.

Fully independent suspension

If riding smoothness and softness were the only goals, Mercedes-Benz engineers would have likely given the 280C the same kind of suspension as its domestic "luxury" rivals: independent at front, solid one-piece axle at the rear.

But adroit handling was also the goal—and stability on rough roads.

So the engineers suspended each of the 280C's four wheels on its own separate axle: fully independent suspension, in simple terms. The same suspension principle used on 200-mph racing cars.

You won't feel the benefits of independent suspension in the showroom. But try a winding, potholed road.

Understated comfort

You ride in seats padded not only with foam rubber but also natural fibers, laid over a network of hand-tied coil springs.

The steering-wheel hub, doors, armrests, even the ashtrays in the rear are padded. Precise fitting of windows and doors is intended to help minimize those shrieks and whistles of the wind at highway speeds.

Seal the windows closed and flick on the built-in air conditioner: you will feel sealed off from the turmoil of the outside world as your 280C sweeps along.

Step outside and check some of the 280C's thoughtfully practical details. Those wraparound chrome bumpers are protected by thick wraparound rubber bumpers. A rubber-lined rail runs along the body sides. The chrome roof strips are more than ornaments: the engineers put them there as ski-rack anchors.

Interest Lacking In School Election

San Rafael is assured a lively election campaign for city council, with interest added by a string of seven charter amendments which will be on the ballot. Where the council candidates stand on some of these will help define campaign issues.

However, the election of two members of the board of education appears to be almost forgotten

AT THIS WRITING, five candidates have announced and/or filed for the two city council openings: incumbent Lawrence Mulryan, Carl J. Brown, Richard C. Fox, Jack G. Nixon, and Thomas R. O'Toole. But only a single candidate has filed for board of education: incumbent Paul K. McMullen, now serving by appointment to fill out the term of Paul L. Jones, who moved out of Marin.

Besides McMullen's term, that of Lawrence I. Kramer Jr., senior member of the board of education, is expiring. Kramer wants to terminate his long service on the San Rafael board and, prior to that, on the Dixie School District board. He has said he will not seek another term. However, if no one else appears interested, it is possible he might change his mind.

FILING DEADLINE for city election candidates is Thursday. Those considering running for the San Rafael Board of Education should not confuse this with other school board elections in Marin, for which filing continues until Feb. 16. The San Rafael board is elected under city charter provisions, being a part of the city government.

Two — possibly three — persons besides McMullen are reported considering the board of education race. We would hope there would be at least four candidates for the two vacancies to give voters adequate choice.

Lack of interest in the board of education election is a little hard to understand in light of widespread discussion of the public school system and often-heard complaints about some of the directions taken by our city schools.

It is also a little surprising that there seems no rush for representation from the Terra Linda area, recently annexed to the city and already part of the high school district before that. Although our illogical school districting puts these people in the Dixie Elementary School District, they are eligible for the city board of education and have a direct interest because it controls Terra Linda High School. Purely on the basis of geographical representation, we would expect some candidates from that area, which has been represented by Kramer.

BOARD OF EDUCATION service is a thankless job; and it is a hard, time-consuming job if done as it should be. It pays nothing — not even the $100 a month which city councilmen collect. But there is no more important job in local government.

The quality of schools is, in the long run, determined by the quality of members on their governing boards. We need the best to run the schools in San Rafael.

We hope the filing deadline on Thursday will not find a no-contest situation for these very important positions.

Raccoons' Many Voices

Those who are only mildly acquainted with Marin's raccoons probably don't realize how many different sounds they make. They hiss like a cat, growl like a dog, whine like a puppy, scream like a wildcat, emit a long tremulo like a screech owl, as well as making an assortment of raccoon noises.

That's no menagerie in our yard. It's just a couple of raccoons.

WHICH END IS HORSE?

Bridge District Giving Sausalito The Brush-Off

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

Sausalito and the Golden Gate Bridge District have contrary versions of which end is the cart and which the horse when they dicker about a ferry terminal.

The city insists that a detailed environmental impact study be made before it decides what to do about the district's long-stalled plan for a permanent downtown terminal. The district insists that the city council agree to the terminal before the study is made.

It has been almost three months since the city spelled out the 11 conditions (politely called "discussion points") it wanted met before acting on the district's plan. Although the district claimed then that the issue had to be settled immediately so construction plans could proceed by December, the district never has had a public discussion of the city's conditions.

THE DISTRICT'S first response did not come until Jan. 23. It came from board president Stephan C. Leonoudakis, who must have guessed what position the board wanted to take on the city's conditions.

His letter ignored 10 of the points, instead calling upon the council for "an expression of your general concurrence in the relocation of the Sausalito Yacht Club and ferry Berkeley, as well as the general location of the improved ferry terminal at the site indicated on the (district's) master plan.

"Upon receiving this concurrence," he concluded, "we will then be in a position to proceed to the next stage of the planning process."

He graciously was silent on the new law the district slipped through the Legislature empowering it to ignore the city and simply go ahead and put the terminal wherever it wants. From the city's view, this would be the result if it gave in before the study was even made.

The city council will tackle the letter when it meets at 8 p.m. tomorrow in City Hall.

The spiciest item this month was that state prison authorities "have proposed the use of electronic sensors for the continuous surveillance of parolees." It seems that a transducer would be placed under each parolee's skin "ready to sound off the alarm to a master computer if the parolee steps out of the geodesic limits set by the authorities."

Comments by a spokesman for the Department of Corrections were unflattering, but closed with the observation that the scheme was not expected "before the year 2000, according to our long-range plan."

The same issue of Voice, which arrived on Jan. 26 — three days after peace broke out — carried "Thoughts on the War" by Barbara Boxer. She declared that "Congress is the only hope" to end the war.

THE HORSEFEATHERS for Humility Award goes to Sen. Lawrence E. Walsh, D-Commerce, for celebrating his appointment as chairman of the Senate Transportation Committee with a press release declaring the great happening meant that "development and establishment of a balanced transportation system in California today took a giant step ahead."

"Nixon sent me."

"Gee, Fang, I feel so much more secure with you along!"

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

After-Dinner Dialogue Concerning Disaster

These two Buchwaldian types are seen after supper. Daughter, making like an adult, is looking at the newspaper; father is busy at his desk. Their dialogue:

"Daddy, what does 'disastrous' mean?"

"It means expensive, dear. You can see in the pictures."

"Daddy, it says crews were rushed to the scene. What does that mean?"

"Overtime, dear."

"Daddy, why does the government let people live in those places?"

"Does it? I don't know why."

"Will the government take care of those people?"

"I guess so."

"Does the government take care of us, daddy?"

"Look, Virginia! Go help your mother, I have to work on these tax forms."

Note: To conserve irony, this can be filed and recycled after earthquake, brush fire, tsunami, etc.

Bayside Acres Fire Shows Tax Inequity

Your picture story in the Jan. 9 issue showing San Rafael firemen fighting a blaze in Bayside Acres exemplifies the fine spirit of co-operation existing between the San Rafael and Marin County Fire Departments. Unfortunately, it again brings to light one excessive tax inequity imposed upon the residents of San Rafael by Marin County government.

The unincorporated areas surrounding San Rafael, including Bayside Acres, Country Club, Los Ranchitos, Rafael Meadows, and all of Santa Venetia are protected by the Marin County Fire Department. This protection consists primarily of one, one-man fire truck operating out of a gas station in Santa Venetia. San Rafael, on the other hand, has 85 firemen manning six fully equipped stations. It can be seen that while the unincorporated areas seem to have poor protection the city gives excellent protection. To rectify this situation the county has a policy of calling for "mutual aid" from San Rafael immediately upon receipt of a building fire in these areas. "Mutual aid" is a contract plan instituted by the various fire departments to assist one another at emergencies beyond their means of ability to control; it was never intended to provide "first in service".

In the recent Bayside Acres fire "mutual aid" was immediately requested bringing two San Rafael engine companies and a battalion chief to the scene some 10 minutes before the first M.C.F.D. unit. . .

While it may be neighborly and kind for San Rafael to give this service, it is beyond my means of comprehension why the people of Terra Linda, Bret Harte and Sun Valley should provide free first class fire protection to Bayside Acres, Country Club, etc. If they should desire adequate fire coverage they should pay for it either by contracting with the city or incorporating into same.

Attacks On Postal Service Unwarranted

I am tired of your attacks on the United States Postal Service. I feel that you are against the USPS because you are "sour grapes" about the service you received during your strike . . .

Why shouldn't the whole U.S. Postal Service rate a set of stamps? After all, it's not a one-man operation. There are thousands of people involved. Granted some are more dedicated than others; I resent your implication that postal employees are second grade people. I think you should print a public apology.

Why don't you research your editorials better instead of insulting people? The last 10-stamp set was issued on July 4, 1968 (historic flags) and not during World War II as you claim.

I believe that the USPS is not any worse than your editorials. Sometimes, like today, your editorials are shabby, to say the least. Someday when you are able to produce a 100 per cent interesting and factual newspaper, then maybe the U.S. Postal Service will be 100 per cent effective.

EVA-MARIA O'DOUL

San Rafael.

(Postal employees certainly are not second-rate people. Neither are employees of other government agencies, nor those of thousands of private enterprises. A 10-stamp set for each class of employees, perhaps? — Editor.)

Nixon Economic Policies — Before And After

One aspect of Nixon's domestic economic policy is now clear. Before the elections, raise Social Security benefits 20 per cent. After the elections, cut veteran pensions 50 per cent. In fact, many veteran pensions are being eliminated completely. The joker in the national poker deck that makes this legal is the so-called "permissable income level" which is now approximately $3,700 per year. There is now a bill before the Congress that would permit the "permissable" income to be raised to approximately $4,400. (In face of today's cost realities it should be at least $4,200.)

To prevent hardship in thousands of good, patriotic families, I urge everyone — not only veterans and their families but everyone to write their congressman (a postcard will do) to increase the present inadequate "permissable income level."

The answer to "What Price Glory"? It ain't low.

"It's time we redecorated around here, Edgar. Would you mind getting rid of your sideburns?"

THE NEEDLE

By HAROLD COFFIN

Workers don't enjoy working. The only surprising thing about this conclusion is that a bunch of researchers at the Upjohn Institute had to work all year to arrive at it.

The recommended solution is a "redesign of work." Presumably, to make workers happy by taking the labor out of working.

The way it is now, the only guys who enjoy work are those who are assigned to watch others do it. Trouble is, there aren't enough of those research jobs to go around.

Hard work is what made this country great. But that was back in the old days when folks didn't know they were supposed to enjoy working.

ERNEST B. FURGURSON

Shooting Of Senator Stennis; What Prominent Victim Next?

WASHINGTON — John Stennis, perhaps the most respected man in the U.S. Senate, lies in "very serious" condition at Walter Reed Army Hospital. He may die by the time this is printed, in which case the country will have lost a solid rock from the foundation of integrity and decency that holds it up.

Immediately after Stennis was robbed and shot by bandits in front of his house on a quiet street in northwest Washington, his Senate colleagues and other politicians began calling his wife, visiting the hospital and telling the newspapers what a commendable career he has led. It was not till late the next morning at the White House that the first thing to cross my mind after the shooting was laid out in public. That was when a reporter asked Mr. Nixon whether his latest cutting down of a national figure moved him to any further action on gun control laws.

WHAT HE SAID was of little solace to Mrs. Stennis, or to the survivors of any of the other gun victims in the nation's future. He already had praised the senator appropriately, and described the shooting as "senseless. . .one of those things that happens in large cities today, fortunately not happening as much as it did previously" (this squeezing out two cents' worth of credit for the cutback in urban crime claimed by administration statisticians).

As for gun control, he made it clear that it is primarily Congress's problem, not hung up by lack of White House leadership. Then, as a substitute for such leadership, he engaged in some of the most illogical bush-circling you ever heard — except in Congress where the same evasive action is taken even more lengthily every time the subject arises.

r. Nixon noted that Stennis apparently was wounded by a cheap .22, a "Saturday night special," and "obviously if they had had a .45 he'd be dead." On its face, that sounds as if a cheap handgun is bad enough, and a more deadly, heavier, more expensive handgun is worse. However. . .

Once again, he endorsed a ban on sales of the cheap pistol but not on more deadly weapons. What we need, he said, is a "precise definition that will keep the guns out of the hands of criminals and not one that will impinge on the rights of others to have them for their own purposes in a legitimate way." Having said as much, he quickly shot down his own halfhearted argument by recalling that it was not a "Saturday night special" that felled George Wallace last spring.

IT IS NO SURPRISE that Mr. Nixon under question gives two minutes of double talk that might as well be the chant of a tobacco auctioneer, as a means of moving on to the next question. Up at the capitol, where they have a chance to reflect long and hard on these matters, you might expect roll call votes to disclose more organized thinking. And they do — but it is the thinking of that highly organized lobby, the National Rifle Association.

In gist, Mr. Nixon said he would leave the matter in the capable hands of Sen. Roman Hruska, R-Neb., who carried the banner of the gun lobby gallantly through the gun control debate last August. Hruska led the fight and voted against every amendment that would have strengthened the bill banning "Saturday night special" sales, which passed the Senate and died in the House. Consistently voting with him were a whole string of senators who praised their fallen colleague this week, and in fact a lopsided majority of the entire Senate — including John Stennis himself.

Perhaps, one lady here said dreamily, now that it has happened to one of their own, the people at the capitol will get serious about gun control. It would be encouraging to think that after the deaths of John and Robert Kennedy and Martin Luther King and other anonymous thousands, the wounding of George Wallace and now Stennis would have that effect.

But what is more likely is that the Congress will find out that the senator was shot by a .22 Smith and Wesson blue-steel plastic-grip five-shooter Serial No. 2218222266, or something similar, and bravely pass a bill to ban all pistols of that precise description. Then we will wait, not very long, to find out who the next prominent victim is to be.

ROSCOE DRUMMOND

Kissinger Not Out Of Job; He Acquires Four New Ones

Henry Kissinger's unanswered question — At the end of his 90-minute briefing on the Vietnam settlement, after White House Press Sec. Ronald Ziegler had said the time had come to end questioning, a reporter posed one more. "Have you," he asked, "worked yourself out of a job?"

Kissinger ignored it.

The answer is no. Kissinger has no intention of resigning and the President has no intention of letting him resign.

KISSINGER'S FOUR new jobs. He is going to have plenty to do. His four preoccupations stem from events already in the making. He will be stimulating and co-ordinating U.S. policy in these areas:

1 — The new SALT II talks to cut back the Soviet-American arms race in offensive nuclear weapons.

2 — The NATO-Warsaw Pact negotiations on mutual and balanced force cuts in Central Europe.

3 — New efforts to further an all-European detente — Eastern and Western European countries, Scandinavia, Russia, the United States and Canada.

4 — Further initiatives to build on the improved relations with China and the Soviet Union.

The successful Vietnam negotiations wiped out any passing disagreements and annoyances which may have developed between Mr. Nixon and Dr. Kissinger.

WHAT IS WEAKEST link in Vietnam peace? From Saigon's standpoint it is the continued presence of North Vietnamese troops in those areas in the south controlled by the Viet Cong. This was a concession which both the United States and South Vietnam had to make in return for numerous concessions made by Hanoi.

These forces will help the Viet Cong protect their territory and have a potential to resume an offensive. But there will be attrition because the agreement does not permit them to be replaced or augmented. There are at least 145,000 North Vietnamese soldiers in the south and President Thieu has one million men under arms.

WHAT IS HANOI'S biggest concession? The North Vietnamese gave up the core of their previous negotiating demands — that the Communists be given a prime role in a South Vietnamese coalition government. The Viet Cong have a veto over holding free elections, but if they keep putting off the elections they simply keep Thieu in power.

THE WATERGATE and the Ellsberg trials. They appear to have something in common. Defense counsel for the Watergate defendants developed the theory that because the defendants thought the public good was being overridingly served by their actions, then their attempting to steal Democratic Party secrets was legally justifiable.

The defense in the Ellsberg-Russo trial is developing a similar thesis — that because the defendants thought publishing the Pentagon Papers was so morally desirable, releasing classified secrets was legally justifiable.

SCIENCE LOSES Nixon ear but gains congress'. The President's decision to save some salaries by cutting out his science adviser will turn the science community to Congress. Congress now has its own office of technology assessment and hopes U.S. scientists who feel neglected by the White House will turn to the capitol.

CONGRESSIONAL REFORM needs 'Hoover Commission.' That's the view of Hubert Humphrey and several other senior senators. They hold that outside study and advocacy provided by two Hoover Commissions under Presidents Truman and Eisenhower made possible major reorganizations of the executive branch. They believe the same is needed if the House and Senate are to push through needed congressional reorganization.

WORTH SAYING AGAIN

The automobile has not merely taken over the street; it has dissolved the living tissue of the city. Its appetite for space is absolutely insatiable; moving and parked, it devours urban land, leaving the buildings as mere islands of habitable space in a sea of dangerous and ugly traffic. — James Marston Fitch.

Devotion Of Staff Relieves Pain That Fills Burns Center

"Those who treat burns will be rewarded in heaven."

The first sentence is lettered on a sign which hangs over the nurses' station at the burn treatment center at St. Francis Memorial Hospital in San Francisco.

The other words were the thoughts of a patient, whose serious burns on his face, hands and legs had healed, and who was going home after several weeks in the burn center.

IT'S A PLACE that most Northern Californians fortunately will never see — a sterile little enclosed world of suffering on the fifth floor of the big new high-rise hospital building.

Firemen from all over the Bay Area know about it, though, and many departments contribute toward new equipment for the center.

Then there is a corps of former patients and their families — even relatives of people who died in the center — who have supported it, according to Dr. Vincent Pennisi of Mill Valley, the center's chief surgeon.

When the center was founded about five years ago, Dr. Pennisi said, the hospital staff expected that nurses assigned to the burn unit would not be able to take that duty for more than a few months.

The problems were described to me by another nurse, one who works at Marin General Hospital.

"We hate to see burn patients come in," she said; "they hurt so badly."

But the constant care given these hurting people — many of whom are badly maimed — is considered a challenge at the St. Francis burn center.

"When we first offered the nurses (in the burn unit) a chance to transfer to another department in the hospital after a few months, they flatly turned down the offer," Dr. Pennisi said.

"I've never seen such devoted nursing anywhere else," he added.

SPECIALLY TRAINED to treat burns, the staff includes registered nurses, licensed vocational nurses and aides, as in the usual hospital setup. However, at the burn center, one can't tell which is which. Not only are their pins and name badges (if they wear them) covered by identical gowns, they all seem to work equally hard.

Phrases like, "I'll get an aide to clean that up," are not part of the vocabulary of the registered nurses who work in the unit.

Along with the high level of care, constantly given to people who are mainly suffering a great deal of pain and for whom dressing changes are a many-times-a-day ordeal, the burn center staff manages to maintain a high level of good spirits and even, at times, humor.

Light-hearted kidding and sometimes a mild pillow fight can't help but make the days brighter for the patients.

It's comforting to the families of patients, too, that the burn center is in contact with the less than half a dozen other such units of this caliber in the country, and a constant exchange of new methods takes place.

Most Marin residents will never need the burn center — but it's there for those unfortunates and their relatives who do.

For those of us, like my 16-year-old son David, who's going to spend several weeks there, the burn center undoubtedly will be remembered as a place where he received the best of care when he needed it the most.

Skater's Insular View Of Skiers; One Kind Will Pass Muster

There are Montagues and Capulets.

There are Hatfields and Coys.

There are skaters and skiers.

This column will be a doubtless unavailing attempt by a Montague-Hatfield-skater to play half-fair with Capulet-Coy-skiers, which — to the put whole problem one way — is like asking a Siamese cat-owner to write a love poem about the German shepherd next door.

After all, consider the temperament of the skater. A lonely, suspicious character at best, with something of the cold edginess of his blades. If he happens to be a hockey player, he is given to antisocial tantrums of bumping, shoving, and hacking. If he happens to be a figure skater, he heads for a secluded corner to practice that navel-watching exercise on ice: the figure 8. If he is a speed skater, he locks his hands behind his back and bends over broodingly, as if staring at his frozen reflection — the ultimate Hamlet.

WHAT IS THIS HERMIT this ice-man (in every sense of the word) to make of the skier: that jolly, gregarious snowman?

To the skater, the skier seems not so much an athlete as the Last of the Big Spenders. He may pay more for just his aluminum poles — say, $40 — than the skater pays for his skates. Then there are those $90 foam-insulated boots, to say nothing of $250 Fiberglass skis.

Not to mention the haute-couture parkas. For every skier that competes on the slopes, there is one that competes on the wardrobe rack. A 10-best-dressed list of skiers would line up candidates like a ski lift on Saturday morning.

Which brings a skater to another amazed question: What sort of big outdoors sport is it that ends up as a sort of rural traffic jam?

TO THE RECLUSIVE skater, the skier is a man who has invented a new excuse to travel. Didn't Archer Winsten give the show away? "No matter how good the skiing close at hand," he wrote in the New York Post, "skiers have a well-developed yearning for faraway places and strong convictions that the snow is deeper and lighter elsewhere."

The snow is whiter in somebody else's backyard. All right. But once he has arrived at this illusionary "there," the skier, as often as not, leans his skis against the lodge and heads for the lounge.

Even if the skier is not a roamer, a dude, a partygoer — if, in fact, his primary purpose is to ski — it doesn't matter. Your blue-nose skater will still frown upon him. What kind of non-puritan sport is this where life is all downhill?

A skater works for his motion, by George. Skiing may not be quite so passive a "sport" as snowmobiling, but it is still, in a skater's skeptical eyes, a "speed kick."

ALL THIS IS CLEARLY a view lacking in sympathy — patently unfair.

But now comes the fair part. The scene is neither slopes nor skating pond but a sort of neutral territory. Meadows. Pastures. Woods.

Onto this scene glides a novel kind of skier. He schusses us no schusses. He skis pretty much as a skater skates — stride by stride, paying his way as he goes.

The fancy jackets are spurned. Old sweaters and denims will do. As well as bamboo poles, soft boots, and narrow, light skis with curly tips — all of which may cost less than $100.

In 1969, there were 50,000 pairs of cross-country skis imported to the United States; by 1972, the annual figure had risen to an estimated 200,000.

These skiers with a new taste for privacy — these skiers who behave almost like skaters — seem to be returning to the ancient origins of their sport. What Fadl Allah Rashid ed-Din wrote of Mongolian skiers in 1307 still applies to the latter-day tourers: "They fasten boards of wood to their feet with straps" and traverse "the steppes and level country, up hill and down dale, as if they were riding on elks or other animals." They "take a staff in their hand and press this staff against the earth, so that they glide on the upper surface of the snow, as one goes in a canoe on water."

Or even a skate on ice.

Millions For Road To Nowhere

BOSTON (UPI) — The $125 million "road to nowhere" opened to limited traffic today, becoming a $40 million-a-mile road to somewhere— sometimes.

There will be no gala ribbon-cutting ceremonies to inaugurate the three-mile stretch connecting Boston to Interstate 93, which runs to the New Hampshire border.

Gov. Francis W. Sargent, the man who did much win legislative approval for the highway, won't even be there to watch the first vehicles trickle along the fourlane, doubledeck causeway.

"You've got to be kidding," a spokesman said. "There will be no ceremonies and I think you understand why."

The highway has become an embarrassing political liability and nowhere on Beacon Hill is there anyone who wants to be associated with building it.

When the three-mile connecting link between the Central Artery in Boston and Somerville was nearly completed the state spent $90,000 to find how it could be used.

What it discovered was that it could hardly be used at all.

Cars attempting to get onto the connector from the Tobin Bridge interchange—one of the worst bottlenecks in the city—will be rerouted along city streets, then onto the connector by another ramp.

Inbound use of the highway probably will not be allowed until late in the spring, and then use will be limited to buses, emergency vehicles and maybe trucks, a state official said.

Officials stated that to fully open the inbound lanes would be to invite carnage due to heavy crowding and would have the effect of paralyzing traffic at the two-lane junction on the Central Artery.

It has taken 11 years to construct the three-mile section, which so far has seen extensive use only as a playground for Charlestown street-hockey players.

Guard Convicted In Attack Case

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A hospital security guard was convicted of the attempted rape of a woman who ran to him for help after two men tried to attack her outside the hospital.

A Superior Court jury Saturday found Harvey L. Pleasant, 36, guilty but acquitted Robert C. Smith, 40, his partner.

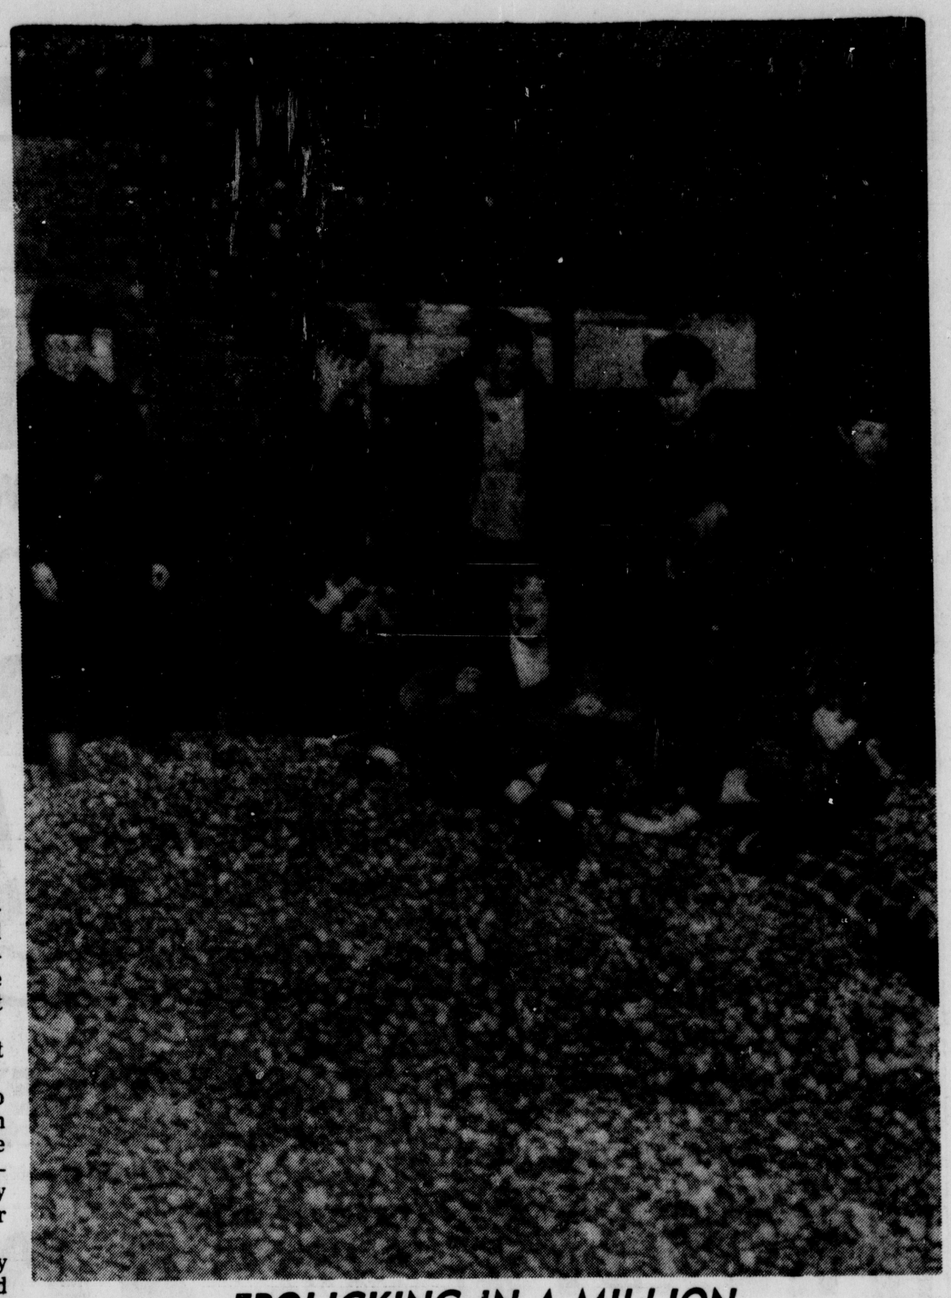
The victim, a 27-year-old Piedmont mother of two, told the court she was attacked by two officers after she sought their aid.

Both Pleasant and Smith were convicted of failing to make an arrest.

State Test Results Will Be Presented

The Larkspur School District board will hear a report on state test results for first, second third and sixth graders at its meeting at 8 p.m. Thursday in the district office.

Trustees also will work out procedures for hiring a new principal for Neil Cummins School and set dates and select a principal for summer school.



FROLICKING IN A MILLION

Third graders at the Michigan School for the Blind at Lansing, frolick among bottle caps. A year ago they set out to find what a million of something is like. Today, after a year of collecting, they found out, and learned that their one million bottle caps would make a line 17 miles long. Their teacher, Mrs. Jackie Taylor, said she found it difficult to describe what a million bottle caps look like, but she said "they smell like a very large brewery."

Houston's Smog Problem Laid To Pine Trees, Automobiles

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — A lobbyist for the Texas Chemical Council says he has the answer to what is causing that brownish smog over Houston: pine trees and automobiles.

"There's been a brown haze over downtown Houston for years and at least 30 per cent of that comes from plant turpentines from the pine forests around the city and much more from automobile exhausts," R.M. Love told the Texas Air Control Board Saturday.

The staff of the TACB had earlier indicated that much of the smog was caused by industrial plants and vapors emitted from ships and barges in the Houston Shop Channel. the staff had recommended stricter rules for the chemical industry, based on a study of ozone concentrations in the Houston area last spring and summer.

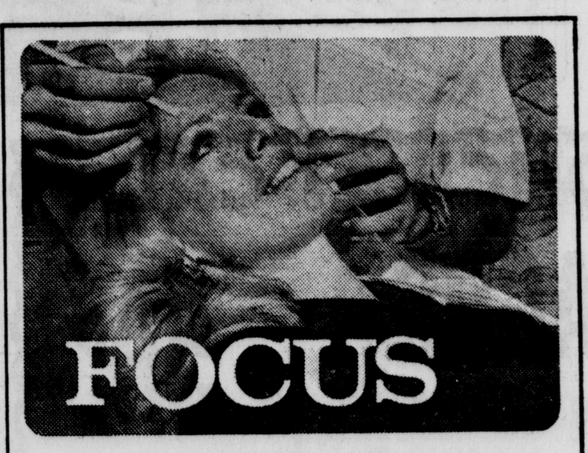
Love said the staff was just misinformed, like the public.

"A lot of confusion has led the public to believe the air is twice as bad, because the ozone is twice as bad," he said. "But that does not reflect the deterioration of air quality. The actual level of oxygen has not changed in the Houston area in the last 10 to 15 years.

He said the industry preferred emission controls allowing 40 pounds emission per day per source.

The regulations as recommended by the TACB staff would call for the installation by Dec. 31, 1974, of high temperature incinerators to burn wastes and installation of closed ventillation systems on all ships and barges using Texas waterways by Dec. 31, 1973.

Other rules would stipulate that all oil companies market a non-lead gasoline by July 1, 1974, and prohibit removal of emission control devices from autos.



Teeth Topics

This is National Children's Dental Health Week. Human teeth not only aid in the digestion process, but are important in speech, and help to determine the shape of the face. Man is one of the few creatures who can survive once he has lost his natural teeth, but modern dentistry and good hygiene now can enable a person to keep his natural teeth for life. Teeth are shaped according to the service they must perform. Some animals use their teeth for defense, while others are aided by teeth in locomotion, or in cutting down materials for their shelters.

Auto Union Funds Slim For A Strike

DETROIT (UPI) — A strike in the automobile industry this fall could leave United Auto Workers members marching on picket lines with no money coming in to pay their bills.

The union will have a strike fund approaching $50 million by the time contracts with the "Big Three" auto companies expire in mid-September — enough to pay hospitalization, medical and life insurance but not enough to provide strike benefits.

But UAW President Leonard Woodcock warns the small strike fund does not preclude a walkout —if necessary—against any of the auto companies, including General Motors, which was struck for 67 days in 1970 at a cost of more than $160 million to the union.

"The fact the strike fund is down shouldn't create any illusion in the minds of the companies that we're going to settle for settling's sake to avoid a strike," the union president said in a weekend interview with UPI.

Should there be a strike, union members in many states would qualify for food stamps, welfare benefits and unemployment compensation.

The 329,000 GM workers on strike in 1970 got $30 million in governmental assistance, one study showed.

Several businesses and business organizations, along with the Nixon administraion, hope to stop the practice. Dow Chemical Co. and the U. S. Chamber of Commerce are challenging the benefits in a court suit.

The U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare proposes to end food stamps to striking workers, a move Woodcock said "we're hoping to head off."

"We have a welfare system to take care of people in need," he said. "If you try to lay down a rule that when you're on a perfectly legal strike you have to be a scab to keep your family alive, that's introducing an element we've never had, even in the worst confrontation situation."

Woodcock said he could not be specific on what wage demands the union will make of GM, Ford and Chrysler when contract talks begin in mid-july to replace three-year contracts that expire at 11:59 p.m. Sept. 14. Demands will be determined in a series of conventions beginning this week and concluding in late March in Detroit, he said.

Wages may take a back seat to fringe benefits like a fully paid dental plan, "30-and-out" retirement with no age limitations, problems of safety and health in the plants and an end to compulsory overtime.

Woodcock said the fully paid dental program has to be a must item in a settlement since it was dropped in 1970 in favor of additional wages. Since that time, the UAW gained it in contracts with international harvester and Woodcock said the "Big Three" must "understand that one has to be there."

He also said there has been a strong reaction by plant workers against compulsory overtime, a fact of life in many fabricating and assembly plants as the automakers attempt to meet record demand for new cars.

"It's not so much they object to the overtime. It continues on and on," he said. "They are really resentful about being told, 'you have to and you have no choice.'"

SERVING ALL OF MARIN COUNTY

TODAY'S EDITORIAL

Interest Lacking In School Election

San Rafael is assured a lively election campaign for city council, with interest added by a string of seven charter amendments which will be on the ballot. Where the council candidates stand on some of these will help define campaign issues.

However, the election of two members of the board of education appears to be almost forgotten

AT THIS WRITING, five candidates have announced and/or filed for the two city council openings: incumbent Lawrence Mulryan, Carl J. Brown, Richard C. Fox, Jack G. Nixon, and Thomas R. O'Toole. But only a single candidate has filed for board of education: incumbent Paul K. McMullen, now serving by appointment to fill out the term of Paul L. Jones, who moved out of Marin.

Besides McMullen's term, that of Lawrence I. Kramer Jr., senior member of the board of education, is expiring. Kramer wants to terminate his long service on the San Rafael board and, prior to that, on the Dixie School District board. He has said he will not seek another term. However, if no one else appears interested, it is possible he might change his mind.

FILING DEADLINE for city election candidates is Thursday. Those considering running for the San Rafael Board of Education should not confuse this with other school board elections in Marin, for which filing continues until Feb. 16. The San Rafael board is elected under city charter provisions, being a part of the city government.

Two — possibly three — persons besides McMullen are reported considering the board of education race. We would hope there would be at least four candidates for the two vacancies to give voters adequate choice.

Lack of interest in the board of education election is a little hard to understand in light of widespread discussion of the public school system and often-heard complaints about some of the directions taken by our city schools.

It is also a little surprising that there seems no rush for representation from the Terra Linda area, recently annexed to the city and already part of the high school district before that. Although our illogical school districting puts these people in the Dixie Elementary School District, they are eligible for the city board of education and have a direct interest because it controls Terra Linda High School. Purely on the basis of geographical representation, we would expect some candidates from that area, which has been represented by Kramer.

BOARD OF EDUCATION service is a thankless job; and it is a hard, time-consuming job if done as it should be. It pays nothing — not even the $100 a month which city councilmen collect. But there is no more important job in local government.

The quality of schools is, in the long run, determined by the quality of members on their governing boards. We need the best to run the schools in San Rafael.

We hope the filing deadline on Thursday will not find a no-contest situation for these very important positions.

Raccoons' Many Voices

Those who are only mildly acquainted with Marin's raccoons probably don't realize how many different sounds they make. They hiss like a cat, growl like a dog, whine like a puppy, scream like a wildcat, emit a long tremulo like a screech owl, as well as making an assortment of raccoon noises.

That's no menagerie in our yard. It's just a couple of raccoons.

WHICH END IS HORSE?

Bridge District Giving Sausalito The Brush-Off

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

Sausalito and the Golden Gate Bridge District have contrary versions of which end is the cart and which the horse when they dicker about a ferry terminal.

The city insists that a detailed environmental impact study be made before it decides what to do about the district's long-stalled plan for a permanent downtown terminal. The district insists that the city council agree to the terminal before the study is made.

It has been almost three months since the city spelled out the 11 conditions (politely called "discussion points") it wanted met before acting on the district's plan. Although the district claimed then that the issue had to be settled immediately so construction plans could proceed by December, the district never has had a public discussion of the city's conditions.

THE DISTRICT'S first response did not come until Jan. 23. It came from board president Stephan C. Leonoudakis, who must have guessed what position the board wanted to take on the city's conditions.

His letter ignored 10 of the points, instead calling upon the council for "an expression of your general concurrence in the relocation of the Sausalito Yacht Club and ferry Berkeley, as well as the general location of the improved ferry terminal at the site indicated on the (district's) master plan.

"Upon receiving this concurrence," he concluded, "we will then be in a position to proceed to the next stage of the planning process."

He graciously was silent on the new law the district slipped through the Legislature empowering it to ignore the city and simply go ahead and put the terminal wherever it wants. From the city's view, this would be the result if it gave in before the study was even made.

The city council will tackle the letter when it meets at 8 p.m. tomorrow in City Hall.

The spiciest item this month was that state prison authorities "have proposed the use of electronic sensors for the continuous surveillance of parolees." It seems that a transducer would be placed under each parolee's skin "ready to sound off the alarm to a master computer if the parolee steps out of the geodesic limits set by the authorities."

Comments by a spokesman for the Department of Corrections were unflattering, but closed with the observation that the scheme was not expected "before the year 2000, according to our long-range plan."

The same issue of Voice, which arrived on Jan. 26 — three days after peace broke out — carried "Thoughts on the War" by Barbara Boxer. She declared that "Congress is the only hope" to end the war.

THE HORSEFEATHERS for Humility Award goes to Sen. Lawrence E. Walsh, D-Commerce, for celebrating his appointment as chairman of the Senate Transportation Committee with a press release declaring the great happening meant that "development and establishment of a balanced transportation system in California today took a giant step ahead."

"Nixon sent me."

"Gee, Fang, I feel so much more secure with you along!"

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

After-Dinner Dialogue Concerning Disaster

These two Buchwaldian types are seen after supper. Daughter, making like an adult, is looking at the newspaper; father is busy at his desk. Their dialogue:

"Daddy, what does 'disastrous' mean?"

"Daddy, it says crews were rushed to the scene. What does that mean?"

"Overtime, dear."

"Daddy, why does the government let people live in those places?"

"Does it? I don't know why."

"Will the government take care of those people?"

"I guess so."

"Does the government take care of us, daddy?"

"Look, Virginia! Go help your mother, I have to work on these tax forms."

Note: To conserve irony, this can be filed and recycled after earthquake, brush fire, tsunami, etc.

Bayside Acres Fire Shows Tax Inequity

Your picture story in the Jan. 9 issue showing San Rafael firemen fighting a blaze in Bayside Acres exemplifies the fine spirit of co-operation existing between the San Rafael and Marin County Fire Departments. Unfortunately, it again brings to light one excessive tax inequity imposed upon the residents of San Rafael by Marin County government.

The unincorporated areas surrounding San Rafael, including Bayside Acres, Country Club, Los Ranchitos, Rafael Meadows, and all of Santa Venetia are protected by the Marin County Fire Department. This protection consists primarily of one, one-man fire truck operating out of a gas station in Santa Venetia. San Rafael, on the other hand, has 85 firemen manning six fully equipped stations. It can be seen that while the unincorporated areas seem to have poor protection the city gives excellent protection. To rectify this situation the county has a policy of calling for "mutual aid" from San Rafael immediately upon receipt of a building fire in these areas. "Mutual aid" is a contract plan instituted by the various fire departments to assist one another at emergencies beyond their means of ability to control; it was never intended to provide "first in service".

In the recent Bayside Acres fire "mutual aid" was immediately requested bringing two San Rafael engine companies and a battalion chief to the scene some 10 minutes before the first M.C.F.D. unit. . .

While it may be neighborly and kind for San Rafael to give this service, it is beyond my means of comprehension why the people of Terra Linda, Bret Harte and Sun Valley should provide free first class fire protection to Bayside Acres, Country Club, etc. If they should desire adequate fire coverage they should pay for it either by contracting with the city or incorporating into same.

Attacks On Postal Service Unwarranted

I am tired of your attacks on the United States Postal Service. I feel that you are against the USPS because you are "sour grapes" about the service you received during your strike . . .

Why shouldn't the whole U.S. Postal Service rate a set of stamps? After all, it's not a one-man operation. There are thousands of people involved. Granted some are more dedicated than others; I resent your implication that postal employees are second grade people. I think you should print a public apology.

Why don't you research your editorials better instead of insulting people? The last 10-stamp set was issued on July 4, 1968 (historic flags) and not during World War II as you claim.

I believe that the USPS is not any worse than your editorials. Sometimes, like today, your editorials are shabby, to say the least. Someday when you are able to produce a 100 per cent interesting and factual newspaper, then maybe the U.S. Postal Service will be 100 per cent effective.

EVA-MARIA O'DOUL

San Rafael.

(Postal employees certainly are not second-rate people. Neither are employees of other government agencies, nor those of thousands of private enterprises. A 10-stamp set for each class of employees, perhaps? — Editor.)

Nixon Economic Policies — Before And After

One aspect of Nixon's domestic economic policy is now clear. Before the elections, raise Social Security benefits 20 per cent. After the elections, cut veteran pensions 50 per cent. In fact, many veteran pensions are being eliminated completely. The joker in the national poker deck that makes this legal is the so-called "permissable income level" which is now approximately $3,700 per year. There is now a bill before the Congress that would permit the "permissable" income to be raised to approximately $4,400. (In face of today's cost realities it should be at least $4,200.)

To prevent hardship in thousands of good, patriotic families, I urge everyone — not only veterans and their families but everyone to write their congressman (a postcard will do) to increase the present inadequate "permissable income level."

The answer to "What Price Glory"? It ain't low.

TODAY'S WORLD

"It's time we redecorated around here, Edgar. Would you mind getting rid of your sideburns?"

THE NEEDLE

By HAROLD COFFIN

Workers don't enjoy working. The only surprising thing about this conclusion is that a bunch of researchers at the Upjohn Institute had to work all year to arrive at it.

The recommended solution is a "redesign of work." Presumably, to make workers happy by taking the labor out of working.

The way it is now, the only guys who enjoy work are those who are assigned to watch others do it. Trouble is, there aren't enough of those research jobs to go around.

Hard work is what made this country great. But that was back in the old days when folks didn't know they were supposed to enjoy working.

ERNEST B. FURGURSON

Shooting Of Senator Stennis; What Prominent Victim Next?

WASHINGTON — John Stennis, perhaps the most respected man in the U.S. Senate, lies in "very serious" condition at Walter Reed Army Hospital. He may die by the time this is printed, in which case the country will have lost a solid rock from the foundation of integrity and decency that holds it up.

Immediately after Stennis was robbed and shot by bandits in front of his house on a quiet street in northwest Washington, his Senate colleagues and other politicians began calling his wife, visiting the hospital and telling the newspapers what a commendable career he has led. It was not till late the next morning at the White House that the first thing to cross my mind after the shooting was laid out in public. That was when a reporter asked Mr. Nixon whether his latest cutting down of a national figure moved him to any further action on gun control laws.

WHAT HE SAID was of little solace to Mrs. Stennis, or to the survivors of any of the other gun victims in the nation's future. He already had praised the senator appropriately, and described the shooting as "senseless. . .one of those things that happens in large cities today, fortunately not happening as much as it did previously" (this squeezing out two cents' worth of credit for the cutback in urban crime claimed by administration statisticians).

As for gun control, he made it clear that it is primarily Congress's problem, not hung up by lack of White House leadership. Then, as a substitute for such leadership, he engaged in some of the most illogical bush-circling you ever heard — except in Congress where the same evasive action is taken even more lengthily every time the subject arises.

r. Nixon noted that Stennis apparently was wounded by a cheap .22, a "Saturday night special," and "obviously if they had had a .45 he'd be dead." On its face, that sounds as if a cheap handgun is bad enough, and a more deadly, heavier, more expensive handgun is worse. However. . .

Once again, he endorsed a ban on sales of the cheap pistol but not on more deadly weapons. What we need, he said, is a "precise definition that will keep the guns out of the hands of criminals and not one that will impinge on the rights of others to have them for their own purposes in a legitimate way." Having said as much, he quickly shot down his own halfhearted argument by recalling that it was not a "Saturday night special" that felled George Wallace last spring.

IT IS NO SURPRISE that Mr. Nixon under question gives two minutes of double talk that might as well be the chant of a tobacco auctioneer, as a means of moving on to the next question. Up at the capitol, where they have a chance to reflect long and hard on these matters, you might expect roll call votes to disclose more organized thinking. And they do — but it is the thinking of that highly organized lobby, the National Rifle Association.

In gist, Mr. Nixon said he would leave the matter in the capable hands of Sen. Roman Hruska, R-Neb., who carried the banner of the gun lobby gallantly through the gun control debate last August. Hruska led the fight and voted against every amendment that would have strengthened the bill banning "Saturday night special" sales, which passed the Senate and died in the House. Consistently voting with him were a whole string of senators who praised their fallen colleague this week, and in fact a lopsided majority of the entire Senate — including John Stennis himself.

Perhaps, one lady here said dreamily, now that it has happened to one of their own, the people at the capitol will get serious about gun control. It would be encouraging to think that after the deaths of John and Robert Kennedy and Martin Luther King and other anonymous thousands, the wounding of George Wallace and now Stennis would have that effect.

But what is more likely is that the Congress will find out that the senator was shot by a .22 Smith and Wesson blue-steel plastic-grip five-shooter Serial No. 2218222266, or something similar, and bravely pass a bill to ban all pistols of that precise description. Then we will wait, not very long, to find out who the next prominent victim is to be.

Kissinger Not Out Of Job; He Acquires Four New Ones

Henry Kissinger's unanswered question — At the end of his 90-minute briefing on the Vietnam settlement, after White House Press Sec. Ronald Ziegler had said the time had come to end questioning, a reporter posed one more. "Have you," he asked, "worked yourself out of a job?"

Kissinger ignored it.

The answer is no. Kissinger has no intention of resigning and the President has no intention of letting him resign.

KISSINGER'S FOUR new jobs. He is going to have plenty to do. His four preoccupations stem from events already in the making. He will be stimulating and co-ordinating U.S. policy in these areas:

1 — The new SALT II talks to cut back the Soviet-American arms race in offensive nuclear weapons.

2 — The NATO-Warsaw Pact negotiations on mutual and balanced force cuts in Central Europe.

3 — New efforts to further an all-European detente — Eastern and Western European countries, Scandinavia, Russia, the United States and Canada.

4 — Further initiatives to build on the improved relations with China and the Soviet Union.

The successful Vietnam negotiations wiped out any passing disagreements and annoyances which may have developed between Mr. Nixon and Dr. Kissinger.

WHAT IS WEAKEST link in Vietnam peace? From Saigon's standpoint it is the continued presence of North Vietnamese troops in those areas in the south controlled by the Viet Cong. This was a concession which both the United States and South Vietnam had to make in return for numerous concessions made by Hanoi.

These forces will help the Viet Cong protect their territory and have a potential to resume an offensive. But there will be attrition because the agreement does not permit them to be replaced or augmented. There are at least 145,000 North Vietnamese soldiers in the south and President Thieu has one million men under arms.

WHAT IS HANOI'S biggest concession? The North Vietnamese gave up the core of their previous negotiating demands — that the Communists be given a prime role in a South Vietnamese coalition government. The Viet Cong have a veto over holding free elections, but if they keep putting off the elections they simply keep Thieu in power.

THE WATERGATE and the Ellsberg trials. They appear to have something in common. Defense counsel for the Watergate defendants developed the theory that because the defendants thought the public good was being overridingly served by their actions, then their attempting to steal Democratic Party secrets was legally justifiable.

The defense in the Ellsberg-Russo trial is developing a similar thesis — that because the defendants thought publishing the Pentagon Papers was so morally desirable, releasing classified secrets was legally justifiable.

SCIENCE LOSES Nixon ear but gains congress'. The President's decision to save some salaries by cutting out his science adviser will turn the science community to Congress. Congress now has its own office of technology assessment and hopes U.S. scientists who feel neglected by the White House will turn to the capitol.

CONGRESSIONAL REFORM needs 'Hoover Commission.' That's the view of Hubert Humphrey and several other senior senators. They hold that outside study and advocacy provided by two Hoover Commissions under Presidents Truman and Eisenhower made possible major reorganizations of the executive branch. They believe the same is needed if the House and Senate are to push through needed congressional reorganization.

Teen Court Rules On Two Issues

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — In the final session of the YMCA Model Legislature, a teen-age Supreme Court issued opinions on prostitution and sex discrimination.

The youth court, the first in the 25-year history of the YMCA event, ruled Sunday that a governor's make-believe veto of a make-believe bill to legalize prostitution did not violate the state constitution.

The court, led by Chief Justice Judy Rapport of Long Beach, also ruled that high school girls have the same right to athletic programs as high school boys.

Earlier, the youth legislature approved bills establishing beaches for nude bathing and setting up a state lottery.

The lawmakers also passed a bill allowing licensed physicians to issue contraceptives to minors without parental consent. However, Gov. Lisa Morrison has not decided whether she will sign the measure. She has 30 days to make up her mind.

The make-believe legislators also approved a measure calling for unconditional amnesty for draft evaders. But in a last-minute "change of heart," Gov. Morrison said she would not sign the bill. It will be transmitted without her signature to the President, vice president and California's congressional delegation.

About 570 young men and women from throughout California participated in the annual exercise in state government.

ART LINKLETTER
Nixon drug adviser

Nixon's Drug Views Said Too Simple

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Television personality Art Linkletter, whose daughter died while under the influence of LSD, finds his new views on drug abuse often place him in disagreement with President Nixon, whom he serves as an adviser on drugs.

Linkletter's new views—including a limited decriminalization for marijuana use—came about because of his intensive study of the drug abuse problem, which he finds "terribly complex."

"The President tends to oversimplify," Linkletter said. "He tends to see it as a black and white situation. It's really a blend of grays and that's what I try to present to him."

"The drug problem is a terribly complex one, in an area where we're fearfully lacking in knowledge and research. Quite often we really haven't known what we were talking about," he said.

Linkletter made a study of drug abuse in the three years since his daughter's death, "trying to shed the traditional emotional beliefs and get the facts of the matter," he told a conference at the University of California Medical Center Saturday.

One of his new conclusions, Linkletter said, is that marijuana use should be granted a limited decriminalization and he favors "giving kids who get caught our understanding and humane treatment" instead of jailing them.

However, he said, repeated offenders should be subjected to punishment "that's got some teeth in it."

Devotion Of Staff Relieves Pain That Fills Burns Center

"Those who treat burns will be rewarded in heaven."

The other words were the thoughts of a patient, whose serious burns on his face, hands and legs had healed, and who was going home after several weeks in the burn center.

IT'S A PLACE that most Northern Californians fortunately will never see — a sterile little enclosed world of suffering on the fifth floor of the big new high-rise hospital building.

Firemen from all over the Bay Area know about it, though, and many departments contribute toward new equipment for the center.

Then there is a corps of former patients and their families — even relatives of people who died in the center — who have supported it, according to Dr. Vincent Pennisi of Mill Valley, the center's chief surgeon.

When the center was founded about five years ago, Dr. Pennisi said, the hospital staff expected that nurses assigned to the burn unit would not be able to take that duty for more than a few months.

The problems were described to me by another nurse, one who works at Marin General Hospital.

"We hate to see burn patients come in," she said; "they hurt so badly."

But the constant care given these hurting people — many of whom are badly maimed — is considered a challenge at the St. Francis burn center.

"When we first offered the nurses (in the burn unit) a chance to transfer to another department in the hospital after a few months, they flatly turned down the offer," Dr. Pennisi said.

"I've never seen such devoted nursing anywhere else," he added.

SPECIALLY TRAINED to treat burns, the staff includes registered nurses, licensed vocational nurses and aides, as in the usual hospital setup. However, at the burn center, one can't tell which is which. Not only are their pins and name badges (if they wear them) covered by identical gowns, they all seem to work equally hard.

Phrases like, "I'll get an aide to clean that up," are not part of the vocabulary of the registered nurses who work in the unit.

Along with the high level of care, constantly given to people who are mainly suffering a great deal of pain and for whom dressing changes are a many-times-a-day ordeal, the burn center staff manages to maintain a high level of good spirits and even, at times, humor.

It's comforting to the families of patients, too, that the burn center is in contact with the less than half a dozen other such units of this caliber in the country, and a constant exchange of new methods takes place.

Most Marin residents will never need the burn center — but it's there for those unfortunates and their relatives who do.

For those of us, like my 16-year-old son David, who's going to spend several weeks there, the burn center undoubtedly will be remembered as a place where he received the best of care when he needed it the most.

Millions For Road To Nowhere

BOSTON (UPI) — The $125 million "road to nowhere" opened to limited traffic today, becoming a $40 million-a-mile road to somewhere— sometimes.

There will be no gala ribbon-cutting ceremonies to inaugurate the three-mile stretch connecting Boston to Interstate 93, which runs to the New Hampshire border.

Gov. Francis W. Sargent, the man who did much win legislative approval for the highway, won't even be there to watch the first vehicles trickle along the fourlane, doubledeck causeway.

"You've got to be kidding," a spokesman said. "There will be no ceremonies and I think you understand why."

The highway has become an embarrassing political liability and nowhere on Beacon Hill is there anyone who wants to be associated with building it.

When the three-mile connecting link between the Central Artery in Boston and Somerville was nearly completed the state spent $90,000 to find how it could be used.

What it discovered was that it could hardly be used at all.

Cars attempting to get onto the connector from the Tobin Bridge interchange—one of the worst bottlenecks in the city—will be rerouted along city streets, then onto the connector by another ramp.

Inbound use of the highway probably will not be allowed until late in the spring, and then use will be limited to buses, emergency vehicles and maybe trucks, a state official said.

Officials stated that to fully open the inbound lanes would be to invite carnage due to heavy crowding and would have the effect of paralyzing traffic at the two-lane junction on the Central Artery.

It has taken 11 years to construct the three-mile section, which so far has seen extensive use only as a playground for Charlestown street-hockey players.

FROLICKING IN A MILLION

Third graders at the Michigan School for the Blind at Lansing, frolick among bottle caps. A year ago they set out to find what a million of something is like. Today, after a year of collecting, they found out, and learned that their one million bottle caps would make a line 17 miles long. Their teacher, Mrs. Jackie Taylor, said she found it difficult to describe what a million bottle caps look like, but she said "they smell like a very large brewery."

Auto Union Funds Slim For A Strike

DETROIT (UPI) — A strike in the automobile industry this fall could leave United Auto Workers members marching on picket lines with no money coming in to pay their bills.

The union will have a strike fund approaching $50 million by the time contracts with the "Big Three" auto companies expire in mid-September — enough to pay hospitalization, medical and life insurance but not enough to provide strike benefits.

But UAW President Leonard Woodcock warns the small strike fund does not preclude a walkout —if necessary—against any of the auto companies, including General Motors, which was struck for 67 days in 1970 at a cost of more than $160 million to the union.

"The fact the strike fund is down shouldn't create any illusion in the minds of the companies that we're going to settle for settling's sake to avoid a strike," the union president said in a weekend interview with UPI.

Should there be a strike, union members in many states would qualify for food stamps, welfare benefits and unemployment compensation.

The 329,000 GM workers on strike in 1970 got $30 million in governmental assistance, one study showed.

Several businesses and business organizations, along with the Nixon administraion, hope to stop the practice. Dow Chemical Co. and the U. S. Chamber of Commerce are challenging the benefits in a court suit.

The U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare proposes to end food stamps to striking workers, a move Woodcock said "we're hoping to head off."

"We have a welfare system to take care of people in need," he said. "If you try to lay down a rule that when you're on a perfectly legal strike you have to be a scab to keep your family alive, that's introducing an element we've never had, even in the worst confrontation situation."

Woodcock said he could not be specific on what wage demands the union will make of GM, Ford and Chrysler when contract talks begin in mid-july to replace three-year contracts that expire at 11:59 p.m. Sept. 14. Demands will be determined in a series of conventions beginning this week and concluding in late March in Detroit, he said.

Wages may take a back seat to fringe benefits like a fully paid dental plan, "30-and-out" retirement with no age limitations, problems of safety and health in the plants and an end to compulsory overtime.

Woodcock said the fully paid dental program has to be a must item in a settlement since it was dropped in 1970 in favor of additional wages. Since that time, the UAW gained it in contracts with international harvester and Woodcock said the "Big Three" must "understand that one has to be there."

He also said there has been a strong reaction by plant workers against compulsory overtime, a fact of life in many fabricating and assembly plants as the automakers attempt to meet record demand for new cars.

"It's not so much they object to the overtime. It continues on and on," he said. "They are really resentful about being told, 'you have to and you have no choice.'"

Houston's Smog Problem Laid To Pine Trees, Automobiles

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — A lobbyist for the Texas Chemical Council says he has the answer to what is causing that brownish smog over Houston: pine trees and automobiles.

"There's been a brown haze over downtown Houston for years and at least 30 per cent of that comes from plant turpentines from the pine forests around the city and much more from automobile exhausts," R.M. Love told the Texas Air Control Board Saturday.

The staff of the TACB had earlier indicated that much of the smog was caused by industrial plants and vapors emitted from ships and barges in the Houston Shop Channel. the staff had recommended stricter rules for the chemical industry, based on a study of ozone concentrations in the Houston area last spring and summer.

Love said the staff was just misinformed, like the public.

"A lot of confusion has led the public to believe the air is twice as bad, because the ozone is twice as bad," he said. "But that does not reflect the deterioration of air quality. The actual level of oxygen has not changed in the Houston area in the last 10 to 15 years.

He said the industry preferred emission controls allowing 40 pounds emission per day per source.

The regulations as recommended by the TACB staff would call for the installation by Dec. 31, 1974, of high temperature incinerators to burn wastes and installation of closed ventillation systems on all ships and barges using Texas waterways by Dec. 31, 1973.

Other rules would stipulate that all oil companies market a non-lead gasoline by July 1, 1974, and prohibit removal of emission control devices from autos.

Guard Convicted In Attack Case

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A hospital security guard was convicted of the attempted rape of a woman who ran to him for help after two men tried to attack her outside the hospital.

A Superior Court jury Saturday found Harvey L. Pleasant, 36, guilty but acquitted Robert C. Smith, 40, his partner.

The victim, a 27-year-old Piedmont mother of two, told the court she was attacked by two officers after she sought their aid.

Both Pleasant and Smith were convicted of failing to make an arrest.

Skater's Insular View Of Skiers; One Kind Will Pass Muster

There are Montagues and Capulets.

There are Hatfields and Coys.

There are skaters and skiers.

This column will be a doubtless unavailing attempt by a Montague-Hatfield-skater to play half-fair with Capulet-Coy-skiers, which — to the put whole problem one way — is like asking a Siamese cat-owner to write a love poem about the German shepherd next door.

After all, consider the temperament of the skater. A lonely, suspicious character at best, with something of the cold edginess of his blades. If he happens to be a hockey player, he is given to antisocial tantrums of bumping, shoving, and hacking. If he happens to be a figure skater, he heads for a secluded corner to practice that navel-watching exercise on ice: the figure 8. If he is a speed skater, he locks his hands behind his back and bends over broodingly, as if staring at his frozen reflection — the ultimate Hamlet.

WHAT IS THIS HERMIT this ice-man (in every sense of the word) to make of the skier: that jolly, gregarious snowman?

To the skater, the skier seems not so much an athlete as the Last of the Big Spenders. He may pay more for just his aluminum poles — say, $40 — than the skater pays for his skates. Then there are those $90 foam-insulated boots, to say nothing of $250 Fiberglass skis.

Not to mention the haute-couture parkas. For every skier that competes on the slopes, there is one that competes on the wardrobe rack. A 10-best-dressed list of skiers would line up candidates like a ski lift on Saturday morning.

Which brings a skater to another amazed question: What sort of big outdoors sport is it that ends up as a sort of rural traffic jam?

TO THE RECLUSIVE skater, the skier is a man who has invented a new excuse to travel. Didn't Archer Winsten give the show away? "No matter how good the skiing close at hand," he wrote in the New York Post, "skiers have a well-developed yearning for faraway places and strong convictions that the snow is deeper and lighter elsewhere."

The snow is whiter in somebody else's backyard. All right. But once he has arrived at this illusionary "there," the skier, as often as not, leans his skis against the lodge and heads for the lounge.

Even if the skier is not a roamer, a dude, a partygoer — if, in fact, his primary purpose is to ski — it doesn't matter. Your blue-nose skater will still frown upon him. What kind of non-puritan sport is this where life is all downhill?

A skater works for his motion, by George. Skiing may not be quite so passive a "sport" as snowmobiling, but it is still, in a skater's skeptical eyes, a "speed kick."

ALL THIS IS CLEARLY a view lacking in sympathy — patently unfair.

But now comes the fair part. The scene is neither slopes nor skating pond but a sort of neutral territory. Meadows. Pastures. Woods.

Onto this scene glides a novel kind of skier. He schusses us no schusses. He skis pretty much as a skater skates — stride by stride, paying his way as he goes.

The fancy jackets are spurned. Old sweaters and denims will do. As well as bamboo poles, soft boots, and narrow, light skis with curly tips — all of which may cost less than $100.

In 1969, there were 50,000 pairs of cross-country skis imported to the United States; by 1972, the annual figure had risen to an estimated 200,000.

These skiers with a new taste for privacy — these skiers who behave almost like skaters — seem to be returning to the ancient origins of their sport. What Fadl Allah Rashid ed-Din wrote of Mongolian skiers in 1307 still applies to the latter-day tourers: "They fasten boards of wood to their feet with straps" and traverse "the steppes and level country, up hill and down dale, as if they were riding on elks or other animals." They "take a staff in their hand and press this staff against the earth, so that they glide on the upper surface of the snow, as one goes in a canoe on water."

Or even a skate on ice.

Teeth Topics

This is National Children's Dental Health Week. Human teeth not only aid in the digestion process, but are important in speech, and help to determine the shape of the face. Man is one of the few creatures who can survive once he has lost his natural teeth, but modern dentistry and good hygiene now can enable a person to keep his natural teeth for life. Teeth are shaped according to the service they must perform. Some animals use their teeth for defense, while others are aided by teeth in locomotion, or in cutting down materials for their shelters.

American Tuna Boat Is Seized

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — An American-owned tuna boat, disabled and under tow, was seized by the Ecuadorian navy for violating the South American nation's claimed 200-mile territorial waters limit, the American Tunaboat Association reported Sunday.

The action against the San Diego-based Panama was the 23rd seizure of a U.S. vessel by the Ecuadorian navy this year, said August Felando, the association's manager. Ecuadorian authorities imposed a $78,880 fine on the Panama's owners, he said.

Doorbell Rings Twice Then It's Off To Jail

The doorbell rang twice. First it was the regular mailman, who got a signed receipt for the 20-ounce package from Bombay. Moments later it was the police with a warrant to search the premises at 1808 Centro West.

The addressee, Steven Richard Flynn, was booked into Marin County Jail with two companions found in his home. He was held in lieu of $1,000 bail, and was to appear today in Marin Municipal Court.

Police reported finding a substance believed to be marijuana in a pocket of Leigh Sanders Copley, 26, of Sebastopol. She was booked on suspicion of possession of marijuana, and released on $1,000 bail. She is to appear Wednesday in Marin Municipal Court.

Booked, on suspicion of possession of marijuana and narcotics paraphernalia, was George Jeffrey Dias, 24, also of 1808 Centro West. He was released on $1,000 bail, and is to appear in court on Wednesday.

Tiburon police reported the package was intercepted by postal inspectors in New York. Street value of its contents was estimated at up to $500.

Postal inspectors from San Francisco accompanied police on the regular morning delivery.

Oakland Fire Program Lauded

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — During 1972, the City of Oakland had the top fire prevention program in the United States, the National Fire Protection Association announced Sunday.

Nearby Hayward placed second among cities of between 50,000 and 100,000 persons and seventh in the overall competition involving 1,400 North American cities. The awards are based upon year round community efforts to reduce fire and educate the public in fire prevention.

The Association cited the 660-member Oakland department for conducting checks of 14,300 homes last year and making 24,000 inspections of commercial, institutional and industrial facilities.

Photographers Find Viet Cong Friendly And Anxious To Pose

EDITORS NOTE: UPI photographer Jeff Taylor was one of the first Americans to visit Viet Cong held territory since the cease-fire went into effect. Here is his story.

By JEFF TAYLOR

SAIGON (UPI) — On the first day of the Lunar New Year, I traveled with a colleague to see "Charlie" —the long-popular GI term for the Viet Cong.

Dave Kennerly of Time Magazine and I received government permission to take pictures of the Viet Cong, their families and one of their villages in the heart of traditional "enemy" country in the Mekong Delta.

We chose the day of "Tet" — the beginning of the Lunar New Year—for the simple reason that a cease-fire is traditionally held over this holiday and it was more likely to be observed by both sides more seriously than the official cease-fire already in effect for a week.

While we were still in Saigon-controlled terrain, several people told us there were no Viet Cong up ahead. "VC all go," they said. "They put up their flags then left several days ago." But we decided since we had come this far we might as well keep going and see for ourselves.

While walking across the narrow dike that straddles marsh-like rice paddies, we could see children cautiously peer out from behind bananna plants about 100 yards ahead.

But as we came closer, it was obvious that there were others besides children who watched our slow progress. A movement here, a glint of metal over there and suddenly there were at least a dozen silent faces gazing out from the dense cover.

"Chao and manh gioi," (hello, how are you) we called out, trying to sound happy. Frowns melted into smiles. "Chao anh," came the reply. We had made it.

From here on we were constantly surrounded by a mob of children who followed us wherever we went. It was like moving within a sea of humanity that broke just at chest level. If we had had any desire to run, it would have been impossible.

We were escorted to a small house and told to sit down and have some hot green tea, that the head man would soon arrive. Up to this point we might have been in any of the other Vietnamese villages both of us had visited so many times before. We shook hands with the elders, dropped our camera gear and sat down to begin thinking about what we were getting into.

We didn't have long to wait. Dave and I gazed at each other wide-eyed. "They're comin' through the wire," I thought to myself—the standard GI term for Viet Cong attacking an artillery base—as down a small path in front of us, men approached several at a time carrying AK47 rifles and wearing cast-off military gear and not so cast-off ammunition.

My first reaction was to just sit there and try to get my mouth closed and light a cigarette. Not far from the rear of the procession was a man armed only with a pistol. When he approached, we all stood to greet him.

Lt. Tu Phung, about 37 years old, commanded some 30 men who were mostly in their teens. The lieutenant talked to us through one of his men who spoke English.

"For a long time we have needed to get in touch with the press," he said. "Meeting you today is an honor for us. Rest assured, we will guarantee your security and if there are no obstacles, we invite you to stay with us awhile to visit several of our other villages. As you have seen, we come to welcome you. We respect the cease-fire. We hope peace will come, because our country has been wrecked by war. As you have seen."

Had there been any other Americans here lately, press or prisoners of war? The lieutenant's answer was no, we were the first Americans they had seen in a long time.

Then we began moving around. There were pictures to be taken everywhere. Any photographer would have gone crazy with delight. We must have seemed crazy to the people around us. We tried to get as many pictures as we could before returning to Saigon.

Throughout the day, as we were taken from one place to the other, soldiers, villagers and children begged to have their pictures taken.

From behind every tree, bush and clump of elephant grass, soldiers would leap out brandishing AK47s held high or B40 grenade launchers pointed at our lenses. They all tried to outdo each other for the crazy Americans.

At the village center we arrived to find scores of children had assembled to wave paper Viet Cong flags—a yellow star on a blue-and-red field—to hold up banners and shout cheerful slogans they had obviously practiced. None of it seemed forced or staged, though. They were genuinely enthusiastic.

The bright flags and the shouting were more than enough to make me worry that a South Vietnamese helicopter gunship would roll through it all at any moment. Sweat poured down my back as my mind's eye saw visions of armored personnel carriers (APCs), supported by F5 Freedom Fighter jets packing 500-pound bombs, rolling into Viet Cong hamlets with their flame throwers arched high over scores of grass houses like these—events Dave and I had both personally witnessed only four days before not more than five miles from where we were.

But there were no APCs, no planes, no bombs. We finished our picture taking and headed back.

"Chao anh manh gioi," we said. "Goodbye, good luck.'"

I waved over my shoulder and suddenly Kennerly and I were alone. We stood there for a moment, looked back once again, and grinned at each other. We had done it.

SEATED AT the large loom in her studio in Sausalito, Mrs. Theodore Bernardi demonstrates the techniques she used in creating tapestries, such as "Springtime," on the wall behind her. Mrs. Barnardi has a one woman show on display at the Philips-Allen Gallery in San Francisco. Drawings as well as tapestries are exhibited.

ARTIST'S VIEWS

Creativity Knows No Age Barriers

By BETTY FROST

"Tapestry, like painting, requires the active participation of the artist. Subtleties of color interactions, as the tapestry develops in wool yarn from the flat cartoon, mean the weaver must be an understanding artist with color as well as a weaving technician," Mrs. Theodore Bernardi explained.

Beatrice Bernardi also does water colors, oils and drawings. Her one-man showing of tapestries and drawings opened Friday evening at the Philips-Allen Gallery on Geary Street in San Francisco and will be on display through the month of February. The Sausalito woman is a member of the Marin Society of artists, women artists of San Francisco, and Spindles and Flyers, a Bay Area spinning organization.

In her spacious studio in the Bernardi home in Sausalito, there are four looms. The designer-weaver is currently working on the largest loom, creating a tapestry six feet wide and nine feet long. Other looms are being used by her proteges. She denies that they are "students", saying "they are creating their own projects. I am just here to offer advice if they need it."

A FIRM believer that creativity knows no age barriers, Mrs. Bernardi shares her studio with weavers whose ages range from 20 to 80.

All of her life Mrs. Bernardi's talents and energies have been focused on art. A native of Oakland, she studied at the California School of Fine Arts in San Francisco.

However she credits her husband, architect Theodore Bernardi and his mentor, famed California architect William Wilson Wurster with "the development of a creative outlook. Mr. Wurster," she said, "has a deep running philosophy to do the finest possible thing in each job."

Wurster originated the "Bay Region Style" of architecture, by using native materials, taking advantage of views and climate, and providing indoor-outdoor living with sheltered patios and decks. In the 1930's and 1940's. Wurster was Dean of the School of Architecture and Planning at Massachusetts Institute of Technology from 1944 to 1950, and associated with the University of California, first as Dean of the College of Architecture, and later as Dean of the College of Environmental Design, through the years 1955 to 1963. Theodore Bernardi has been associated with the San Francisco firm of Wurster, Bernardi and Emmons since the mid-1930s.

Soon after Beatrice and Theodore were married 22 years ago, their home in a wooded setting on the Sausalito hillside, designed by Wurster, Bernardi and Emmons, was built. In 1956 the Bernardi residence received an Award of Merit from the American Institute of Architects.

The home has been on several house tours, including the Sausalito Nursery School and architectural tours. Mrs. Bernardi's studio was a point of interest to visitors to artists' ateliers, sponsored by the San Francisco Art Institute several years ago.

THOUGH AN architectural showplace, the house is a warm and hopsitable family home. Members of the household are two dogs, Tony, a poodle, and Poopy, a Samoyed-poodle mix. Poopy's favorite lounging place is a chair upholstered in a museum-quality fabric woven by Mrs. Bernardi.

"Our social life is encompassed by the professional activities of my husband and myself," Mrs. Bernardi said. Their home is often the setting for the first exhibit of a promising young artist, or a party to honor visiting architects.

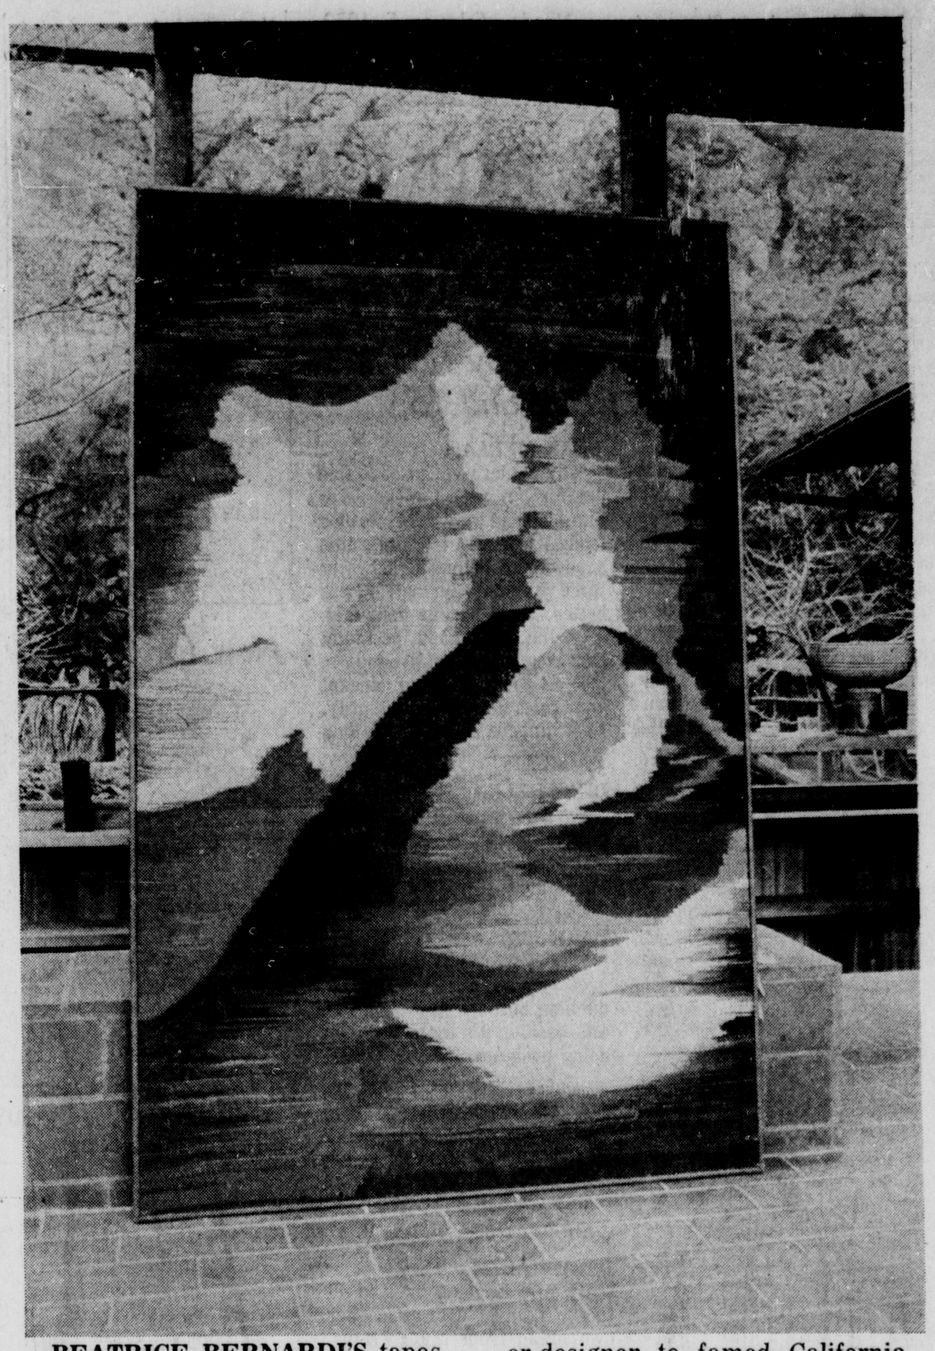
In the pre-World War II years, before such phrases as "culturally deprived" or "ghetto children" were on everyone's tongue, Mrs. Bernardi taught crafts to young children in New York City. After studying at Columbia University, she taught at Public School 125, a junior high school, and "After school we invented programs to keep the children off the street."

When she returned to California she continued to work with deprived children, "I could never ever after deny those needs," she said. She has been interested in the Sausalito Art Center since it began, and hopes that financial support will become available for its fullest development.

INTERESTED IN all the arts, Mrs. Bernardi resumed studying music, which she had learned as a child, several years ago. She plays the piano only for her own pleasure. "The main reward, "Mrs. Bernardi found," was that in studying other arts, such as music, you understand your own experiences more deeply. It is part of a coordinated whole. You add a new dimension."

The Bernardis love to travel. "Theodore and I have seen most of the major museums in the world, and all of the great cathedrals," she said, with a smile.

Sheri Williams, Mrs. Bernardi's niece, often accompanies the couple on their trips. Miss Williams has been assisting her aunt with preparations for the exhibit, with much of the work being done at Sheri's shop, the Aquarius Art center in Sausalito.



BEATRICE BERNARDI'S tapestry, "Winter" is displayed in the interior gallery of the Bernardi home in Sausalito. "Winter", one of a four part series depicting the seasons, was given by the weaver-designer to famed California architect William Wilson Wurster, whom Mrs. Bernardi calls "my husband's teacher and my teacher."

Hat Collector Extra Ordinary To Be Feted By Hospital Auxiliary

Irene Scott Pfaff von der Werth is a mouthful of names but their owner carries them as easily as she carries her 87 years.

In Mill Valley, where she has lived for the past 30 years, she is better known simply as "Nana" or "Vondy," however. Twice widowed, she still keeps her home on Cornelia Avenue and likes to walk into the center of town several times a week.

Mrs. von der Werth is one of the Friends of Founders who will be honored at the Valentine tea Feb. 14 when the Founders Auxiliary of Marin General Hospital honors its associate members at the home of Mrs. N. Charles Brusatori in San Rafael.

As a joke, the tea committee told the "friends" that everyone over 80 would get free transportation to the Valentine tea — Mrs. von der Werth accepted immediately. Mrs. von der Werth is also an active member of the Outdoor Art Club in Mill Valley, and she is noted in both organizations for her wide brimmed hats worn at a saucy tilt.

She has a large hat collection which fills drawer after drawer in her home.

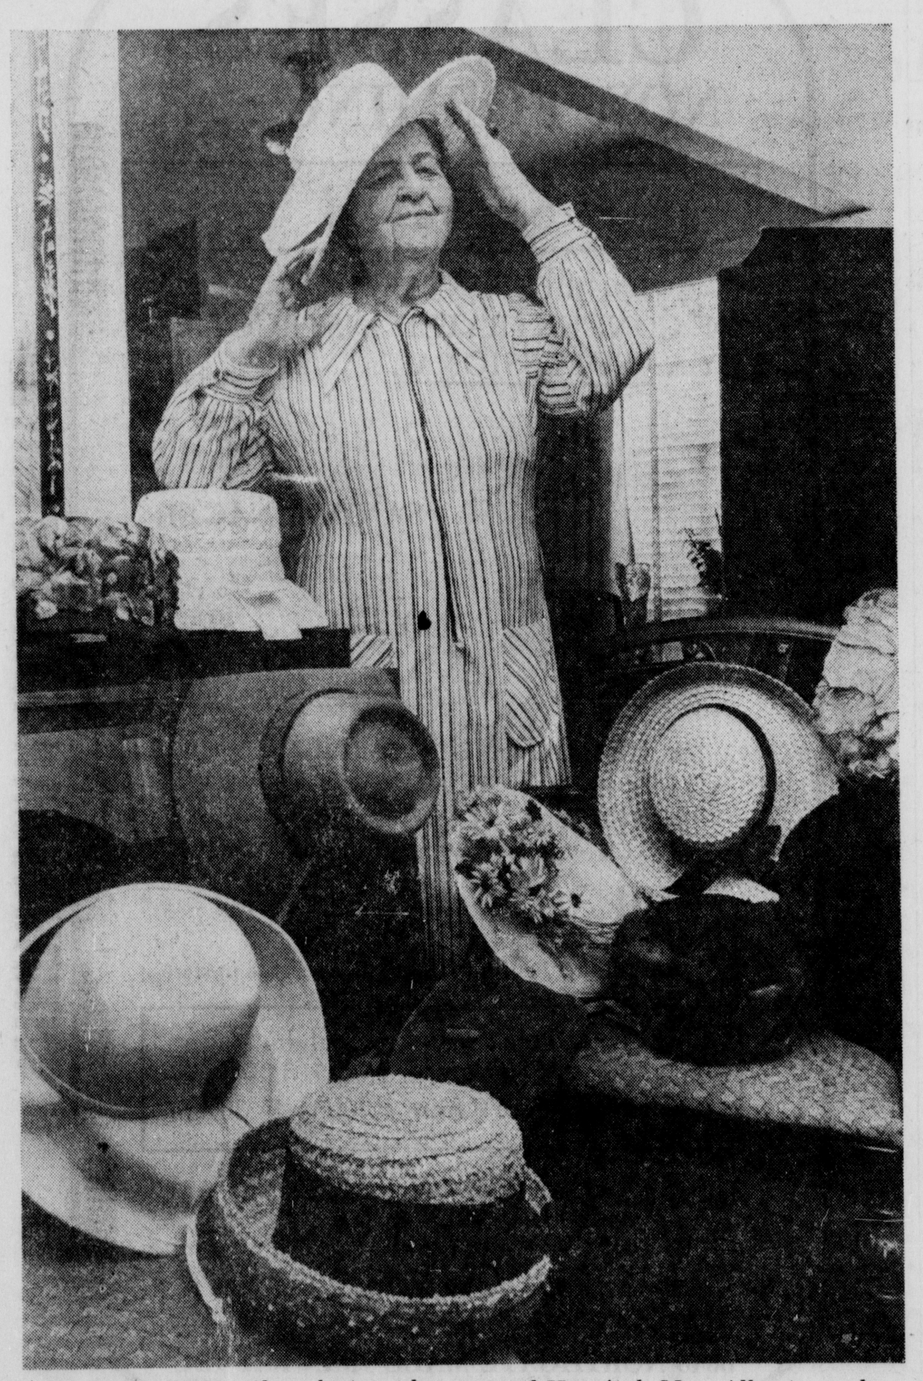
Originally from Portland, Ore., Mrs. von der Werth was a cousin of the late Sen. Robert LaFollette of Wisconsin, Progressive Party presidential candidate in 1924.

Her first husband, Navy Capt. Edward Pfaff, died after World War I, and she later married Albert von der Werth, who died several years ago at the age of 93.

The Mill Valley woman's daughter, two stepsons, granddaughter and four great-grandchildren keep her from being lonely, and the friends she has made throughout Mill Valley are a part of her active life.

Her granddaughter, Mrs. B.J. Oliveau of San Francisco, is also a member of Friends of Founders.

Mrs. von der Werth admits to having seen many drastic changes in life style in her 87 years, but she doesn't like to look back. She is more interested in the present.



NOTED FOR the hats she wears to the Outdoor Art Club meetings and the Friends of the Founders Auxiliary of Marin General Hospital, Mrs. Albert von der Werth at 87 enjoys wearing the wide-brimmed styles from her collection with a jaunty tilt.

Specialist In Consumer Affairs Warns Of Deceptions In Contracts

"Frequently when buying an expensive item you do so through the installment plan. Many sellers, however, will try to get credit information out of you even before you've made up your mind to buy."

Miss Drissell says a salesman may ask you where you work, how long you've worked there, how much you make, how much your spouse makes.

"You don't have to give out this kind of information before a sale," Miss Drissell says. "Tell the salesman you'd like to look at his merchandise first."

THE LAW requires the seller to tell you the total cost of your credit purchase in terms of dollars and cents. However, in most of nearly 83 furniture stores in low-income neighborhoods surveyed by the Better Business Bureau this was not the procedure.

Almost none gave direct answers to a shopper's question of how much her payments would be and how long she'd have to pay.

"It seemed all the salesman were interested in was getting a few dollars deposit to serve as a binder on the furniture if the customer did not want to sign papers on the spot," Miss Drissell reported.

"Others probably thought they would jeopardize a sale by saying, early in the negotiations, exactly how much the customer had to pay. With the carrying charges, the amount was substantial."

DURING THE survey, one seller told the Bureau shopper her monthly payments would be "small." Another said:

Teen Court Rules On Two Issues

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — In the final session of the YMCA Model Legislature, a teen-age Supreme Court issued opinions on prostitution and sex discrimination.

The youth court, the first in the 25-year history of the YMCA event, ruled Sunday that a governor's make-believe veto of a make-believe bill to legalize prostitution did not violate the state constitution.

The court, led by Chief Justice Judy Rapport of Long Beach, also ruled that high school girls have the same right to athletic programs as high school boys.

Earlier, the youth legislature approved bills establishing beaches for nude bathing and setting up a state lottery.

The lawmakers also passed a bill allowing licensed physicians to issue contraceptives to minors without parental consent. However, Gov. Lisa Morrison has not decided whether she will sign the measure. She has 30 days to make up her mind.

The make-believe legislators also approved a measure calling for unconditional amnesty for draft evaders. But in a last-minute "change of heart," Gov. Morrison said she would not sign the bill. It will be transmitted without her signature to the President, vice president and California's congressional delegation.

About 570 young men and women from throughout California participated in the annual exercise in state government.

ART LINKLETTER
Nixon drug adviser

Nixon's Drug Views Said Too Simple

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Television personality Art Linkletter, whose daughter died while under the influence of LSD, finds his new views on drug abuse often place him in disagreement with President Nixon, whom he serves as an adviser on drugs.

Linkletter's new views—incuding a limited decriminalization for marijuana use—came about because of his intensive study of the drug abuse problem, which he finds "terribly complex."

"The President tends to oversimplify," Linkletter said. "He tends to see it as a black and white situation. It's really a blend of grays and that's what I try to present to him."

"The drug problem is a terribly complex one, in an area where we're fearfully lacking in knowledge and research. Quite often we really haven't known what we were talking about," he said.

Linkletter made a study of drug abuse in the three years since his daughter's death, "trying to shed the traditional emotional beliefs and get the facts of the matter," he told a conference at the University of California Medical Center Saturday.

One of his new conclusions, Linkletter said, is that marijuana use should be granted a limited decriminalization and he favors "giving kids who get caught our understanding and humane treatment" instead of jailing them.

However, he said, repeated offenders should be subjected to punishment "that's got some teeth in it."

HELEN HELP US!

Wife Covers Up Her Gray Hair But Doesn't Want Husband To

DEAR HELEN:

Because I dye the gray out of my hair and people say I look younger, my husband, who has a gorgeous head of gray, insists I put rinse on his hair too.

I can't stand darkening that beautiful silvery mop, but he doesn't want "to look like my 'old man'." How can I convince him that gray on a man is chic, elegant and stunning, but on a woman it's just old? — MERLA

DEAR MERLA:

Why not let your husband find out for himself? I mean, give him his head (any color) and his friends will soon tell him which shade turns them off. If two or three women say "silver was better," he'll change back fast.

On the other hand, he might look younger with a dye job . . . just as you might look elegant and chic in touched-up gray. Experiments are more fun than arguments, right? — H.

DEAR HELEN:

My wife wants to take belly-dancing in a class for amateurs that has just started here. Now why would she want to do a thing like that? — JITTERY

DEAR JIT:

Why not? Belly-dancing is great for exercise, weight reduction, husband seduction . . . and besides it's more fun than doing push-ups.

"Unusual" dance classes are very big these days. In some cities they're even bringing back the jitterbug craze of the 1940s (or was it 30s?), and this requires a partner!

Are you ready, Jit? — H.

DEAR HELEN:

My wife is going back to all the "old ways." She makes her own bread from whole grains, grows her own garden, makes yogurt, cheese, and we're building our own furniture, slowly. This is great — nothing's plastic at our house, and we work together on almost everything.

But: she wants to have our baby at home! She's read about the new "go-back" to home deliveries and says it's the only way. Her doctor ways she's in perfect health. He prefers the hospital but she is talking him around. My wife is good at that! Meanwhile we're studying books, taking classes in natural childbirth, etc. I have a feeling that, when the time comes, she'll just stall until the baby arrives. (We have health insurance — money's not the problem.)

Is this safe? — APPREHENSIVE HUSBAND

DEAR HUSBAND:

Home deliveries, with a doctor in attendance, are safe enough if there are no complications. But doctors prefer hospitals because unexpected things can happen, and that little black bag is no match for life-saving machines in an emergency.

Since your wife is determined to "do it herself," you'd both better have a conference with her obstetrician. Maybe she'll compromise if she realizes you can be in the operating room for the delivery. (But just in case she's stubborn, keep reading those childbirth books!) — H.

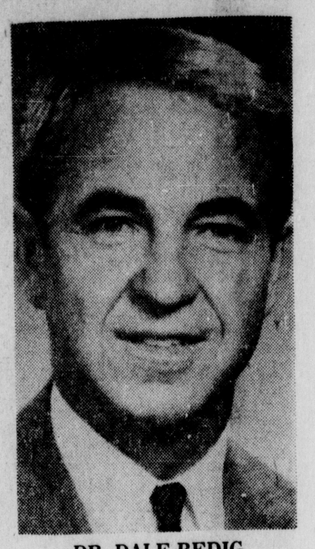
Programs Slated On Dental Health



DR. DALE REDIG
Tiburon speaker

To mark National Children's Dental Health Week this week, the Marin County Dental Auxiliary, in conjunction with the Dental Society, is presenting a series of programs on dental health education.

Tomorrow Dr. Dale Redig, dean of the University of Pacific School of Dentistry, will speak on "the Changing Curriculums of Dental Education Programs" at the home of Dr. and Mrs. James H. McCray, 7 Francisco Vista Court, Tiburon, for dentists, dental assistants, hygienists and students. Dr. Redig's talk will begin at 7:30 p.m.

On Thursday Dr. Richard Adams, Greenbrae, children's dentist, will speak on KTIM radio at 9 a.m. about new concepts in preventative dentistry. Also Thursday Mrs. Francoise Rothstein and her daughter Nicole, of Mill Valley, will be guests on KTVU's "Romper Room" show to illustrate good dental care. Dr. Marshall Rothstein of Mill Valley will appear on KPIX to discuss fluoridation concepts and dental health.

All the programs have been arranged by Mrs. Thomas Roeder, chairman of dental health education for the auxiliary.

The auxiliary members in Marin continually carry on their program of dental education for Marin school children through performances of their traveling puppet show, "The Golden Toothbrush," which they take to the county's schools. Puppeteers this year are Mmes. Gery Grey, Donald Strub, and Arden Valasek.

They also present demonstrations in schools of the toy dental unit, with a mannequin dental patient and the doctor's assistant and patients' families acted by elementary school children.

Mrs. Gary Darling is coordinating the toy dental unit this year.

The emphasis is on good nutrition and care of teeth to prevent dental problems.

Scholarship funds have been given by the auxiliary to students and institutions, and Mrs. Harry Humphreys is coordinator of the educational programs in conjunction with the Dental Assistant Program students at the College of Marin.

The auxiliary also runs a lending library of material for school educators and nurses, with Mrs. Peter Appel as chairman.

Later this year the auxiliary and Dental Society will present a one unit education course workshop for teachers and school nurses in latest concepts in prevention of dental disease. The workshops will be held April 28 and May 12 at Dominican College.

The auxiliary plans to help effect programs on dental health education in Marin's secondary schools, said Mrs. McCrary. Serving on the committee are Mmes. Joe Gryson, Gilbert Oliver, Rothstein and Larry LeVine.

Doorbell Rings Twice Then It's Off To Jail

The doorbell rang twice. First it was the regular mailman, who got a signed receipt for the 20-ounce package from Bombay. Moments later it was the police with a warrant to search the premises at 1808 Centro West.

The addressee, Steven Richard Flynn, was booked into Marin County Jail with two companions found in his home. He was held in lieu of $1,000 bail, and was to appear today in Marin Municipal Court.

Police reported finding a substance believed to be marijuana in a pocket of Leigh Sanders Copley, 26, of Sebastopol. She was booked on suspicion of possession of marijuana, and released on $1,000 bail. She is to appear Wednesday in Marin Municipal Court.

Booked, on suspicion of possession of marijuana and narcotics paraphernalia, was George Jeffrey Dias, 24, also of 1808 Centro West. He was released on $1,000 bail, and is to appear in court on Wednesday.

Tiburon police reported the package was intercepted by postal inspectors in New York. Street value of its contents was estimated at up to $500.

Postal inspectors from San Francisco accompanied police on the regular morning delivery.

Oakland Fire Program Lauded

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — During 1972, the City of Oakland had the top fire prevention program in the United States, the National Fire Protection Association announced Sunday.

Nearby Hayward placed second among cities of between 50,000 and 100,000 persons and seventh in the overall competition involving 1,400 North American cities. The awards are based upon year round community efforts to reduce fire and educate the public in fire prevention.

The Association cited the 660-member Oakland department for conducting checks of 14,300 homes last year and making 24,000 inspections of commercial, institutional and industrial facilities.

Photographers Find Viet Cong Friendly And Anxious To Pose

EDITORS NOTE: UPI photographer Jeff Taylor was one of the first Americans to visit Viet Cong held territory since the cease-fire went into effect. Here is his story.

By JEFF TAYLOR

SAIGON (UPI) — On the first day of the Lunar New Year, I traveled with a colleague to see "Charlie" —the long-popular GI term for the Viet Cong.

Dave Kennerly of Time Magazine and I received government permission to take pictures of the Viet Cong, their families and one of their villages in the heart of traditional "enemy" country in the Mekong Delta.

We chose the day of "Tet" — the beginning of the Lunar New Year—for the simple reason that a cease-fire is traditionally held over this holiday and it was more likely to be observed by both sides more seriously than the official cease-fire already in effect for a week.

While we were still in Saigon-controlled terrain, several people told us there were no Viet Cong up ahead. "VC all go," they said. "They put up their flags then left several days ago." But we decided since we had come this far we might as well keep going and see for ourselves.

While walking across the narrow dike that straddles marsh-like rice paddies, we could see children cautiously peer out from behind bananna plants about 100 yards ahead.

But as we came closer, it was obvious that there were others besides children who watched our slow progress. A movement here, a glint of metal over there and suddenly there were at least a dozen silent faces gazing out from the dense cover.

"Chao and manh gioi," (hello, how are you) we called out, trying to sound happy. Frowns melted into smiles. "Chao anh," came the reply. We had made it.

From here on we were constantly surrounded by a mob of children who followed us wherever we went. It was like moving within a sea of humanity that broke just at chest level. If we had had any desire to run, it would have been impossible.

We were escorted to a small house and told to sit down and have some hot green tea, that the head man would soon arrive. Up to this point we might have been in any of the other Vietnamese villages both of us had visited so many times before. We shook hands with the elders, dropped our camera gear and sat down to begin thinking about what we were getting into.

We didn't have long to wait. Dave and I gazed at each other wide-eyed. "They're comin' through the wire," I thought to myself—the standard GI term for Viet Cong attacking an artillery base—as down a small path in front of us, men approached several at a time carrying AK47 rifles and wearing cast-off military gear and not so cast-off ammunition.

My first reaction was to just sit there and try to get my mouth closed and light a cigarette. Not far from the rear of the procession was a man armed only with a pistol. When he approached, we all stood to greet him.

Lt. Tu Phung, about 37 years old, commanded some 30 men who were mostly in their teens. The lieutenant talked to us through one of his men who spoke English.

"For a long time we have needed to get in touch with the press," he said. "Meeting you today is an honor for us. Rest assured, we will guarantee your security and if there are no obstacles, we invite you to stay with us awhile to visit several of our other villages. As you have seen, we come to welcome you. We respect the cease-fire. We hope peace will come, because our country has been wrecked by war. As you have seen."

Had there been any other Americans here lately, press or prisoners of war? The lieutenant's answer was no, we were the first Americans they had seen in a long time.

Then we began moving around. There were pictures to be taken everywhere. Any photographer would have gone crazy with delight. We must have seemed crazy to the people around us. We tried to get as many pictures as we could before returning to Saigon.

Throughout the day, as we were taken from one place to the other, soldiers, villagers and children begged to have their pictures taken.

From behind every tree, bush and clump of elephant grass, soldiers would leap out brandishing AK47s held high or B40 grenade launchers pointed at our lenses. They all tried to outdo each other for the crazy Americans.

At the village center we arrived to find scores of children had assembled to wave paper Viet Cong flags—a yellow star on a blue-and-red field—to hold up banners and shout cheerful slogans they had obviously practiced. None of it seemed forced or staged, though. They were genuinely enthusiastic.

The bright flags and the shouting were more than enough to make me worry that a South Vietnamese helicopter gunship would roll through it all at any moment. Sweat poured down my back as my mind's eye saw visions of armored personnel carriers (APCs), supported by F5 Freedom Fighter jets packing 500-pound bombs, rolling into Viet Cong hamlets with their flame throwers arched high over scores of grass houses like these—events Dave and I had both personally witnessed only four days before not more than five miles from where we were.

But there were no APCs, no planes, no bombs. We finished our picture taking and headed back.

"Chao anh manh gioi," we said. "Goodbye, good luck.'"

I waved over my shoulder and suddenly Kennerly and I were alone. We stood there for a moment, looked back once again, and grinned at each other. We had done it.

McGovern Is Among Dressiest

The fashion organization named its best dressed men of 1973 Sunday and the list included the senator from South Dakota, band leader Doc Severinsen, lawyer William Kunstler, actor Burt Reynolds and Edward Finch Cox, President Nixon's son-in-law.

McGovern, the defeated 1972 Democratic presidential candidate, was "suitably attired in his international treks and stood out fashionwise during the cross-country presidential campaign," the foundation said.

Incumbents Seeking Sonoma School Posts

Two incumbent trustees have filed for reelection to two school boards in Southern Sonoma County April 17.

In the Cotati-Rohnert Park School District, incumbent Maurice Fredericks has filed for reelection.

Fredericks, an attorney, will seek his second term on the board. He has served twice as board president and is currently on the finance, building and personnel committees.

Fredericks is a native of Petaluma and has lived in Rohnert Park since 1961. He and his wife, Betty, have three children who attend John Reed School. He is a member and past president of the Rohnert Park Chamber of Commerce, a member of the Sonoma County Comprehensive Health Planning Commission, Rohnert Park Lions Club and Optimist Club.

Fredericks said he would build much of his election campaign around passage of the $1.5 million bond election to build a new school.

Incumbent Anthony Carbone had previously filed for reelection to the board. The term of Gloria A. Garrett will also expire. Mrs. Garrett has indicated she will seek reelection, but has not yet filed papers.

Mrs. Kullberg was first appointed to the board in 1963 and had since won two elections. She is a former teacher and lives at 1063 Stage Gulch Road, Petaluma.

She and her rancher husband, Oliver, have two grown children.

The terms of William V. Youngs and Dora Eldredge will also expire.

A Marin Conservation League fund to purchase the "butterfly tree" at Muir Beach and name it after conservationist Elizabeth Terwilliger has been set up.

Announcement of the fund was made by Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael, at the premier of two "Tripping with Terwilliger" films Friday night at College of Marin.

The tree is the winter home of Monarch butterflies which migrate there each year from the Sierra.

The films, made by the Marin Audubon Society under a grant from Standard Oil Co. of California, are 15 minutes each. In the movies, Mrs. Terwilliger, who has long led nature outings in Marin, leads children through a redwood forest and bay tide tidelands.

The films are now available to elementary schools through Standard Oil in San Francisco.

Waldheim Says U.N. Should Work On Love

AGRA, India (AP) — The philosophy behind the building of the Taj Mahal should guide the deliberations of the United Nations, says U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim.

The Taj Mahal symbolizes the love of an emperor for his empress and "this is what we need in the United Nations — to love each other and not to fight with each other," he said.

Waldheim, who arrived in Delhi Saturday for four days of talks with Indian leaders, flew here with his wife Sunday to see the 17th century mausoleum erected by Mogul Emperor Shah Jahan in memory of his queen, Muntaz Begum, who died in childbirth in the 17th year of their marriage.

Elderly Doctor Late For Party

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Dr. Benjamin Hoyer, a practicing pediatrician for nearly 50 years, was late for a surprise party Sunday in honor of his 80th birthday. He was at a hospital here visiting a newborn baby.

Some 500 guests mingled at the Hoyer home until the doctor arrived, completely surprised at the party planned by his family. Hoyer still maintains office hours five days a week, makes house calls and clinic calls, and attends two medical meetings a year.

"You've got to keep up with advances being made," he said. "You can't stop learning."

Marin Women

SEATED AT the large loom in her studio in Sausalito, Mrs. Theodore Bernardi demonstrates the techniques she used in creating tapestries, such as "Springtime," on the wall behind her. Mrs. Barnardi has a one woman show on display at the Philips-Allen Gallery in San Francisco. Drawings as well as tapestries are exhibited.

ARTIST'S VIEWS

Creativity Knows No Age Barriers

By BETTY FROST

"Tapestry, like painting, requires the active participation of the artist. Subtleties of color interactions, as the tapestry develops in wool yarn from the flat cartoon, mean the weaver must be an understanding artist with color as well as a weaving technician," Mrs. Theodore Bernardi explained.

Beatrice Bernardi also does water colors, oils and drawings. Her one-man showing of tapestries and drawings opened Friday evening at the Philips-Allen Gallery on Geary Street in San Francisco and will be on display through the month of February. The Sausalito woman is a member of the Marin Society of artists, women artists of San Francisco, and Spindles and Flyers, a Bay Area spinning organization.

In her spacious studio in the Bernardi home in Sausalito, there are four looms. The designer-weaver is currently working on the largest loom, creating a tapestry six feet wide and nine feet long. Other looms are being used by her proteges. She denies that they are "students", saying "they are creating their own projects. I am just here to offer advice if they need it."

A FIRM believer that creativity knows no age barriers, Mrs. Bernardi shares her studio with weavers whose ages range from 20 to 80.

All of her life Mrs. Bernardi's talents and energies have been focused on art. A native of Oakland, she studied at the California School of Fine Arts in San Francisco.

However she credits her husband, architect Theodore Bernardi and his mentor, famed California architect William Wilson Wurster with "the development of a creative outlook. Mr. Wurster," she said, "has a deep running philosophy to do the finest possible thing in each job."

Wurster originated the "Bay Region Style" of architecture, by using native materials, taking advantage of views and climate, and providing indoor-outdoor living with sheltered patios and decks. In the 1930's and 1940's. Wurster was Dean of the School of Architecture and Planning at Massachusetts Institute of Technology from 1944 to 1950, and associated with the University of California, first as Dean of the College of Architecture, and later as Dean of the College of Environmental Design,' through the years 1955 to 1963. Theodore Bernardi has been associated with the San Francisco firm of Wurster, Bernardi and Emmons since the mid-1930s.

Soon after Beatrice and Theodore were married 22 years ago, their home in a wooded setting on the Sausalito hillside, designed by Wurster, Bernardi and Emmons, was built. In 1956 the Bernardi residence received an Award of Merit from the American Institute of Architects.

The home has been on several house tours, including the Sausalito Nursery School and architectural tours. Mrs. Bernardi's studio was a point of interest to visitors to artists' ateliers, sponsored by the San Francisco Art Institute several years ago.

THOUGH AN architectural showplace, the house is a warm and hopsitable family home. Members of the household are two dogs, Tony, a poodle, and Poopy, a Samoyed-poodle mix. Poopy's favorite lounging place is a chair upholstered in a museum-quality fabric woven by Mrs. Bernardi.

"Our social life is encompassed by the professional activities of my husband and myself," Mrs. Bernardi said. Their home is often the setting for the first exhibit of a promising young artist, or a party to honor visiting architects.

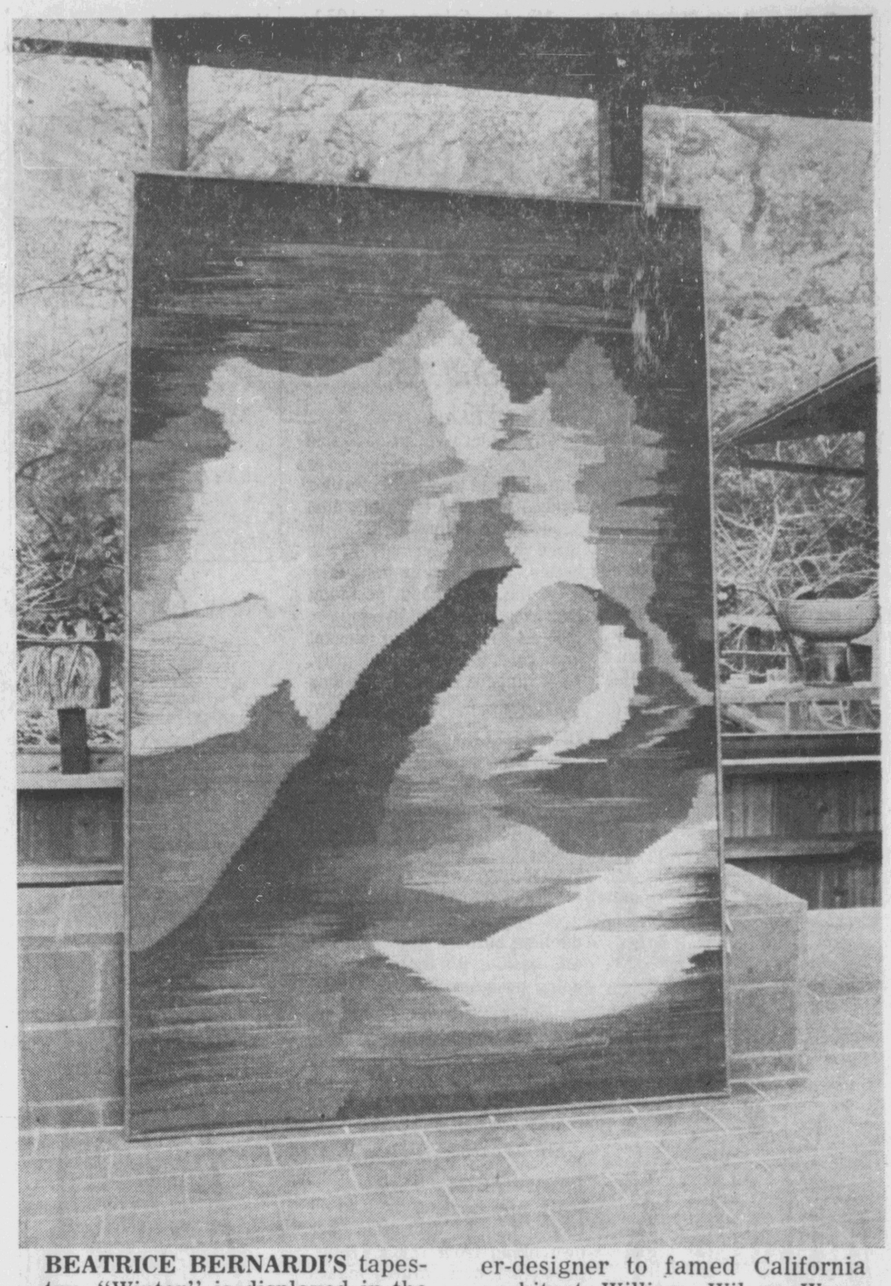
In the pre-World War II years, before such phrases as "culturally deprived" or "ghetto children" were on everyone's tongue, Mrs. Bernardi taught crafts to young children in New York City. After studying at Columbia University, she taught at Public School 125, a junior high school, and "After school we invented programs to keep the children off the street."

When she returned to California she continued to work with deprived children, "I could never ever after deny those needs," she said. She has been interested in the Sausalito Art Center since it began, and hopes that financial support will become available for its fullest development.

INTERESTED IN all the arts, Mrs. Bernardi resumed studying music, which she had learned as a child, several years ago. She plays the piano only for her own pleasure. "The main reward, "Mrs. Bernardi found," was that in studying other arts, such as music, you understand your own experiences more deeply. It is part of a coordinated whole. You add a new dimension."

The Bernardis love to travel. "Theodore and I have seen most of the major museums in the world, and all of the great cathedrals," she said, with a smile.

Sheri Williams, Mrs. Bernardi's niece, often accompanies the couple on their trips. Miss Williams has been assisting her aunt with preparations for the exhibit, with much of the work being done at Sheri's shop, the Aquarius Art center in Sausalito.



BEATRICE BERNARDI'S tapestry, "Winter" is displayed in the interior gallery of the Bernardi home in Sausalito. "Winter", one of a four part series depicting the seasons, was given by the weaver-designer to famed California architect William Wilson Wurster, whom Mrs. Bernardi calls "my husband's teacher and my teacher."

Hat Collector Extra Ordinary To Be Feted By Hospital Auxiliary

Irene Scott Pfaff von der Werth is a mouthful of names but their owner carries them as easily as she carries her 87 years.

In Mill Valley, where she has lived for the past 30 years, she is better known simply as "Nana" or "Vondy," however. Twice widowed, she still keeps her home on Cornelia Avenue and likes to walk into the center of town several times a week.

Mrs. von der Werth is one of the Friends of Founders who will be honored at the Valentine tea Feb. 14 when the Founders Auxiliary of Marin General Hospital honors its associate members at the home of Mrs. N. Charles Brusatori in San Rafael.

As a joke, the tea committee told the "friends" that everyone over 80 would get free transportation to the Valentine tea — Mrs. von der Werth accepted immediately. Mrs. von der Werth is also an active member of the Outdoor Art Club in Mill Valley, and she is noted in both organizations for her wide brimmed hats worn at a saucy tilt.

She has a large hat collection which fills drawer after drawer in her home.

Originally from Portland, Ore., Mrs. von der Werth was a cousin of the late Sen. Robert LaFollette of Wisconsin, Progressive Party presidential candidate in 1924.

Her first husband, Navy Capt. Edward Pfaff, died after World War I, and she later married Albert von der Werth, who died several years ago at the age of 93.

The Mill Valley woman's daughter, two stepsons, granddaughter and four great-grandchildren keep her from being lonely, and the friends she has made throughout Mill Valley are a part of her active life.

Her granddaughter, Mrs. B.J. Oliveau of San Francisco, is also a member of Friends of Founders.

Mrs. von der Werth admits to having seen many drastic changes in life style in her 87 years, but she doesn't like to look back. She is more interested in the present.

NOTED FOR the hats she wears to the Outdoor Art Club meetings and the Friends of the Founders Auxiliary of Marin General Hospital, Mrs. Albert von der Werth at 87 enjoys wearing the wide-brimmed styles from her collection with a jaunty tilt.

Specialist In Consumer Affairs Warns Of Deceptions In Contracts

"Frequently when buying an expensive item you do so through the installment plan. Many sellers, however, will try to get credit information out of you even before you've made up your mind to buy."

Miss Drissell says a salesman may ask you where you work, how long you've worked there, how much you make, how much your spouse makes.

"You don't have to give out this kind of information before a sale," Miss Drissell says. "Tell the salesman you'd like to look at his merchandise first."

THE LAW requires the seller to tell you the total cost of your credit purchase in terms of dollars and cents. However, in most of nearly 83 furniture stores in low-income neighborhoods surveyed by the Better Business Bureau this was not the procedure.

Almost none gave direct answers to a shopper's question of how much her payments would be and how long she'd have to pay.

"It seemed all the salesman were interested in was getting a few dollars deposit to serve as a binder on the furniture if the customer did not want to sign papers on the spot," Miss Drissell reported.

"Others probably thought they would jeopardize a sale by saying, early in the negotiations, exactly how much the customer had to pay. With the carrying charges, the amount was substantial."

DURING THE survey, one seller told the Bureau shopper her monthly payments would be "small." Another said:

ART REVIEW

Show Is Without Pizzaz

By ADA GARFINKEL

Permissiveness in place of curatorial direction by the staff of Genesis Gallery has faulted the Mill Valley gallery's current 'February Show '73."

Not only is the lack of diligent screening obvious in some of the rather amateur outcroppings in the general display but the 'Featured Artists" exhibit also has been affected.

The gallery's policy of having three featured artists each month is good It offers an artist a rare opportunity to show his artistic mettle and growth by allowing him to show a body of work instead of a single one.

Being featured should stimulate an artist to rise to the occasion, to show his best and newest work. There should be no holding back.

If, for example, Nan Fowler – one of the featured artists — had been asked to hang some of her exciting new paintings — even just three or four — the whole tone of the show would have been considerably accelerated. As it stands now, it is pretty much deja vu and without pizzaz.

The two other featured artists are Pheobe Diegnan-Healey and Bernard Healey

Mrs. Healey shows two aspects of her work: five "Albums" in the photo-realist style of painting, and four "Jigsaws." The latter are rich, moody abstracts in overlapping, cut-out shapes. They are reminiscent of cave-dwelling paintings. Some of the figurative and sculptural developments also recall Henry Moore's massive open sculptures.

Mrs. Healey's "Albums" delve into early 20th Century Americans. They are bits of nostalgia in the sepia tones of photogravure, documenting such memorable events as "The New Essex," "Uncle Doc" and a girls "Basketball Team." More contemporary, but painted in the same mood and monochromatic tones, "Bernard" is a sensitive, serious portrait.

Several banal coastal scenes absorb the spatial horizon of Bernard Healey's paintings, punctuated, however, by two which rise to more aesthetic perception.

"Thicket by the Beach" is a delightful medley of delicate stains and linear striations which build wide horizontals of airy space. And crimson reds and violets create bold rock expenses in "Inlet," which are held in place by cool waves of pale green and frothy white foam.

Other artists whose work is worth noting are Dianne Weiss's colorful wall hanging and intaglio print; Ned Mueller's watercolor; "Navajo Spring;" Zoe Schaffer's untitled watercolor; Pierre Flandreau's thickly tactile oil paintings, "Hot Rocks"; Ronald Moe's etching, "Sunflowers"; Suzanne Gomberg's watercolor "Paris Rooftops;" and Bette Klopf's intensely lighted "Old, Old Story."

The exhibit will continue through Feb. 28 at the gallery, 2 Miller Avenue. Viewing hours are from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. on weekdays, and from 10 a.m to 5 p.m. on Saturdays.

Dan Mogulof (left) the Snoopy of the Terra Linda High School production of "You're A Good Man, Charlie Brown," uses his beagle-ish stare on Andree Krier who plays Lucy while John Finn as Charlie Brown holds Lucy's pseudopsychiatric shingle The play will be staged at 7:30 p.m. Thursday and 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday in the school's Little Theater.

PLAY REVIEW

'Caligula' Lacks Villainous Villain

By KAY KSANDA

One of the arch villians of all time came to a church stage this weekend with the opening of Albert Camus' play "Caligula."

It was the Renegade Acting Ensemble which used the Lady of Mount Carmel Church to bring forth the almost demoniacal personality of an evil Ceaser who threw Christians to the lions in 30 A.D. On Sunday mornings it's still altar, pulpit and pews, but on Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights, the beautiful church is transformed into a splendid stage in the round.

The stunning set, the excellent cast, and the power of the subject almost assured the production of success.

The actors aproached the stage in flowing Roman robes. Their voices, their gestures were clear, emphatic, and professional. Ahh, delight, real theater! Everyone was looking for the Emperor Caligula. His sister had died, and his mourning had plunged him into a severe depression.

At last, John Garber as the bereaved and depressed Caligula arrived, but he was more confused than crazy; perhaps it was too early to be psychotic As time went on he became noisier and more preposterous, but he never became really malignant. He murdered, but he never terrorized He was a wild dog, but not an ominous snake.

Without a truly nasty or frightening villain the sensational supporting cast could only deliver their lines perfectly, but never generate the missing dynamic power.

Appearing as Caesonia, Caligula's mistress, Mary Rose McMaster was a noble and many-faced tragic heroine. As Cherea, Will Marchetti was marvelous-absolutely in tune with his character. Robert Ari as Helicon was clear and convincing; Norman Denning as Scipio was nostagically sad, and Charles Werlin as the Old Patrician was strong in his subtle weaknesses.

As Mucius, Larry Lippert wove his timing and character expertly into the intimate group about the emperor, and Bruce Fleischer was an excellent and craven intendant.

One of the highlights of the production was the traumatic death of Lepidus, stunningly dramatized by Max Klein.

Special attention should go to special effects, with lighting by David Saxton and staging by the three directors — Will Marchetti, Larry and John Garbor — plus technical director Bruce Fleischer.

In this setting of handsome stone and stained glass windows, the costuming by Faustin Bray was outstanding, the girl has a gift, but then the whole company is a polished talented professional group.

Performances are every Friday and Saturday nights at 8:30 p.m., and Sundays at 7:30 thru February at 3 Oakdale Ave., Mill Valley

Inventor Shows 'Doggy Potty'

Hooked into household plumbing, his "doggy potty" could make curbing a dog a thing of the past.

MUSIC REVIEW

'Goldrush To Ragtime' A Pleasant Concert

By VERA M. OLMSTED

The atmosphere of an early California concert hall was amusingly recreated last night at Caleruega Hall, Dominican College.

"Goldrush to Ragtime," a benefit for the American Music Research Center, presented a varied program of music that had been performed in California during the 1850s and 1860s and even included some stride and ragtime piano to close the concert.

Soprano Corinne Swall captivated the audience in her portrayal of Eliza Biscaccianti, "The American Thrush" much as Eliza must have charmed San Francisco audiences in the 1850s.

Miss Swall, authentically costumed in a white, hoop-skirted dress, stayed beautifully in character throughout her performance. She chose five songs from the era, ranging from an Italian aria to several songs by American composers. The Bellini aria, "Qui la voce" from "I Puritani," was particularly successful in showing off Miss Swall's light, agile voice.

R. Lee Carlson accompanied gracefully and in the spirit of the music.

Ronald Ray Williams was introduced next to his role as the American composer-pianist, Louis Moreau Gottschalk. Williams, elegantly dressed and wearing white gloves, strode to the center of the stage stripped off his gloves and threw them into the audience In Gottschalk's time the gloves would have been torn to pieces as mememtos by his adoring admirers, but no one took up the challenge last night.

Williams performed four works in the stylistically exaggerated manner that Gottschalk himself used. One of the pieces "Chant du Soldat," is full of arpeggios, runs and trite pianistic effects. It is a tongue-in-cheek parody of some of the music written at that time and is very amusing and well done.

"The Banjo" is one of Gottschalk's best known works The piano imitates a strummed banjo, and fragments of melodies that resemble "Roll, Jordan, Roll,' and "Camptown Races" can be heard at times. Williams maintained a driving rhythm in this tricky and brilliant piece, gradually accelerating the tempo until the pounding finish

The audience might have more fully enjoyed the humor and style of Williams' portrayal of Gottschalk if there had been program notes or an introduction to the characteristics of the man and his music.

Clav Roni, whose deft performance as master of ceremony helped to establish the mood of the concert hall, was joined by Earl Shenk in a hilarious drinking song "Cup of Woe." The vaudevillean antics of the two men, combined with Roni's embellishments on the vocal line, brought the first half of the concert to a fitting end.

The Primavera Trio, composed of flutist Edna Cornerchero, cellist Jane Rabin, and pianist Janice Eastman, opened the second half of the concert with their own instrumental arrangement of a song by Stephen Massett, American actor, singer and composer and then wnt on to the Trio in G minor, Op. 63, by Carl Maria von Weber.

While there was some good, strong playing by cellist Jane Rabin, the ensemble had difficulty in staying together and seemed to have trouble in hearing each other. The trio is not a great piece of music, but can be quite charming when played to emphasize the contrasts.

Ragtime pianist Ray Skjelbred, who can also be heard on KQED-FM pleased the audience with his interpretations of six rags. The enthusiasm was contagious, and before he was finished, most people were smiling and tapping their feet

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Wife Covers Up Her Gray Hair But Doesn't Want Husband To

DEAR HELEN:

Because I dye the gray out of my hair and people say I look younger, my husband, who has a gorgeous head of gray, insists I put rinse on his hair too.

I can't stand darkening that beautiful silvery mop, but he doesn't want "to look like my 'old man'." How can I convince him that gray on a man is chic, elegant and stunning, but on a woman it's just old? — MERLA

DEAR MERLA:

Why not let your husband find out for himself? I mean, give him his head (any color) and his friends will soon tell him which shade turns them off. If two or three women say "silver was better," he'll change back fast.

On the other hand, he might look younger with a dye job . . . just as you might look elegant and chic in touched-up gray. Experiments are more fun than arguments, right? — H.

DEAR HELEN:

My wife wants to take belly-dancing in a class for amateurs that has just started here. Now why would she want to do a thing like that? — JITTERY

DEAR JIT:

Why not? Belly-dancing is great for exercise, weight reduction, husband seduction . . . and besides it's more fun than doing push-ups.

"Unusual" dance classes are very big these days. In some cities they're even bringing back the jitterbug craze of the 1940s (or was it 30s?), and this requires a partner!

Are you ready, Jit? — H.

DEAR HELEN:

My wife is going back to all the "old ways." She makes her own bread from whole grains, grows her own garden, makes yogurt, cheese, and we're building our own furniture, slowly. This is great — nothing's plastic at our house, and we work together on almost everything.

But: she wants to have our baby at home! She's read about the new "go-back" to home deliveries and says it's the only way. Her doctor ways she's in perfect health. He prefers the hospital but she is talking him around. My wife is good at that! Meanwhile we're studying books, taking classes in natural childbirth, etc. I have a feeling that, when the time comes, she'll just stall until the baby arrives. (We have health insurance — money's not the problem.)

Is this safe? — APPREHENSIVE HUSBAND

DEAR HUSBAND:

Home deliveries, with a doctor in attendance, are safe enough if there are no complications. But doctors prefer hospitals because unexpected things can happen, and that little black bag is no match for life-saving machines in an emergency.

Since your wife is determined to "do it herself," you'd both better have a conference with her obstetrician. Maybe she'll compromise if she realizes you can be in the operating room for the delivery. (But just in case she's stubborn, keep reading those childbirth books!) — H.

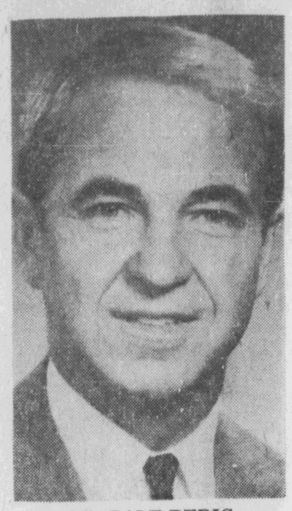
Programs Slated On Dental Health



DR. DALE REDIG
Tiburon speaker

To mark National Children's Dental Health Week this week, the Marin County Dental Auxiliary, in conjunction with the Dental Society, is presenting a series of programs on dental health education.

Tomorrow Dr. Dale Redig, dean of the University of Pacific School of Dentistry, will speak on "the Changing Curriculums of Dental Education Programs" at the home of Dr. and Mrs. James H. McCray, 7 Francisco Vista Court, Tiburon, for dentists, dental assistants, hygienists and students. Dr. Redig's talk will begin at 7:30 p.m.

On Thursday Dr. Richard Adams, Greenbrae, children's dentist, will speak on KTIM radio at 9 a.m. about new concepts in preventative dentistry. Also Thursday Mrs. Francoise Rothstein and her daughter Nicole, of Mill Valley, will be guests on KTVU's "Romper Room" show to illustrate good dental care. Dr. Marshall Rothstein of Mill Valley will appear on KPIX to discuss fluoridation concepts and dental health.

All the programs have been arranged by Mrs. Thomas Roeder, chairman of dental health education for the auxiliary.

The auxiliary members in Marin continually carry on their program of dental education for Marin school children through performances of their traveling puppet show, "The Golden Toothbrush," which they take to the county's schools. Puppeteers this year are Mmes. Gery Grey, Donald Strub, and Arden Valasek.

They also present demonstrations in schools of the toy dental unit, with a mannequin dental patient and the doctor's assistant and patients' families acted by elementary school children.

Mrs. Gary Darling is coordinating the toy dental unit this year.

The emphasis is on good nutrition and care of teeth to prevent dental problems.

Scholarship funds have been given by the auxiliary to students and institutions, and Mrs. Harry Humphreys is coordinator of the educational programs in conjunction with the Dental Assistant Program students at the College of Marin.

The auxiliary also runs a lending library of material for school educators and nurses, with Mrs. Peter Appel as chairman.

Later this year the auxiliary and Dental Society will present a one unit education course workshop for teachers and school nurses in latest concepts in prevention of dental disease. The workshops will be held April 28 and May 12 at Dominican College.

The auxiliary plans to help effect programs on dental health education in Marin's secondary schools, said Mrs. McCrary. Serving on the committee are Mmes. Joe Gryson, Gilbert Oliver, Rothstein and Larry LeVine.

Tenants, Landlords Square Off

By BECKY LARSEN

About 50 Canal Street apartment house tenants huddled under umbrellas and their building overhangs in San Rafael Saturday for a damp noontime protest against a landlord who is evicting 13 families from two buildings which he calls "the tenements of the neighborhood."

While children held signs that read "Mommie where will we live now?" and "Why discriminate against me?" parents badgered the landlord and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Gordon, of San Rafael, who bought the buildings at 129 and 137 Canal Street six weeks ago.

Gordon and his wife finally agreed to meet with the tenants tonight in a place as yet undecided to discuss the evictions and other grievances.

According to one evicted tenant, Peggy Meza, of 129 Canal, 23 families have already decided to put their rents in escrow until their demands are met.

Most of the dispute Saturday centered on why Gordon was evicting the 13, who received their 30-day notices to leave last Tuesday.

Mrs. Meza, who has two young daughters, said that 90 per cent of those being forced out have children. "Most of our children go to school down the street, and this forces us to take our kids out of school," she said. She has lived in the building six years.

Gordon told the tenants that the 13 are families which have given managers "a hunk of trouble with children and an abundance of pets."

"Do you have your records with you?" snapped Fred Combs of 129 Canal. "I want you to accuse me personally." He and his wife have three children including a 6-month-old baby. They have lived in the building seven months.

"You're trying to make Marin County into a millionaires' country club," yelled another protester.

Another tenant being evicted, Army Sp/4 William Ankenbauer, of 129 Canal, said he found it hard to believe he could have caused trouble since he, his wife and son, 4, have lived in the building one month. He is stationed at the Presidio and said he will try now to get into military housing.

Tenant Robert W. Rehfeldt, of 137 Canal, said that his only child, a 14-year-old boy, is too old to be a problem. He said he thought he got his eviction notice after seven years in the building because of his German shepherd. "Gordon tried to open my door one day to come in and measure something, and the dog started barking at him," he said.

Mrs. Meza also told newsmen that Gordon would raise rents in the buildings as soon as he finishes remodeling the two 20-unit structures. "They're going to be raised so high that the rest of us will have to leave anyway," she said.

Joseph D. Mannino, of the Tenants Action Group of San Francisco, who was at the meeting said that Gordon was one of many landlords planning rent increases of from 5 to 150 per cent now that Phase II rent controls have been lifted. He said that his group of tenant counselors plans to help the Canal Street tenants launch a court suit against the landlord.

Present rents in the buildings now range from $165 to $185 monthly. Gordon acknowledged that he would raise them to $210 per month in the apartments which are all two-bedroom units.

But, he said, the increases are justified in view of $90,000 worth of repairs he is making. "Right now the stairs are falling down and there are holes in the decks," he said. "All the concrete around the foundations has settled away from the building. There are two swimming pools but they can't be used because they've been condemned."

Gordon said that neighbors in the area called his two buildings "tenements."

The Gordons said that they think the buildings are poor place to rear children. "Right now there are 45 of them here with no play area," said Mrs. Gordon "The garbage cans are not a good place for them to play."

She said that from now on they planned to admit only families with one child each, preferably infants.

Tenants complained that the repairs were making life in the building impossible. Several objected that garbage cans and mailboxes were moved without notice and that workmen walked into their apartments without knocking.

Talks Being Held On U.S. Sale Of Cotton To China

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Agriculture Department reports that "serious private negotiations" are under way for sales of American cotton to China.

The department, in its "Foreign Agriculture" magazine made available Sunday, said it had no information of any sales pacts being concluded. But it said earlier estimates of China's 1972-73 cotton crop had been revised from "a few hundred thousand bales" above the previous year to somewhat below the 1971-72 level because of drought.

The U.S. 1972 crop was well in excess of demand. A recent government report estimated that about 2 million bales of last year's crop had no immediate market and will be added to a carryover surplus.

Fight Quelled In Larkspur

Larkspur and Corte Madera police broke up a fight, involving about 70 youths in the streets of Larkspur Saturday night.

Larkspur police were called when a fist fight erupted at the intersection of Ajax Street and Hawthorne Avenue at 10:55 p.m. stemming from a party at the home of Zvi Danenberg at 232 Hawthorne Avenue.

Larkspur police said today that the intersection was cleared, and Danenberg concurred with their request that the party should be disbanded. Everyone left without further trouble.

New Storm Heading In For Tonight

A new Pacific storm is picking up speed and heading for Northern California, bringing more rain to Marin County by tonight, the National Weather Service reports.

San Rafael recorded .22 of an inch of rain from noon Friday to noon Saturday, but only a trace had fallen to noon today. Rainfall in the northern county area was heavier. Novato reported an even two inches from early Saturday until 8 a.m. today while Sausalito remained fairly dry with only .08.

Marin residents can expect the sun, which poked its face out intermitently over the weekend, to disappear entirely with chances of rain set at 40 per cent tonight rising to 70 per cent by tomorrow.

Temperatures are expected to remain about the same, dropping to the mid-40s tonight, while winds will be southerly from 15 to 30 miles per hour, the weatherman said.

Auto Is Found After Wreck

A 1963 stationwagon owned by George Edward Willis of 10 Park Way, Larkspur, was stolen early Saturday morning, and found at 1:15 a.m. after it hit a pickup truck parked on Millard Avenue.

Larkspur police said Willis parked his car outside his home at 7 p.m., and it was found after hitting a 1972 Dodge pickup owned by Stephen Joseph Ford, and parked outside his home at 38 Millard Avenue.

Both vehicles were damaged, said police. A witness reported seeing a long-haired youth running near the scene.

Dead Trees Said A Fire Hazard

OAKLAND (AP) — Officials say an estimated two million eucalyptus trees killed in the severe freeze last December should be cut down and removed because they pose a severe fire threat.

The cutting project could cost $20 million, but the dried trees endanger hundreds of homes and other buildings in the Oakland and Berkeley hill area, officials say.

The dead trees are spread over 3,000 acres in the hilly residential sections, on land owned by the University of California and the regional parks.

County, city and university officials have agreed to form a committee to see how to avoid a fire catastrophe.

Suspect In Burglary Try Is Held

The man, Scott Doyle Weaver was to appear in Marin Municipal Court today.

Larskpur police said Weaver and a 16-year-old San Anselmo girl were seen by police walking on South Eliseo Drive shortly before the pharmacy's burglar alarm sounded at 10:19 p.m.

A small window to the right of the shop's front door had been smashed open, and the glass laid neatly in a pile on the sidewalk. Inside, a burned match and a powdery substance were found on the rug.

Police said Weaver's car was stopped at the intersection of Via Hidalgo and Bon Air Road shortly afterwards, and there were cuts on Weaver's shoe and trousers, and a powder was found on the front seat.

Ronald Quinton Robertson, the pharmacy's owner, said the rug had been vacuumed before the store was closed.

Police arrested Weaver on suspicion of attempted burglary. As there was no physical evidence to link the girl to the break-in she was turned over to her father.

Trip To Washington Will Be Considered

The Shoreline Unified School District board will consider authorizing a trip to Washington, D.C., for Tomales High School junior and seniors at a special meeting at 7:30 p.m. today at the high school.

The trip would be from April 4-20.

Chemist Is Candidate For Seat On Council

A research chemist has filed for election to the San Rafael City Council April 17.

Richard C. Fox, a research chemist for Chevron Co., submitted petitions of candidacy late Friday, according to Asst. City Clerk Renee J. Burdisso.

The 45-year-old Fox, who has described himself as a conservative conservationist, has called for more aid to small businessmen, use of volunteer aid in city hall to cut staff workloads, elimination of parking meters and a "continuing emphasis on unsophisticated good old-fashioned American local patriotism and teamwork."

Fox has pledged to champion the interests of residents "who are groaning under the weight of ever-increasing tax loads."

He has also proposed an incentive program whereby city employees who cut municipal costs receive cash bonuses.

Fox, of 127 Humboldt Street, received his bachelor's degree in chemistry from Massachusetts Institute of Technology and won doctorate honors in chemistry from the University of Illinois.

Fox joins Jack G. Nixon, chairman of the county planning commission, Thomas R. O'Toole, chairman of the city's planning commission, and Leo Tinkler, a real estate agent, in filing papers for the race for two seats.

Carl J. (Red) Brown, athletic director of Sir Francis Drake High School, has received nomination papers but had not filed by 10 a.m. today. Incumbent Councilman Lawrence E. Mulryan, who has announced his intention to run for election has not yet picked up petitions of candidacy.

Filing deadline is noon Thursday.

Prison Inmate Reported Dead

San Quentin officials have reported that inmate Roy Salas, 33, died in the prison hospital at 1:45 p.m. Saturday.

According to Associate Warden James W. Park, Salas had a history of epilepsy and apparently died from a condition involving that illness. He had become ill suddenly Saturday morning. An autopsy is pending.

A native of Arizona, Salas was convicted of grand theft in Los Angeles County in 1963 and sentenced to six months to 10 years in prison, Park said.

He has been in several California institutions.

According to Park, Salas assaulted personnel at the California Medical Facility at Vacaville twice and was subsequently convicted in Solano County in 1966 and 1968 on battery charges. In both cases he received sentences of six months to three years.

Location Studied For School Office

The Novato Unified School District board will consider the cost of renting office space at the San Marin Professional Building for the district administration at 8 p.m. tomorrow at Novato High School lecture hall.

The administration is now housed in permanent and portable buildings at the Marion School site. The board is considering using the permanent building for North Marin High School, a continuation school, and the portable building at Novato High School.

Flooding Report Due Council

The Corte Madera Town Council will get a report on recent flooding in the town at its meeting tonight at 7:30 p.m. at the town hall, plus a petition signed by 18 residents complaining about flooding on Tamalpais Drive.

Town public works director, Athur N. Morrison, says in his report that flooding occurred in six areas of Corte Madera: Birch Avenue and Apache Court; the Harbor Drive, Echo Avenue and San Clemente Creek area; Canal behind the Paradise Shopping Center; the 400 blocks of Tamalpais Drive and Manzanita Avenue; Lucky Drive; and the site of the proposed Hahn regional shopping center.

Most of the problems were related to exceptionally high tides, reports Morrison, with the exception of Manzanita Avenue which may be caused by an inadequate drainage pipe.

The council also will be asked to raise dog impound fees, to transfer funds to pay more police department overtime, and to consider its policy on development of land that's outside the town limits "but within its sphere of influence."

Woman Reports Her Dog Bitten

Her Lhasa Apso dog was badly bitten by a large red chow dog on Thursday evening, Anita Sommers of 78 Mariner Green Drive, Corte Madera, told town police.

Mrs. Sommers said she was walking her pet on Mariner Green Drive when the chow charged from a driveway and bit her dog on the stomach and thighs.

HERE'S LOOKING AT YOU

McGovern Is Among Dressiest

The fashion organization named its best dressed men of 1973 Sunday and the list included the senator from South Dakota, band leader Doc Severinsen, lawyer William Kunstler, actor Burt Reynolds and Edward Finch Cox, President Nixon's son-in-law.

McGovern, the defeated 1972 Democratic presidential candidate, was "suitably attired in his international treks and stood out fashionwise during the cross-country presidential campaign," the foundation said.

Waldheim Says U.N. Should Work On Love

AGRA, India (AP) — The philosophy behind the building of the Taj Mahal should guide the deliberations of the United Nations, says U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim.

The Taj Mahal symbolizes the love of an emperor for his empress and "this is what we need in the United Nations — to love each other and not to fight with each other," he said.

Waldheim, who arrived in Delhi Saturday for four days of talks with Indian leaders, flew here with his wife Sunday to see the 17th century mausoleum erected by Mogul Emperor Shah Jahan in memory of his queen, Muntaz Begum, who died in childbirth in the 17th year of their marriage.

Incumbents Seeking Sonoma School Posts

Two incumbent trustees have filed for reelection to two school boards in Southern Sonoma County April 17.

In the Cotati-Rohnert Park School District, incumbent Maurice Fredericks has filed for reelection.

Fredericks, an attorney, will seek his second term on the board. He has served twice as board president and is currently on the finance, building and personnel committees.

Fredericks is a native of Petaluma and has lived in Rohnert Park since 1961. He and his wife, Betty, have three children who attend John Reed School. He is a member and past president of the Rohnert Park Chamber of Commerce, a member of the Sonoma County Comprehensive Health Planning Commission, Rohnert Park Lions Club and Optimist Club.

Fredericks said he would build much of his election campaign around passage of the $1.5 million bond election to build a new school.

Incumbent Anthony Carbone had previously filed for reelection to the board. The term of Gloria A. Garrett will also expire. Mrs. Garrett has indicated she will seek reelection, but has not yet filed papers.

Mrs. Kullberg was first appointed to the board in 1963 and had since won two elections. She is a former teacher and lives at 1063 Stage Gulch Road, Petaluma.

She and her rancher husband, Oliver, have two grown children.

The terms of William V. Youngs and Dora Eldredge will also expire.

Butterfly Tree Fund Is Started

A Marin Conservation League fund to purchase the "butterfly tree" at Muir Beach and name it after conservationist Elizabeth Terwilliger has been set up.

Announcement of the fund was made by Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael, at the premier of two "Tripping with Terwilliger" films Friday night at College of Marin.

The tree is the winter home of Monarch butterflies which migrate there each year from the Sierra.

The films, made by the Marin Audubon Society under a grant from Standard Oil Co. of California, are 15 minutes each. In the movies, Mrs. Terwilliger, who has long led nature outings in Marin, leads children through a redwood forest and bay tide tidelands.

The films are now available to elementary schools through Standard Oil in San Francisco.

Elderly Doctor Late For Party

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Dr. Benjamin Hoyer, a practicing pediatrician for nearly 50 years, was late for a surprise party Sunday in honor of his 80th birthday. He was at a hospital here visiting a newborn baby.

Some 500 guests mingled at the Hoyer home until the doctor arrived, completely surprised at the party planned by his family. Hoyer still maintains office hours five days a week, makes house calls and clinic calls, and attends two medical meetings a year.

"You've got to keep up with advances being made," he said. "You can't stop learning."

South Must Have Strong Plan Of Action To Keep East Out

Any good lawyer can assure you that the laws of your country or state permit you to play a side suit before drawing trumps. This shows the wisdom of legislators in all parts of the world and should silence youthful critics. If the law compelled you to draw trumps, how could you make four hearts in today's hand?

DIAMOND ACTION

West opened the jack of diamonds, and dummy won. There was no need to draw trumps because declarer had no tricks in the side suits that needed protection.

South began by running all of dummy's top diamonds. The idea was to get rid of the king of spades as quickly as possible.

When South had succeeded in discarding the king of spades, he led the jack of spades from dummy. East put up the ace, hoping declarer still had the queen of spades, but South ruffed with a high trump.

CLUB DISCARDED

A trump to dummy's king was followed by the ten of spades. East naturally played low, and South discarded a low club. This allowed West to win with the queen of spades.

West returned a trump, but now declarer could draw trumps, ending in the dummy, followed by the nine and eight of spades, on which he discarded low clubs. West still got his ace of clubs, but he couldn't stop declarer from winning 11 tricks.

KEY TO CAMPAIGN

The key to South's campaign was that he prevented East from gaining the lead. East would have been happy to lead the jack of clubs through South's king, and then the fat would have been in the fire.

DAILY QUESTION

Your partner opens with one no-trump (16 to 18 points), and the next player passes.

You hold:
♠ - Q 6 4
♥ - 7 6 2
♦ - J 10 9
♣ - A Q 10 7.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid three no-trump. Since you have 9 points, the combined count must be 25 to 27 points. Moreover, you have two tens and a nine to help partner if the combined count is as low as 25 points. Do not be content to invite a game when you can afford to bid it by yourself.

Land Rezoning To Be Considered

Prezoning for newly annexed land on South Ely Boulevard at Casa Grande Road will be considered at the Petaluma City Council meeting today at 7:30 p.m. at city hall.

The agricultural land will be considered for preliminary designation as a planned unit development district.

The council also will officially award housing development allocations for 1973-74 and consider purchasing new equipment for the animal control center and fire department.

3. Hank Aaron or Willie Mays is that major league batting champion, 39 today, who is challenging the homerun record of Babe Ruth and says, "I have worked terribly hard at this thing. . .A pitcher can only do so much. 4. Norton Simon or Henry Ford II is the American businessman who is 66 today, believes right-wing politics has failed, saying, "We've always had a generation gap. It's nothing new. But at the accelerated pace at which we live and learn today, the gap is wider than ever. . ." The year: 1971.

ART REVIEW

Show Is Without Pizzaz

By ADA GARFINKEL

Permissiveness in place of curatorial direction by the staff of Genesis Gallery has faulted the Mill Valley gallery's current "February Show '73."

Not only is the lack of diligent screening obvious in some of the rather amateur outcroppings in the general display but the "Featured Artists" exhibit also has been affected.

The gallery's policy of having three featured artists each month is good It offers an artist a rare opportunity to show his artistic mettle and growth by allowing him to show a body of work instead of a single one.

Being featured should stimulate an artist to rise to the occasion, to show his best and newest work. There should be no holding back.

If, for example, Nan Fowler – one of the featured artists — had been asked to hang some of her exciting new paintings — even just three or four — the whole tone of the show would have been considerably accelerated. As it stands now, it is pretty much deja vu and without pizzaz.

The two other featured artists are Pheobe Diegnan-Healey and Bernard Healey

Mrs. Healey shows two aspects of her work: five "Albums" in the photo-realist style of painting, and four "Jigsaws." The latter are rich, moody abstracts in overlapping, cut-out shapes. They are reminiscent of cave-dwelling paintings. Some of the figurative and sculptural developments also recall Henry Moore's massive open sculptures.

Mrs. Healey's "Albums" delve into early 20th Century Americans. They are bits of nostalgia in the sepia tones of photogravure, documenting such memorable events as "The New Essex," "Uncle Doc" and a girls "Basketball Team." More contemporary, but painted in the same mood and monochromatic tones, "Bernard" is a sensitive, serious portrait.

Several banal coastal scenes absorb the spatial horizon of Bernard Healey's paintings, punctuated, however, by two which rise to more aesthetic perception.

"Thicket by the Beach" is a delightful medley of delicate stains and linear striations which build wide horizontals of airy space. And crimson reds and violets create bold rock expenses in "Inlet," which are held in place by cool waves of pale green and frothy white foam.

Other artists whose work is worth noting are Dianne Weiss's colorful wall hanging and intaglio print; Ned Mueller's watercolor; "Navajo Spring;" Zoe Schaffer's untitled watercolor; Pierre Flandreau's thickly tactile oil paintings, "Hot Rocks"; Ronald Moe's etching, "Sunflowers"; Suzanne Gomberg's watercolor "Paris Rooftops;" and Bette Klopf's intensely lighted "Old, Old Story."

The exhibit will continue through Feb. 28 at the gallery, 2 Miller Avenue. Viewing hours are from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. on weekdays. and from 10 a.m to 5 p.m. on Saturdays.

PLAY REVIEW

'Caligula' Lacks Villainous Villain

By KAY KSANDA

One of the arch villians of all time came to a church stage this weekend with the opening of Albert Camus' play "Caligula."

It was the Renegade Acting Ensemble which used the Lady of Mount Carmel Church to bring forth the almost demoniacal personality of an evil Ceaser who threw Christians to the lions in 30 A.D. On Sunday mornings it's still altar, pulpit and pews, but on Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights, the beautiful church is transformed into a splendid stage in the round.

The stunning set, the excellent cast, and the power of the subject almost assured the production of success.

The actors aproached the stage in flowing Roman robes. Their voices, their gestures were clear, emphatic, and professional. Ahh, delight, real theater! Everyone was looking for the Emperor Caligula. His sister had died, and his mourning had plunged him into a severe depression.

At last, John Garber as the bereaved and depressed Caligula arrived, but he was more confused than crazy; perhaps it was too early to be psychotic As time went on he became noisier and more preposterous, but he never became really malignant. He murdered, but he never terrorized He was a wild dog, but not an ominous snake.

Without a truly nasty or frightening villain the sensational supporting cast could only deliver their lines perfectly, but never generate the missing dynamic power.

Appearing as Caesonia, Caligula's mistress, Mary Rose McMaster was a noble and many-faced tragic heroine. As Cherea, Will Marchetti was marvelous-absolutely in tune with his character. Robert Ari as Helicon was clear and convincing; Norman Denning as Scipio was nostagically sad, and Charles Werlin as the Old Patrician was strong in his subtle weaknesses.

As Mucius, Larry Lippert wove his timing and character expertly into the intimate group about the emperor, and Bruce Fleischer was an excellent and craven intendant.

One of the highlights of the production was the traumatic death of Lepidus, stunningly dramatized by Max Klein.

Special attention should go to special effects, with lighting by David Saxton and staging by the three directors — Will Marchetti, Larry and John Garbor — plus technical director Bruce Fleischer.

In this setting of handsome stone and stained glass windows, the costuming by Faustin Bray was outstanding, the girl has a gift, but then the whole company is a polished talented professional group.

Performances are every Friday and Saturday nights at 8:30 p.m., and Sundays at 7:30 thru February at 3 Oakdale Ave., Mill Valley

MUSIC REVIEW

'Goldrush To Ragtime' A Pleasant Concert

By VERA M. OLMSTED

The atmosphere of an early California concert hall was amusingly recreated last night at Caleruega Hall, Dominican College.

"Goldrush to Ragtime," a benefit for the American Music Research Center, presented a varied program of music that had been performed in California during the 1850s and 1860s and even included some stride and ragtime piano to close the concert.

Soprano Corinne Swall captivated the audience in her portrayal of Eliza Biscaccianti, "The American Thrush" much as Eliza must have charmed San Francisco audiences in the 1850s.

Miss Swall, authentically costumed in a white, hoop-skirted dress, stayed beautifully in character throughout her performance. She chose five songs from the era, ranging from an Italian aria to several songs by American composers. The Bellini aria, "Qui la voce" from "I Puritani," was particularly successful in showing off Miss Swall's light, agile voice.

R. Lee Carlson accompanied gracefully and in the spirit of the music.

Ronald Ray Williams was introduced next to his role as the American composer-pianist, Louis Moreau Gottschalk, Williams, elegantly dressed and wearing white gloves, strode to the center of the stage stripped off his gloves and threw them into the audience In Gottschalk's time the gloves would have been torn to pieces as mememtos by his adoring admirers. but no one took up the challenge last night.

Williams performed four works in the stylistically exaggerated manner that Gottschalk himself used. One of the pieces "Chant du Soldat," is full of arpeggios, runs and trite pianistic effects. It is a tongue-in-cheek parody of some of the music written at that time and is very amusing and well done.

"The Banjo" is one of Gottschalk s best known works The piano imitates a strummed banjo. and fragments of melodies that resemble "Roll Jordan Roll,' and "Camptown Races" can be heard at times. Williams maintained a driving rhythm in this tricky and brilliant piece. gradually accelerating the tempo until the pounding finish

The audience might have more fully enjoyed the humor and style of Williams' portrayal of Gottschalk if there had been program notes or an introduction to the characteristics of the man and his music.

Clay Roni, whose deft performance as master of ceremony helped to establish the mood of the concert hall, was joined by Earl Shenk in a hilarious drinking song "Cup of Woe." The vaudevillean antics of the two men, combined with Roni's embellishments on the vocal line, brought the first half of the concert to a fitting end.

The Primavera Trio, composed of flutist Edna Comerchero, cellist Jane Rabin, and pianist Janice Eastman, opened the second half of the concert with their own instrumental arrangement of a song by Stephen Massett, American actor, singer and composer and then wnt on to the Trio in G minor, Op. 63, by Carl Maria von Weber.

While there was some good, strong playing by cellist Jane Rabin. the ensemble had difficulty in staying together and seemed to have trouble in hearing each other. The trio is not a great piece of music, but can be quite charming when played to emphasize the contrasts.

Ragtime pianist Ray Skjelbred, who can also be heard on KQED-FM pleased the audience with his interpretations of six rags. The enthusiasm was contagious. and before he was finished, most people were smiling and tapping their feet

Hooked into household plumbing, his "doggy potty" could make curbing a dog a thing of the past.

The boxlike device features a 27-inch belt of astroturf that rotates through a brushing wash and drying cycle after a dog has completed its business.

THIRD SECTION SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA, MONDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1973 17

Tenants, Landlords Square Off

By BECKY LARSEN

About 50 Canal Street apartment house tenants huddled under umbrellas and their building overhangs in San Rafael Saturday for a damp noontime protest against a landlord who is evicting 13 families from two buildings which he calls "the tenements of the neighborhood."

While children held signs that read "Mommie where will we live now?" and "Why discriminate against me?" parents badgered the landlord and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Gordon, of San Rafael, who bought the buildings at 129 and 137 Canal Street six weeks ago.

Gordon and his wife finally agreed to meet with the tenants tonight in a place as yet undecided to discuss the evictions and other grievances.

According to one evicted tenant, Peggy Meza, of 129 Canal, 23 families have already decided to put their rents in escrow until their demands are met.

Most of the dispute Saturday centered on why Gordon was evicting the 13, who received their 30-day notices to leave last Tuesday.

Mrs. Meza, who has two young daughters, said that 90 per cent of those being forced out have children. "Most of our children go to school down the street, and this forces us to take our kids out of school," she said. She has lived in the building six years.

Gordon told the tenants that the 13 are families which have given managers "a hunk of trouble with children and an abundance of pets."

"Do you have your records with you?" snapped Fred Combs of 129 Canal. "I want you to accuse me personally." He and his wife have three children including a 6-month-old baby. They have lived in the building seven months.

"You're trying to make Marin County into a millionaires' country club," yelled another protester.

Another tenant being evicted, Army Sp/4 William Ankenbauer, of 129 Canal, said he found it hard to believe he could have caused trouble since he, his wife and son, 4, have lived in the building one month. He is stationed at the Presidio and said he will try now to get into military housing.

Tenant Robert W. Rehfeldt, of 137 Canal, said that his only child, a 14-year-old boy, is too old to be a problem. He said he thought he got his eviction notice after seven years in the building because of his German shepherd. "Gordon tried to open my door one day to come in and measure something, and the dog started barking at him," he said.

Mrs. Meza also told newsmen that Gordon would raise rents in the buildings as soon as he finishes remodeling the two 20-unit structures. "They're going to be raised so high that the rest of us will have to leave anyway," she said.

Joseph D. Mannino, of the Tenants Action Group of San Francisco, who was at the meeting said that Gordon was one of many landlords planning rent increases of from 5 to 150 per cent now that Phase II rent controls have been lifted. He said that his group of tenant counselors plans to help the Canal Street tenants launch a court suit against the landlord.

Present rents in the buildings now range from $165 to $185 monthly. Gordon acknowledged that he would raise them to $210 per month in the apartments which are all two-bedroom units.

But, he said, the increases are justified in view of $90,000 worth of repairs he is making. "Right now the stairs are falling down and there are holes in the decks," he said. "All the concrete around the foundations has settled away from the building. There are two swimming pools but they can't be used because they've been condemned."

Gordon said that neighbors in the area called his two buildings "tenements."

The Gordons said that they think the buildings are poor place to rear children. "Right now there are 45 of them here with no play area," said Mrs. Gordon "The garbage cans are not a good place for them to play."

She said that from now on they planned to admit only families with one child each, preferably infants.

Tenants complained that the repairs were making life in the building impossible. Several objected that garbage cans and mailboxes were moved without notice and that workmen walked into their apartments without knocking.

Talks Being Held On U.S. Sale Of Cotton To China

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Agriculture Department reports that "serious private negotiations" are under way for sales of American cotton to China.

The department, in its "Foreign Agriculture" magazine made available Sunday, said it had no information of any sales pacts being concluded. But it said earlier estimates of China's 1972-73 cotton crop had been revised from "a few hundred thousand bales" above the previous year to somewhat below the 1971-72 level because of drought.

The U.S. 1972 crop was well in excess of demand. A recent government report estimated that about 2 million bales of last year's crop had no immediate market and will be added to a carryover surplus.

Fight Quelled In Larkspur

Larkspur and Corte Madera police broke up a fight, involving about 70 youths in the streets of Larkspur Saturday night.

Larkspur police were called when a fist fight erupted at the intersection of Ajax Street and Hawthorne Avenue at 10:55 p.m. stemming from a party at the home of Zvi Danenberg at 232 Hawthorne Avenue.

Larkspur police said today that the intersection was cleared, and Danenberg concurred with their request that the party should be disbanded. Everyone left without further trouble.

New Storm Heading In For Tonight

A new Pacific storm is picking up speed and heading for Northern California, bringing more rain to Marin County by tonight, the National Weather Service reports.

San Rafael recorded .22 of an inch of rain from noon Friday to noon Saturday, but only a trace had fallen to noon today. Rainfall in the northern county area was heavier. Novato reported an even two inches from early Saturday until 8 a.m. today while Sausalito remained fairly dry with only .08.

Marin residents can expect the sun, which poked its face out intermitently over the weekend, to disappear entirely with chances of rain set at 40 per cent tonight rising to 70 per cent by tomorrow.

Temperatures are expected to remain about the same, dropping to the mid-40s tonight, while winds will be southerly from 15 to 30 miles per hour, the weatherman said.

Auto Is Found After Wreck

A 1963 stationwagon owned by George Edward Willis of 10 Park Way, Larkspur, was stolen early Saturday morning, and found at 1:15 a.m. after it hit a pickup truck parked on Millard Avenue.

Larkspur police said Willis parked his car outside his home at 7 p.m., and it was found after hitting a 1972 Dodge pickup owned by Stephen Joseph Ford, and parked outside his home at 38 Millard Avenue.

Both vehicles were damaged, said police. A witness reported seeing a long-haired youth running near the scene.

Milk Advisers Select Chairman

Leo Lavio, Petaluma dairyman, has been elected chairman of the North Bay District of the California Milk Advisory Board.

Others elected were Gordon Thornton of Tomales, vice chairman, and Walter Stonetta of Point Arena, secretary.

Local dairymen serving on the panel include James Grossi of Novato; Armin Truttman and Donald Mc Isaac of Olema and John King and Stewart Zimmerman of Petaluma.

Dead Trees Said A Fire Hazard

OAKLAND (AP) — Officials say an estimated two million eucalyptus trees killed in the severe freeze last December should be cut down and removed because they pose a severe fire threat.

The cutting project could cost $20 million, but the dried trees endanger hundreds of homes and other buildings in the Oakland and Berkeley hill area, officials say.

The dead trees are spread over 3,000 acres in the hilly residential sections, on land owned by the University of California and the regional parks.

County, city and university officials have agreed to form a committee to see how to avoid a fire catastrophe.

Suspect In Burglary Try Is Held

The man, Scott Doyle Weaver was to appear in Marin Municipal Court today.

Larskpur police said Weaver and a 16-year-old San Anselmo girl were seen by police walking on South Eliseo Drive shortly before the pharmacy's burglar alarm sounded at 10:19 p.m.

A small window to the right of the shop's front door had been smashed open, and the glass laid neatly in a pile on the sidewalk. Inside, a burned match and a powdery substance were found on the rug.

Police said Weaver's car was stopped at the intersection of Via Hidalgo and Bon Air Road shortly afterwards, and there were cuts on Weaver's shoe and trousers, and a powder was found on the front seat.

Ronald Quinton Robertson, the pharmacy's owner, said the rug had been vacuumed before the store was closed.

Police arrested Weaver on suspicion of attempted burglary. As there was no physical evidence to link the girl to the break-in she was turned over to her father.

Trip To Washington Will Be Considered

The Shoreline Unified School District board will consider authorizing a trip to Washington, D.C., for Tomales High School junior and seniors at a special meeting at 7:30 p.m. today at the high school.

The trip would be from April 4-20.

Chemist Is Candidate For Seat On Council

A research chemist has filed for election to the San Rafael City Council April 17.

Richard C. Fox, a research chemist for Chevron Co., submitted petitions of candidacy late Friday, according to Asst. City Clerk Renee J. Burdisso.

The 45-year-old Fox, who has described himself as a conservative conservationist, has called for more aid to small businessmen, use of volunteer aid in city hall to cut staff workloads, elimination of parking meters and a "continuing emphasis on unsophisticated good old-fashioned American local patriotism and teamwork."

Fox has pledged to champion the interests of residents "who are groaning under the weight of ever-increasing tax loads."

He has also proposed an incentive program whereby city employees who cut municipal costs receive cash bonuses.

Fox, of 127 Humboldt Street, received his bachelor's degree in chemistry from Massachusetts Institute of Technology and won doctorate honors in chemistry from the University of Illinois.

Fox joins Jack G. Nixon, chairman of the county planning commission, Thomas R. O'Toole, chairman of the city's planning commission, and Leo Tinkler, a real estate agent, in filing papers for the race for two seats.

Carl J. (Red) Brown, athletic director of Sir Francis Drake High School, has received nomination papers but had not filed by 10 a.m. today. Incumbent Councilman Lawrence E. Mulryan, who has announced his intention to run for election has not yet picked up petitions of candidacy.

Filing deadline is noon Thursday.

Prison Inmate Reported Dead

San Quentin officials have reported that inmate Roy Salas, 33, died in the prison hospital at 1:45 p.m. Saturday.

According to Associate Warden James W. Park, Salas had a history of epilepsy and apparently died from a condition involving that illness. He had become ill suddenly Saturday morning. An autopsy is pending.

A native of Arizona, Salas was convicted of grand theft in Los Angeles County in 1963 and sentenced to six months to 10 years in prison, Park said.

He has been in several California institutions.

According to Park, Salas assaulted personnel at the California Medical Facility at Vacaville twice and was subsequently convicted in Solano County in 1966 and 1968 on battery charges. In both cases he received sentences of six months to three years.

Location Studied For School Office

The Novato Unified School District board will consider the cost of renting office space at the San Marin Professional Building for the district administration at 8 p.m. tomorrow at Novato High School lecture hall.

The administration is now housed in permanent and portable buildings at the Marion School site. The board is considering using the permanent building for North Marin High School, a continuation school, and the portable building at Novato High School.

Flooding Report Due Council

The Corte Madera Town Council will get a report on recent flooding in the town at its meeting tonight at 7:30 p.m. at the town hall, plus a petition signed by 18 residents complaining about flooding on Tamalpais Drive.

Town public works director, Athur N. Morrison, says in his report that flooding occurred in six areas of Corte Madera: Birch Avenue and Apache Court; the Harbor Drive, Echo Avenue and San Clemente Creek area; Canal behind the Paradise Shopping Center; the 400 blocks of Tamalpais Drive and Manzanita Avenue; Lucky Drive; and the site of the proposed Hahn regional shopping center.

Most of the problems were related to exceptionally high tides, reports Morrison, with the exception of Manzanita Avenue which may be caused by an inadequate drainage pipe.

The council also will be asked to raise dog impound fees, to transfer funds to pay more police department overtime, and to consider its policy on development of land that's outside the town limits "but within its sphere of influence."

Woman Reports Her Dog Bitten

Her Lhasa Apso dog was badly bitten by a large red chow dog on Thursday evening, Anita Sommers of 78 Mariner Green Drive, Corte Madera, told town police.

Mrs. Sommers said she was walking her pet on Mariner Green Drive when the chow charged from a driveway and bit her dog on the stomach and thighs.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

South Must Have Strong Plan Of Action To Keep East Out

Any good lawyer can assure you that the laws of your country or state permit you to play a side suit before drawing trumps. This shows the wisdom of legislators in all parts of the world and should silence youthful critics. If the law compelled you to draw trumps, how could you make four hearts in today's hand?

DIAMOND ACTION

West opened the jack of diamonds, and dummy won. There was no need to draw trumps because declarer had no tricks in the side suits that needed protection.

South began by running all of dummy's top diamonds. The idea was to get rid of the king of spades as quickly as possible.

When South had succeeded in discarding the king of spades, he led the jack of spades from dummy. East put up the ace, hoping declarer still had the queen of spades, but South ruffed with a high trump.

CLUB DISCARDED

A trump to dummy's king was followed by the ten of spades. East naturally played low, and South discarded a low club. This allowed West to win with the queen of spades.

West returned a trump, but now declarer could draw trumps, ending in the dummy, followed by the nine and eight of spades, on which he discarded low clubs. West still got his ace of clubs, but he couldn't stop declarer from winning 11 tricks.

KEY TO CAMPAIGN

The key to South's campaign was that he prevented East from gaining the lead. East would have been happy to lead the jack of clubs through South's king, and then the fat would have been in the fire.

DAILY QUESTION

Your partner opens with one no-trump (16 to 18 points), and the next player passes.

You hold:
♠ - Q 6 4
♥ - 7 6 2
♦ - J 10 9
♣ - A Q 10 7.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid three no-trump. Since you have 9 points, the combined count must be 25 to 27 points. Moreover, you have two tens and a nine to help partner if the combined count is as low as 25 points. Do not be content to invite a game when you can afford to bid it by yourself.

Land Rezoning To Be Considered

Prezoning for newly annexed land on South Ely Boulevard at Casa Grande Road will be considered at the Petaluma City Council meeting today at 7:30 p.m. at city hall.

The agricultural land will be considered for preliminary designation as a planned unit development district.

The council also will officially award housing development allocations for 1973-74 and consider purchasing new equipment for the animal control center and fire department.

BIRTHDAY QUIZ

By GORDON B. GREB

Who said that? Folks to quote were born today but can you tell which one said the following:

1. John F. Kennedy or Adlai Stevenson was the Democratic party's presidential candidate who said: "The ordeal of the 20th Century — the bloodiest, most turbulent era of the Christian age —is far from over. Sacrifice, patience, understanding and implacable purpose may be our lot for years to come. Let's face it. Let's talk sense to the American people. . ." The year: 1952.

2. Patrick Henry or James Otis was the fiery American Revolutionary war patriot who said: ". . .No man can take my property from me without my consent; if he does, he deprives me of my liberty and makes me a slave. . .The very act of taxing exercised over those who are not represented appears to me to be depriving them of one of their most essential rights as freemen. . ." The year: 1764.

3. Hank Aaron or Willie Mays is that major league batting champion, .39 today, who is challenging the homerun record of Babe Ruth and says, "I have worked terribly hard at this thing. . .A pitcher can only do so much. He can come in or out and up and down. But he must throw the ball." The year: 1972.

4. Norton Simon or Henry Ford II is the American businessman who is 66 today, believes right-wing politics has failed, saying, "We've always had a generation gap. It's nothing new. But at the accelerated pace at which we live and learn today, the gap is wider than ever. . ." The year: 1971.

ANSWERS

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Chest Pain Or Distress Often Early Sign Of Heart Disease

What is an early sign of coronary heart disease? Chest pain or distress (angina pectoris) usually following effort or excitement. We hesitate to mention this because many people have chest pain that does not originate from the heart. Some will worry unnecessarily. But if there is any reason for doubt, we suggest that the physician be consulted.

Doctors David Short and Mary Stowers of the British Heart Foundation reviewed the histories of 320 victims of coronary heart disease and traced the symptom back to the first time it developed. Those who collapsed and died were not included. We know that many of these people had other cardiac symptoms that went undetected.

IN 94 PER CENT, the earliest sign of coronary disease was pain or discomfort in the chest or adjacent areas. In the majority, the angina (pain) was located in the region of the breastbone; in a third, it appeared as a band across the chest. In one-tenth, pain or discomfort was on the left side of the chest. And in an equal number, in one or both arms or in the neck. Distress was described as a sense of tightness, constriction, or gripping in the chest with or without a feeling of choking or suffocation. Only seven of the 320 claimed the pain was severe. Severe pain is not typical of coronary heart disease.

Still others mentioned that the distress appeared as a sensation of pressure like a lump, a blown-up feeling, dull or dragging pain. Some described it as raw, sore, or burning. A small percentage believed that the earliest manifestation was breathlessness, or unexplainable fatigue, fainting, palpitation, or dizziness.

MORE THAN HALF the victims develop pain or distress during physical effort or excitement. This is characteristic when angina is of heart origin. If the distress is associated with excitement, care must be taken not to blame it on nervousness.

In over half the patients, the electrocardiogram showed major abnormalities, but in the remainder, the changes were minor or absent. In other words, the device is valuable, but no infallible, in making the diagnosis. Listening to the heart is of little help.

Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.

STREP INFECTIONS

L.D. writes: Is there such a thing as a strep cold? Could it lead to rheumatic fever in the same way as a strep throat?

REPLY

Yes. Streptococci may invade the nose, throat, tonsils, sinuses, or lungs and lead to various kinds of respiratory ailments. In a susceptible person, involvement of any of these structures can be followed by rheumatic fever.

BREAST MOLES

REPLY

No, they are no different from moles elsewhere on the body. But they should not be irritated and see your physician if the lesions change in size or color. Our leaflet on moles can be obtained by sending stamped, self-addressed envelope with request.

DEAFNESS

Mr. M.T. writes: My hearing nerve is damaged. Will taking aspirin do it more harm?

REPLY

No.

ULCER IN CHILD

O.C. writes: What would cause a peptic ulcer in a 2-year-old girl to bleed?

REPLY

BLADDER CAPACITY

Mrs. K. writes: I read your article about increasing bladder capacity in children. Can an adult bladder be stretched by following the same procedure of holding the urine of longer and longer periods?

REPLY

Yes, but there is no need to torture yourself unless a good reason exists.

EX-HUSBAND'S TRAITS

A reader writes: If my wife and I had children, would they show any of the traits of her former husband?

REPLY

Not unless some of his personality rubbed off on your wife or you are related to hubby No. 1.

ANGINA PECTORIS

E.N. writes: Recently I heard of a woman who was cured of angina pectoris. Is it possible?

REPLY

Yes, but let's keep our fingers crossed. This special type of chest pain develops when the heart muscle fails to get sufficient nourishment. The coronary artery usually is too narrow and hardened to deliver enough blood to the heart muscle during exercise or excitement. The supply is adequate during rest or while calm, explaining why distress disappears at these times. Cure may occur when new channels open up to supply additional blood. When the symptom is associated with anemia, cure takes place after the blood count returns to normal.

Driver Grants Nude's Request

CINCINNATI (UPI) — What do you say to a naked lady when she asks to be taken to the police? If you are a Cincinnati Transit Co. driver, you take her to the police.

The driver in question was en route to the Cincinnati Zoo early Saturday when the woman, apparently intoxicated, flagged his bus down.

The woman rode for two blocks—still naked—aboard the bus before the nervous driver spotted a telephone, stopped and called police.

Mussolini Sword Sold At Auction

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The silver presentation sword of Benito Mussolini was sold at auction Sunday to Stanley T. Wilker of Palos Verdes, Calif., for $3,000.

The sword is decorated with precious jewels and fascist symbols and inscribed "Il Duce." Wilker, a graduate of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, said he would loan the sword to the academy's museum.

Marinite Arraigned On Knifing

I-J Special Report

SONOMA — John C. Batts, 21, of San Rafael, has been arraigned in Southern Sonoma Municipal Court on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon in the knifing of a former world wristwrestling champion.

Judge Alexander J. McMahon set a hearing for Wednesday at 10 a.m. in Sonoma to consider reducing Batts's $50,000 bail.

Batts turned himself in last week at the Sonoma County Sheriff's Department. He had been wanted in connection with the Jan. 20 stabbing of James Dolcini, 22, of 6970 Red Hill Road, Petaluma, during a disturbance at the Hideaway Bar.

The incident led to a riot involving more than 150 persons and the mob tried to lynch the wrong man in the confusion, police said. Officers from four departments were forced to hold the crowd back with dogs.

Dolcini, who was world wristwrestling champion in 1970 and 1971, is the son of Arnold Dolcini Jr., a rancher and member of the Marin County Board of Education.

Growth Policy To Be Studied

New residential developments and a proposed growth control policy will be reviewed at the Rohnert Park City Council meeting at 7 p.m. today at city hall.

The council will review an environmental impact report for the 680-acre Shapell Industries' development plan and hear a proposal by Councilman Vernon P. Smith for community growth controls.

The council also will review plans for construction of a bridge on Hinebaugh Creek and consider setting a date for a town meeting.

Trustees Will Get Planning Report

The Fairfax School District board will hear a report from the district's planning committee when it meets at 7:45 p.m. tomorrow in White Hill School.

The committee will report on multiple use of White Hill School, the sale of Central School and proposed consolidation of other school facilities.

Transit Board To Study Pact For Railroad Funds

A proposed five-party agreement that could clear the way for a $2.5 million federal loan for acquisition of abandoned railroad rights-of-way in Marin will be considered tomorrow by the Marin County Transit District board.

The board, which will meet at 8:30 a.m. at the Civic Center, is listed as one of the five parties. The agreement would pave the way for the Golden Gate Bridge District to request the federal loan. Other parties include the bridge district, and the cities of Larkspur, Corte Madera and Mill Valley.

Most of the funds would be used to purchase an eight-mile stretch of abandoned right-of-way between Corte Madera and Sausalito.

Mill Valley, through which the right-of-way runs, has opposed the bridge district buying the stretch because it fears a massive rapid transit system. The city council had indicated it would prefer the stretch be used as a bicycle and pedestrian path.

The agreement would give the cities veto power over how the right-of-way would be used and would allow the cities to purchase portions within their city limits at any time by paying the bridge district the original acquisition cost.

The Corte Madera Town Council and Mill Valley City Council are expected to consider the agreement tonight and the Larkspur City Council on Wednesday.

The bridge district board, meanwhile, has scheduled a hearing on the matter for Feb. 14 at 8 p.m. at the bridge district office.

PUC Slates Hearing On Federal Act

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A hearing by the state Public Utilities Commission on its proposal to comply with the Environmental Protection Act will be held this month.

The hearing will be at 10 a.m. on Feb. 21 in the State Building, 350 McAllister Street. The room number will be posted in the lobby.

The hearing before PUC Examiner Donald B. Jarvis will be to determine how to comply with the act, which requires "evaluation of projects and the preparation of environmental impact reports."

The commission asked that anyone proposing an amendment or deletion to its proposed rules, or proposing a different method, submit an original and 12 copies to it by Friday.

Anyone who wants to testify should notify the commission by Friday.

Light Standard Bids Received

Dale Contractors of Monrovia was the apparent low bidder on a project to replace light standards on Highway 37, 10 and 12 in Marin and Sonoma County.

The low bid was $19,019. The new standards will have bases which if struck will give way easily, lessening the severity of impact.

Doctor Tells Kansas Man How To Help Shrink Painful Swelling Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues

...caused by inflammation and infection.

Prairie Village, Kan.—Mr. Joseph Sutton reports: "My doctor suggested suppositories. I chose Preparation H suppositories. On a physical check-up my doctor noted how effectively it works."

(Note: Doctors' tests have proved Preparation H® actually helps shrink swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues caused by inflammation. It's so effective that in many cases, the first applications give prompt, temporary relief from pain and itching in such tissues. There's no other formula like doctor-tested Preparation H.)

Legislative Program To Be Studied

Marin County's proposed 1973 legislative program will be considered tomorrow by the county board of supervisors, meeting at 9 a.m. at the Civic Center.

The legislative program, submitted annually by the board to local lawmakers in Sacramento, outlines the county's wants and needs. This year it proposes 17 bills for introduction and 20 for support if introduced by someone else.

Among the 17 bills recommended for introduction is one which would force city redevelopment agencies to obtain the approval of other taxing agencies before siphoning off property tax revenue.

Under existing state law, local redevelopment agencies are permitted to float redevelopment bonds and pay them off by using diverted property tax revenues from other agencies. No approval is needed.

The county of Marin has filed suit against the San Rafael Redevelopment Agency contesting that point and others.

Another proposal would take away the power of the judiciary to order security expenditures without the approval of the supervisors.

A brief rundown of other major legislation proposed follows:

A bill to clarify the controversial Marks vs. Whitney court decision. The decision makes it unclear whether the owner of a developed tidelot, affected by the decision, can use his land.

A bill to allow local government to contract with developers to limit sale and rental of low and moderate-income family housing in return for special development considerations.

A bill to eliminate the option of a blood test as one of the methods of obtaining evidence of inebriation. The tests are expensive and other means are available.

A bill authorizing the courts to require, as a condition of probation, that persons convicted of druken driving and inebriation pay county testing and expert witness costs in proving guilt.

A bill requiring an annual purge of voter registration lists rather than once every two years as is now the case.

The board's agenda also includes a hearing on the controversial Highlands housing project near Tiburon, a report on ambulance service and cost in Marin, and an explanation from the chairman of the Juvenile Delinquency Prevention Commission on comments that he hadinvestigated fellow commissioners.

Education Board Will Award Bids

The Marin County Board of Education will award contracts for school supplies, bulk paper, and deliveries at its meeting tomorrow at 8 p.m. at the county schools' office, Corte Madera.

Also on a long agenda are first readings of some sections of the 1973-74 budget, principally items requiring state and federal funds.

Joseph Amato, director of business services, will give a report on the impact of Senate Bill 90, the state tax shift school finance legislation, on county schools.

FLOOD VICTIM SAVES DOG

Election Of Blacks Seen As Beginning Of Trend

ATLANTA (UPI) — The election of 598 black officeholders across the South in 1972— including two members of Congress—marks a "spiraling trend which yet has far to go before it reaches its peak," the Voter Education Project (VEP) said Sunday.

The fact that 1,276 black candidates ran across the South in 1972 was a high water mark for Negro participation in Dixie politics, the VEP said. VEP is a private, nonprofit, educational organization that promotes minority political participation in 11 Southern states.

"The most important victories were those of Andrew Young of Atlanta and Barbara Jordan of Houston, Texas," executive director John Lewis said. "More than just a victory for their immediate constituency, their election as representatives in the United State Congress has great meaning for blacks throughout the South,"

Lewis said five of 10 city council seats in Selma, Ala. went to blacks. Alabama led all states in the number of blacks elected to office with 117 of 242 black candidates running successfully.

Selma and Dallas County, which saw bloody civil rights battles during the 1960's, had only 2.3 per cent of its black citizens registered to vote in 1965. But last year, 67 per cent of the county's blacks were on voter lists.

Arkansas, the last Southern legislature without a black member, elected one black to the state senate; two others won election to the state house of representatives and 96 others captured local offices.

"Such victories restore faith in the political process and keep alive our dreams for a positive transformation of the southern region," said Lewis.

He said more blacks went to the national conventions in 1972 than ever before and blacks were instrumental in the passage of prison reform legislation in Louisiana and open housing laws in Virginia. Black voters also provided a margin of victory for many white candidates, including Gov. Edwin Edwards of Louisiana, said Lewis.

Young's election as Georgia's first black congressman led the VEP's report on the state. Two blacks won election to the state senate and 14 others were sent to the state house of representatives. In other races, 46 blacks were victorious.

Louisiana appeals court Judge Ernest Morial won the highest elected court post held by a black in the South. Otherwise, 86 blacks won posts in Louisiana elections, including eight to the state house of representatives.

South Carolina elected 59 black officials in 1972, including four state representatives. North Carolina had 24 successful black office seekers.

In Tennessee, the first black to run for the U. S. Congress in modern times met with defeat, but 37 other blacks were elected.

Texas blacks placed 46 officeholders, with 27 black officials being elected in Mississippi and 20 in Virginia.

However, one VEP official, Harry Huge, said the figures only "scratched the surface, both in terms of the potential of minority voters yet to be registered and the relatively small number of black elected officials."

Broadcast License Law Asked

I-J Special Report

WASHINGTON — A bill to extend from three to five years the validity of broadcasters' licenses has been introduced by Rep. Don H. Clausen, R-First District.

Clausen said he was disturbed "over the possibility that the licensing renewal procedure could allow licenses to become a political football with government intervention in program content and editorial policy."

The bill would give license holders preference in renewals by the Federal Communications Commission if they demonstrate "substantial" performance of their duties to serve the public, according to the bill.

Clausen said the bill was needed "because of the increasing instability and lack of continuity in the FCC's handling of license renewals. Conflicting decisions by the FCC and federal courts have given rise to a chaotic situation that Congress should resolve."

The bill was referred the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee.

Ex-Convict Charged In Attack Rampage

TUSKEGEE, Ala. (UPI) — An ex-convict was being held at an undisclosed state prison today charged in a rampage of rapes and stabbings that brought state troopers and a standby force of National Guardsmen to this terrified city of 11,000.

Macon County Sheriff Lucius Amerson said Sunday night the suspect, David L. Goode of Tuskegee, "was secretly transported to a state institution for safety reasons and to preserve law and order." He declined to elaborate on the move.

The 65 state troopers who arrived Saturday to help in the search for suspects remained on patrol today, but the 100 National Guardsmen who stood by on alert near this city Saturday had been pulled out.

Amerson said that although some victims indicated there might have been more than one assailant, Goode was "the only one we have with concrete evidence. At present there's nobody we can link him with. We'd like to think he is the only one involved."

Goode was held without bail on six charges, including the murder of Evelyn Page, one of three elderly sisters raped and stabbed at their home Friday night.

He was charged with assault with intent to murder the other sisters, Carribac Carr and Josie Green, who were reported in critical condition at a hospital.

Mayor pro tem Willie Whitehead said Mayor Johnny Ford asked for the troopers and Guardsmen to back up the 50 local law officers because "whatever it took to protect people in their homes, we wanted to have it.

Smith Williams, Ford's assistant for public affairs, said "There's no sensible motive for the crime. Whoever did it apparently has some hangup over elderly women."

Williams said Goode was arrested without incident Saturday night a few hours after "someone called the mayor and said a man had been loudmouthing in public about what he had done."

"It turned out to be a pretty good lead," Williams said.

To Resume Study

The Mill Valley-Sausalito Joint School Committee, formed to study ways of increased cooperation between the Mill Valley and Sausalito School districts, will resume consideration of Joint programs at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the Mill Valley Middle School.

Charged With A Lesser Crime

Two men arrested on suspicion of burglarizing a San Anselmo natural foods store that has gone out of business have been charged in Marin Municipal Court with the lesser crime of malicious mischief.

Kenneth Charles Caramella, 27, of San Jose, and Dennis Stephen Morgan, 30, of Los Gatos, pleaded innocent Thursday and were slated to return to court Feb. 21 for a pretrial conference.

The two were arrested in San Jose Jan. 26 after San Anselmo police traced $700 in equipment reported missing from Everybody's Natural Food Store at 1 Saunders Avenue to a San Jose supplier of organic produce. Caramella and Morgan work for the company, The Well, which reportedly was owed money by the San Anselmo store.

Picket Protest Yorty Meeting

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Pickets marched in front of city hall when Mayor Sam Yorty met with the mayor of Moscow, Vladimir Promyslov, during the weekend.

The pickets protested Russian treatment of Jews wishing to go to Israel. One protester called the meeting "a slap in the face" to the city's Jews, "as if the mayor had met with Hitler if this were 1939." Yorty said he told his Moscow counterpart that American Jews are concerned about the treatment of Jews in Russia.

ATTENTION:
SELF-EMPLOYED INDIVIDUALS

If you have one or more employees, you may have previsouly considered a tax-deductible retirement plan (Keogh) but abandoned the idea when you saw the cost of including your employee(s).

If you are older than your employee(s), these costs can be substantially reduced. Take an actual case, for example:

	Age	Earnings	Keogh Contribution
Owner	58	$20,000	$2,000
Employee	29	7,000	124 (!)
		Total Tax Deduction:	$2,124

In most plans, the owner's contribution for the employee would have had to be $700. But this owner's plan isn't like most Keogh plans!

If you are older than your employees and still don't have a retirement plan, perhaps you should take another look.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Chest Pain Or Distress Often Early Sign Of Heart Disease

What is an early sign of coronary heart disease? Chest pain or distress (angina pectoris) usually following effort or excitement. We hesitate to mention this because many people have chest pain that does not originate from the heart. Some will worry unnecessarily. But if there is any reason for doubt, we suggest that the physician be consulted.

Doctors David Short and Mary Stowers of the British Heart Foundation reviewed the histories of 320 victims of coronary heart disease and traced the symptom back to the first time it developed. Those who collapsed and died were not included. We know that many of these people had other cardiac symptoms that went undetected.

IN 94 PER CENT, the earliest sign of coronary disease was pain or discomfort in the chest or adjacent areas. In the majority, the angina (pain) was located in the region of the breastbone; in a third, it appeared as a band across the chest. In one-tenth, pain or discomfort was on the left side of the chest. And in an equal number, in one or both arms or in the neck. Distress was described as a sense of tightness, constriction, or gripping in the chest with or without a feeling of choking or suffocation. Only seven of the 320 claimed the pain was severe. Severe pain is not typical of coronary heart disease.

Still others mentioned that the distress appeared as a sensation of pressure like a lump, a blown-up feeling, dull or dragging pain. Some described it as raw, sore, or burning. A small percentage believed that the earliest manifestation was breathlessness, or unexplainable fatigue, fainting, palpitation, or dizziness.

MORE THAN HALF the victims develop pain or distress during physical effort or excitement. This is characteristic when angina is of heart origin. If the distress is associated with excitement, care must be taken not to blame it on nervousness.

In over half the patients, the electrocardiogram showed major abnormalities, but in the remainder, the changes were minor or absent. In other words, the device is valuable, but no infallible, in making the diagnosis. Listening to the heart is of little help.

Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.

STREP INFECTIONS

L.D. writes: Is there such a thing as a strep cold? Could it lead to rheumatic fever in the same way as a strep throat?

REPLY

Yes. Streptococci may invade the nose, throat, tonsils, sinuses, or lungs and lead to various kinds of respiratory ailments. In a susceptible person, involvement of any of these structures can be followed by rheumatic fever.

BREAST MOLES

REPLY

No, they are no different from moles elsewhere on the body. But they should not be irritated and see your physician if the lesions change in size or color. Our leaflet on moles can be obtained by sending stamped, self-addressed envelope with request.

DEAFNESS

Mr. M.T. writes: My hearing nerve is damaged. Will taking aspirin do it more harm?

REPLY

No.

ULCER IN CHILD

O.C. writes: What would cause a peptic ulcer in a 2-year-old girl to bleed?

REPLY

BLADDER CAPACITY

Mrs. K. writes: I read your article about increasing bladder capacity in children. Can an adult bladder be stretched by following the same procedure of holding the urine of longer and longer periods?

REPLY

Yes, but there is no need to torture yourself unless a good reason exists.

EX-HUSBAND'S TRAITS

A reader writes: If my wife and I had children, would they show any of the traits of her former husband?

REPLY

Not unless some of his personality rubbed off on your wife or you are related to hubby No. 1.

ANGINA PECTORIS

E.N. writes: Recently I heard of a woman who was cured of angina pectoris. Is it possible?

REPLY

Yes, but let's keep our fingers crossed. This special type of chest pain develops when the heart muscle fails to get sufficient nourishment. The coronary artery usually is too narrow and hardened to deliver enough blood to the heart muscle during exercise or excitement. The supply is adequate during rest or while calm, explaining why distress disappears at these times. Cure may occur when new channels open up to supply additional blood. When the symptom is associated with anemia, cure takes place after the blood count returns to normal.

Driver Grants Nude's Request

CINCINNATI (UPI) — What do you say to a naked lady when she asks to be taken to the police? If you are a Cincinnati Transit Co. driver, you take her to the police.

The driver in question was en route to the Cincinnati Zoo early Saturday when the woman, apparently intoxicated, flagged his bus down.

The woman rode for two blocks—still naked—aboard the bus before the nervous driver spotted a telephone, stopped and called police.

Mussolini Sword Sold At Auction

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The silver presentation sword of Benito Mussolini was sold at auction Sunday to Stanley T. Wilker of Palos Verdes, Calif., for $3,000.

The sword is decorated with precious jewels and fascist symbols and inscribed "Il Duce." Wilker, a graduate of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, said he would loan the sword to the academy's museum.

Very Rough Day For Tom Watson

If you watched the television portion of the Hawaiian Open golf tournament over the weekend I bet you were pulling for young Tom Watson.

There was this 23-year-old boyish looking kid leading all the big names in the field through the first two rounds. Then Saturday, just in time for the TV cameras, Watson holed three consecutive birdie putts of 20, 30 and 25 feet on television holes, 15, 16 and 17. Time ran out and we didn't get a chance to see him par the 18th hole to take a four-stroke lead at the tourney's three-quarter mark.

YOUNG MR. WATSON, as the story goes, didn't get much sleep Saturday night. It's no easy thing to be staring first prize of $40,000 in the eyes.

Then came Sunday and the showdown for the young man who is on the tour for just his second year. By the time the TV cameras clicked on, Watson's lead had disappeared and now he was tied for first, but sinking fast. A double bogie on hole number 13 had helped that fat four-stroke bulge vanish. Yes, No. 13 had been unlucky for the curly-haired Watson.

STILL IN THE fight, there was Watson faced with a chip shot to the green which would have to carry over a sand bunker. These are the kind of shots that make you and I tremble. Too often we look up and send the ball straight to the sand as if directed by radar. Watson's ball had ended up in a tire track of some kind and he requested but was refused relief from the lie. When he finally chipped up, it looked just like my last chip shot on the ninth hole at Peacock Gap. Watson's ball was lofted directly into the sand.

He shook his head, walked up to the ball and did the same thing I did last time I was faced with a bunker shot at Indian Valley. He got too much ball, not enough sand, and sent it soaring over the green.

WHEN I MEET disaster in the sand dunes of a golf course, it just costs me a chance to break 100. For Watson, a bright fellow who just a few semesters back was deep in his books at Stanford University, it meant much more.

That's why I was really pulling for him when he finally reached the 18th hole and had a long putt for an eagle 3. He came close and had a tap-in for a birdie which gave him third place and a check for $14,200. He was still trying to fight back on that 18th green. Orville Moody was a stroke better and made $22,800, but the brass ring went to John Schlee, 15 under par with 273, three strokes better than Watson who had shot a 75 on this closing day on the Waialae Country Club course in Honolulu.

SCHLEE, 33, has been battling golf courses and other golfers for eight years on the tour and this was his first victory, so the top prize was well deserved.

Anyway, if you were watching the tourney in color, wasn't it beautiful? Hawaii is really a land of paradise. When I was there last March during some Giant exhibition baseball games against a Japanese team, I broke away from the hustle and bustle of Waikiki Beach long enough to drive around the Waialae course and the setting is really breathtaking. But alas. I didn't have my golf clubs along.

Marin Cagers Smash Solano, 89-42

By LEW CODDINGTON

A basketball team with an 18-3 record played a 4-17 team Saturday night in Kentfield, and the outcome was exactly what could be expected, only more so.

College of Marin, making 10 shots in a row at one stage and scoring 18 points in a row at another, pulverized Solano College of Suisun City in a Camino Norte Conference game before about 400 fans, 89-42.

The beating was even worse than the final score indicated, if that's possible. With eight minutes left, Marin had a 75-29 lead, and twice later got the margin up to 48 points.

The game concluded the first round-robin of the conference schedule, and left Marin (now 19-3) tied for first place at 6-1 with West Valley College of Campbell, 85-58 victor over Canada College of Redwood City Saturday night. Solano (now 4-18) which has not won a CNC game since 1971, is 0-7.

Wil Garner scored 18 points, Len Smith and Joe DeMaestri 14 apiece and Joe Casteel 10 for Marin. When the reserves entered, John Crozier and Mike Lindquist distinguished themselves, Crozier getting 11 points and four rebounds and Lindquist seven points and eight rebounds.

"We went to the offensive boards tonight, which is something we didn't do against Skyline Tuesday (in a 74-69 victory)," said Tar head coach John Panagakis. Marin outrebounded Solano, 50-27.

The Tars left no doubt from the beginning, opening up a 13-2 lead. When Solano closed to 13-7, Marin went on another tear to make the score 24-7.

The 21st and 22nd points came as Smith fed DeMaestri, and began the string of 10 straight successful shots from the floor. DeMaestri and Garner made four each and Lindquist and Casteel hit the others. At the end of the hot spell, Marin was ahead, 40-13.

The Tars led at halftime, 49-23, and a little later were on top 55-27 when they went on another rampage, scoring 18 straight for a 73-27 lead. DeMaestri, Garner and Casteel got four points each.

Solano scored only six points in the first 12 minutes after intermission, and just 19 in the second half, the seventh time this year Marin has held an opponent to 20 or less in a half.

Sonoma Five Rallies, Tops Hayward By 11

By PAUL DWORIN

For the second game in a row, Sonoma State college fell behind early and then buried an opponent in the second half with an avalanche of points as the Cossacks beat visiting Hayward State, 76-65, for a Far Western Conference basketball victory in Rohnert Park Saturday.

The two weekend victories raised the Cossacks conference mark to 5-1; they are now in a first-place tie with Chico State, 99-89 victors over Sacramento State Saturday. Sonoma visits Chico Saturday, 8 p.m.

Down 41-34 at halftime, the Cossacks came out gunning in the second half, canning four quick baskets on jumpers by Bill Belander and Steve Tiedeman, and a George Schandelmier tip, to take over the lead at 42-41.

Hayward then regained the lead and held it for six minutes until Belander put in four straight baskets and Tom Fitchie one to put the Cossacks back on top to stay at 58-50.

In the next four minutes, Sonoma outscored the Pioneers 13-4 as Belander made four more baskets.

"I don't know what was wrong in the first half," said Belander who scored just six points in the opening 20-minutes, "but I felt good in the second half." Good is not the word for his performance. The 6-foot-4 junior from San Diego put in a game-high 28 points and grabbed nine rebounds. For the game, he hit on 14 of 26 field goal attempts.

The Cossacks got off to an early 24-14 lead behind the inside work of Dan Heien and the outside shooting of Steve Tiedeman, but with ten minutes to play in the half, Sonoma went ice cold and was outscored 15-0 before Fitchie got them back on the scoreboard with two straight 25-footers.

It wasn't so much that Hayward was shooting well from

Marin Catholic To Host Novato

Marin Catholic High School, which three weeks ago was trying to think of ways to avoid the cellar, will have a chance this week to make a run at first place in Marin County Athletic League basketball.

The Wildcats will host Novato at 7 p.m. tomorrow in an important game, and will entertain league-leading Drake Friday in an even more important one. Tomorrow's other games find San Marin at San Rafael, Terra Linda at Redwood and Tamalpais at Drake, all at 4 p.m.

"Actually, there never has been a 'turning point,' " said Marin Catholic coach Dave Gonsalves. "We've played only one bad game all year. The ones we lost early were close, and we made the other team win them."

The "bad" game was a 52-45 loss to Redwood Jan. 16 which dropped the 'Cats' record to 1-3. They have not lost since, and their four-game winning streak is the longest in the league this year.

The lone Wildcat of any great size is 6-foot-4 center Tom Cronin, who scoed 22 points Friday in a harrowing 48-46 win over San Marin. Anothe leading rebounder is 6-1 Ben Partee, who did a stellar defensive job Friday, combining with 5-10 Paul Bartolini to hold San Marin's high-scoring Hoza Wright to nine points.

Despite the lack of size, the Wildcats have outrebounded their opponents, chiefly because they permit their foes few defensive rebounds. They wait patiently for the good shot on offense, frequently hitting 50 per cent or better despite being the league's lowest-scoring team. On the other hand, they lead the league in defense.

Enigmatic Novato (4-4) has lost three straight on the road after holding the unchallenged league lead at one point. The losses have come by one, four and five points, but it's rapidly becoming apparent in the balanced league that to contend, a team must win the close ones.

Tamalpais (2-6) beat Novato Friday, and is a wholly different team from the one Drake demolished by 31 points in their first meeting. "The team that's going to win the championship is going to have to beat us," insists coach Bernie Schneider.

Drake (6-2) has won three in a row since a two-point loss to Novato Jan. 19, or more to the point, since forward Don Asay and guard Rick Herbert were installed in the starting lineup. The two have scored 92 points in the three games.

Redwood (5-3) rebounded from a shattering 81-60 loss to Drake to defeat San Rafael Friday and remain on the Pirates' heels. The Giants face a Terra Linda (4-4) team which has dropped three of its last four, including a 75-70 loss to Drake Friday.

Like Novato and Terra Linda, San Marin (4-4) has reached the point where it cannot afford any more losses. The Mustangs lost to San Rafael last time around, 70-57, but the Bulldogs (2-6) have lost all six games since then.

Sabich Triumphs In Ski Slalom

BURNSVILLE, Minn. (UPI) — Spider Sabich, Snowmass, Colo., nipped 6-foot 5 Austrian skier Harald Stuefer for first place Sunday in head-to-head slalom competition at the St. Paul Winter Carnival's McDonalds' Cup at Buck Hill.

Sabich, 28, hiked his point total in the Benson & Hedges Grand Prix Ski Tour to 162 and raised his earnings to $13,325. Stuefer remained in second place with 156 points and picked up $1,500 to increase his total earnings to $12,900.

Jean-Claude Killy of Megeve, France, fastest slalom qualifier and winner of Saturday's giant slalom competition was leading his race against Mike Schwaiger of Austria when he fell and spun into the crowd. He was not hurt.

Schwaiger went on to take third place money of $1,200 and moved up to 16th in the tour standings. Killy retained his third place overall position with 134 points and earnings of $11,400.

Gregg Reaches Goal With Car Race Win

Combined AP & UPI

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Curly haired, handsome Peter Gregg reached his goal. Curly haired, handsome Hurley Haywood crossed the threshold to the future.

The pair of skilled race drivers, so alike and yet so different, made a perfect team in piloting a Porsche Carrera to a surprise victory in the 24 hours of Daytona sports car race yesterday a triumph so easy Gregg said, "We didn't run the car any harder than I will drive my Porsche 911 going back to Jacksonville."

In the first half of the race that began Saturday at 3 p.m. their performance was overshadowed by the 119 m.p.h. laps around the 3.81-mile course Mike Hailwood and Derek Bell of England turned in a pair of Gulf Mirages as they dueled with Francois Cevert and Henri Pescarolo in a French Matra that won last year's 24-hour race at LeMans.

But the Mirages and Matra fell victim to mechanical troubles under the brutal pounding. Then Gregg and Haywood had to play a supporting role to the glamorous pair of Indianapolis winner Mark Donohue and CanAm champion George Follmer in a sister Porsche Carrera until it, too, went out ear the halfway point with a broken piston.

They finished nearly 85 miles ahead of a second-place Ferrari GTB driven by Milt Minter of Los Angeles and Francois Migault of France. A Corvette shared by David Heinz of Tampa, Fla., and Bob McClure of Bethel Park, Pa., was 15 miles farther back.

Gregg, at 31, says he is reducing his racing schedule to spend more time with wife Jennifer and sons Jason, 10, and Simon 8.

"It's not my goal to become famous at racing," said Gregg, who owns a lucrative foreign car dealership in Jacksonville 95 miles to the north.

He called Haywood his protege, and predicted a big future for the 24-year-old who found his way from his native Chicago to Florida, where he enrolled in business administration at Jacksonville University and met Gregg at a racing event.

"In two days time, I taught him to drive around the track within two seconds of my time," Gregg said.

Haywood declares his goal is to be "a top flight professional driver. I'll be in CanAm on my own this year. If I do well, I look for better things in the future. Maybe this victory will help."

NHL BRUINS

Guidolin Replaces Johnson

BOSTON (UPI) — The Boston Bruins today fired coach Tom Johnson and named Armand "Bep" Guidolin of the American Hockey League Boston Braves to replace him.

The move came on the heels of a mid-season skid in which the Bruins had won only four of 13 games since Jan. 4.

Johnson will remain with the team in an administrative capacity.

Mangaging director Harry Sinden said he "felt a change was necessary at this time." He said Guidolin would take over immediately.

Guidolin, 47, has coached the Braves in the AHL since the team's inception a year ago. Last year, he guided the club to the Eastern Division title and this season the Braves have been holding down the second spot behind the Nova Scotia Voyageurs.

Previously, as coach of the Oshawa (Ont.) Generals, Guidolin had coached Bobby Orr, Wayne Cashman and Nick Beverley, all now with Boston.

Guidolin turned pro with the Bruins during the 1942-43 season when he was only 16-years-old and he still holds that distinction as being the youngest ever to play in the National Hockey League.

His major league career was interrupted by a hitch in the Canadian Armed Forces but he still managed a nine year NHL career with the Bruins, Detroit

IDLE WARRIORS SET PRACTICE TOMORROW

OAKLAND (UPI) — Golden State Warrior coach Al Attles wishes Jim Barnett could handle himself in every game the way he did against Seattle.

Barnett and Cazzie Russell combined for 62 points Saturday night to give the Warriors a 123-101 National Basketball Association win over the Supersonics.

Barnett got 30 points, tying his second high game as a Warrior.

"It was a great game for Jim," said Attles. "If we could expect that type of game from him all the time, we'd be set."

However, Attles added that Barnett is "not that type of player all the time, and we know it."

The Warriors were idle last night and will have today off.

"Then it's practice Tuesday and Wednesday," Attles said.

The Warriors host Portland Thursday night. The Warriors are 9½ games behind the first-place Los Angeles Lakers in the Pacific Division.

Goalie Meloche Is A Model Of Frustration

OAKLAND (UPI) — Montreal's Canadiens won a National Hockey League game 6-1 Sunday night and the busiest and most frustrated man on the ice was goalie Gilles Meloche of the California Golden Seals.

Twice he tried and failed to stop breakaways while his teammates attempted to skate back in time.

A shot by Murray Wilson, the second breakaway, was blocked by Meloche who had to leave the net. But then Jacques Lemaire picked up the rebound and made the goal.

In all, the Canadiens took 39 shots, making three of them good in the first period and putting the game away early.

There was a boisterous and unhappy crowd of 9,022 in the Oakland Arena for the game and at least two of them had more or less violent words.

Seal Coach Fred Glover said one disgruntled fan moved behind his team's bench and "called everybody on the team everything in the book."

Another spectator pushed the critic over the rail into an area between the Seal and Montreal benches.

Innsbruck Is Olympic Games Site

Combined AP & UPI

LAUSANNE, Switzerland — The reverend made an impassioned plea, mustering all the eloquence of a sermon from his pulpit. But the Olympic executives were unmoved and gave the 1976 Winter Games to Innsbruck, Austria.

"We knew we were working against heavy odds," said the Rev. Bernard Fell, main spokesman for the group which had been hoping they could persuade the executive body of the International Olympic Committee to award the Games to Lake Placid, N.Y.

"We had only four days to prepare our application, get it printed and then come over here to argue our case," said the minister of the United Methodist Church. "If we'd had a little more time, we might have made it. Even the film we showed them of our skiing slopes at Lake Placid was six years old. It was all we could manage at such short notice."

Fell had told the IOC executives: "In 1976, we will, as the world is our witness, be good to the Olympic Games.

But the effort was all in vain for the community of 5,000 which, in 1932, had hosted the first Winter Olympics in the United States.

Innsbruck, a city of 116,000 with all the facilities of the successful 1964 Winter Games still intact, ran away with the selection yesterday.

Besides Lakes Placid, the IOC executives also turned down bids by Chamonix, France, and Tampere, Finland.

The crisis preceding the selection of Innsburck began when Denver, Colo., the original host, withdrew. In a statewide ballot last November, Colorado voters had overwhelmingly refused to approve the use of state funds to help stage the Games.

Meanwhile, Lord Michael Killanin, Avery Brundage's successor as IOC president, went

Marinite Arraigned On Knifing

I-J Special Report

SONOMA — John C. Batts, 21, of San Rafael, has been arraigned in Southern Sonoma Municipal Court on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon in the knifing of a former world wristwrestling champion.

Judge Alexander J. McMahon set a hearing for Wednesday at 10 a.m. in Sonoma to consider reducing Batts's $50,000 bail.

Batts turned himself in last week at the Sonoma County Sheriff's Department. He had been wanted in connection with the Jan. 20 stabbing of James Dolcini, 22, of 6970 Red Hill Road, Petaluma, during a disturbance at the Hideaway Bar.

The incident led to a riot involving more than 150 persons and the mob tried to lynch the wrong man in the confusion, police said. Officers from four departments were forced to hold the crowd back with dogs.

Dolcini, who was world wristwrestling champion in 1970 and 1971, is the son of Arnold Dolcini Jr., a rancher and member of the Marin County Board of Education.

Growth Policy To Be Studied

New residential developments and a proposed growth control policy will be reviewed at the Rohnert Park City Council meeting at 7 p.m. today at city hall.

The council will review an environmental impact report for the 680-acre Shapell Industries' development plan and hear a proposal by Councilman Vernon P. Smith for community growth controls.

The council also will review plans for construction of a bridge on Hinebaugh Creek and consider setting a date for a town meeting.

Trustees Will Get Planning Report

The Fairfax School District board will hear a report from the district's planning committee when it meets at 7:45 p.m. tomorrow in White Hill School.

The committee will report on multiple use of White Hill School, the sale of Central School and proposed consolidation of other school facilities.

Transit Board To Study Pact For Railroad Funds

A proposed five-party agreement that could clear the way for a $2.5 million federal loan for acquisition of abandoned railroad rights-of-way in Marin will be considered tomorrow by the Marin County Transit District board.

The board, which will meet at 8:30 a.m. at the Civic Center, is listed as one of the five parties. The agreement would pave the way for the Golden Gate Bridge District to request the federal loan. Other parties include the bridge district, and the cities of Larkspur, Corte Madera and Mill Valley.

Most of the funds would be used to purchase an eight-mile stretch of abandoned right-of-way between Corte Madera and Sausalito.

Mill Valley, through which the right-of-way runs, has opposed the bridge district buying the stretch because it fears a massive rapid transit system. The city council had indicated it would prefer the stretch be used as a bicycle and pedestrian path.

The agreement would give the cities veto power over how the right-of-way would be used and would allow the cities to purchase portions within their city limits at any time by paying the bridge district the original acquisition cost.

The Corte Madera Town Council and Mill Valley City Council are expected to consider the agreement tonight and the Larkspur City Council on Wednesday.

The bridge district board, meanwhile, has scheduled a hearing on the matter for Feb. 14 at 8 p.m. at the bridge district office.

PUC Slates Hearing On Federal Act

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A hearing by the state Public Utilities Commission on its proposal to comply with the Environmental Protection Act will be held this month.

The hearing will be at 10 a.m. on Feb. 21 in the State Building, 350 McAllister Street. The room number will be posted in the lobby.

The hearing before PUC Examiner Donald B. Jarvis will be to determine how to comply with the act, which requires "evaluation of projects and the preparation of environmental impact reports."

The commission asked that anyone proposing an amendment or deletion to its proposed rules, or proposing a different method, submit an original and 12 copies to it by Friday.

Anyone who wants to testify should notify the commission by Friday.

Light Standard Bids Received

Dale Contractors of Monrovia was the apparent low bidder on a project to replace light standards on Highway 37, 10 and 12 in Marin and Sonoma County.

The low bid was $19,019. The new standards will have bases which if struck will give way easily, lessening the severity of impact.

Doctor Tells Kansas Man How To Help Shrink Painful Swelling Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues

...caused by inflammation and infection.

Prairie Village, Kan.—Mr. Joseph Sutton reports: "My doctor suggested suppositories. I chose Preparation H suppositories. On a physical check-up my doctor noted how effectively it works."

(Note: Doctors' tests have proved Preparation H® actually helps shrink swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues caused by inflammation. It's so effective that in many cases, the first applications give prompt, temporary relief from pain and itching in such tissues. There's no other formula like doctor-tested Preparation H.)

Legislative Program To Be Studied

Marin County's proposed 1973 legislative program will be considered tomorrow by the county board of supervisors, meeting at 9 a.m. at the Civic Center.

The legislative program, submitted annually by the board to local lawmakers in Sacramento, outlines the county's wants and needs. This year it proposes 17 bills for introduction and 20 for support if introduced by someone else.

Among the 17 bills recommended for introduction is one which would force city redevelopment agencies to obtain the approval of other taxing agencies before siphoning off property tax revenue.

Under existing state law, local redevelopment agencies are permitted to float redevelopment bonds and pay them off by using diverted property tax revenues from other agencies. No approval is needed.

The county of Marin has filed suit against the San Rafael Redevelopment Agency contesting that point and others.

Another proposal would take away the power of the judiciary to order security expenditures without the approval of the supervisors.

A brief rundown of other major legislation proposed follows:

A bill to clarify the controversial Marks vs. Whitney court decision. The decision makes it unclear whether the owner of a developed tidelot, affected by the decision, can use his land.

A bill to allow local government to contract with developers to limit sale and rental of low and moderate-income family housing in return for special development considerations.

A bill to eliminate the option of a blood test as one of the methods of obtaining evidence of inebriation. The tests are expensive and other means are available.

A bill authorizing the courts to require, as a condition of probation, that persons convicted of druken driving and inebriation pay county testing and expert witness costs in proving guilt.

A bill requiring an annual purge of voter registration lists rather than once every two years as is now the case.

The board's agenda also includes a hearing on the controversial Highlands housing project near Tiburon, a report on ambulance service and cost in Marin, and an explanation from the chairman of the Juvenile Delinquency Prevention Commission on comments that he hadinvestigated fellow commissioners.

Education Board Will Award Bids

The Marin County Board of Education will award contracts for school supplies, bulk paper, and deliveries at its meeting tomorrow at 8 p.m. at the county schools' office, Corte Madera.

Also on a long agenda are first readings of some sections of the 1973-74 budget, principally items requiring state and federal funds.

Joseph Amato, director of business services, will give a report on the impact of Senate Bill 90, the state tax shift school finance legislation, on county schools.

Lakers Burst Bullets' Bubble

By U P INTERNATIONAL

The Los Angeles Lakers burst the Baltimore Bullet bubble

The Bullets anxious to wrap up the Central Division title early to prepare for their first round playoffs against its Atlantic Division opponent were riding a four-game winning streak Sunday when they were shelled by the Lakers heavy artillery—Jerry West and Gail Goodrich

The Los Angeles Happiness Boys scored 28 points apiece as the Laker troupe posted its 18th consecutive National Basketball Association victory 125-115

Our problem was letting them jump out too early," explained Baltimore guard Phil Chenier who scored 22 points against the Laker defense 'West shoots off those Los Angeles picks, but that's not saying I could stop his jumper even if I fought my way past Chamberlain Wilt just moves me out of the way Whe West is shooting I guess there's nothing much you can do."

Baltimore held the Lakers even for the first quarter, but lost the game in the second period when Los Angeles outscored the Bullets, 38-29. Wes Unseld tallied 24 points for the losers, but was outclassed by Chamberlain under the boards, 20-8 Archie Clark also scored 24 for Baltimore

In other NBA action, Chicago ripped Milwaukee 121-99; Boston topped Philadelphia, 123-115· New York beat Cleveland 114-97 Houston routed Buffalo, 130-118 and KC-Omaha mauled Seattle 120-98

Bob Love scored a career high 49 points as Chicago cut Milwaukee's lead in the Midwest Division to 4½ games.

The haple's 76ers led Boston by 12 points going into the fourth quarter, but couldn't contain the Celtics in the final period as Jo Jo White scored 11 f his game high 38 points in the session.

Earl Monroe powered New York to victory over Cleveland by hitting all seven shots in the fourth quarter after the Knicks trailed by a point with 9:37 left in the game.

Houston, playing its fifth game in six days, received a 30-point shooting performance from Jack Marin. Rockets team captain Jimmy Walker was ejected after drawing two technical fouls.

KC-Omaha's Nate Archibald became the first player to score 2,000 points in the National Basketball Association this season when he poured in 31 points against Seattle. spencer Haywood topped the Sonics with 27 points.

Ex-Olympic Hero Stars For Detroit

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Just one year ago Henry Boucha was helping work a miracle for all of America. Now, he's merely trying to achieve the incredible for the Detroit Red Wings.

Boucha was one of the star performers for the United States Olympic hockey team that amazed almost everyone by winning the silver medal at Sapporo, Japan, last February. Immediately after his return home, he signed a professional contract with the Red Wings.

Although he was nowhere near an immediate success in the National Hockey League last year, Boucha now finds himself in the middle of another budding Cinderella story as Detroit continues its surge for a playoff berth that just a short while ago seemed out of reach.

Boucha, a tireless worker even when he isn't scoring, came up with his seventh and eighth goals of the season Sunday night as Detroit bombed the Vancouver Canucks 8-2. It was the fourth consecutive victory for the Wings, who at one time were 14 points in back of fourth-place Buffalo, but now trail the Sabres by only a single point in the East Division.

Buffalo, which had to struggle for a 1-1 tie on Long Island Saturday night managed to maintain its slim hold on fourth place by beating the Islanders 5-1 in a home ice rematch Sunday night.

In the West Division, the Chicago Black Hawks stretched their lead over second-place Philadelphia to 10 points by belting the St. Louis Blues 5-2 while the Flyers played to a satisfying 2-2 tie against the slumping Bruins at Boston.

The Montreal Canadiens maintained their four-point edge over the Rangers in the East race by beating the California Golden Seals 6-1 after New York had stretched its winning streak to eight games by belting the Atlanta Flames 6-0. In an afternoon contest, the Minnesota North Stars avenged a Saturday loss at Pittsburgh by edging the Penguins 4-3.

Mickey Redmond scored his 17th goal in his last 17 games and Marcel Dionne added a goal and two assists to support Detroit's attack.

Chico Maki, Jim Pappin and Dan Maloney scored within a four-minute span of the first period to provide Chicago all the offensive power it needed to stretch its unbeaten string to eight games. The Blues, making a late run at a West Division playoff berth, had their non-losing skein snapped at nine games.

Wooden Is Upset With Newsmen

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Coach John Wooden of No. 1 UCLA is just a little bit upset with newsmen covering his Bruins

'No question, Walton is our big man" Wooden said after his Bruins whipped cross-town rival Southern California 79-56 Saturday night to extend their Pacific 8 Conference record to 5-0, 1972-73 overall record to 17-0 and winning streak to 62.

"But Keith Wilkes had two great games last week when we broke the record (consecutive victory mark to 61). You sports writers keep saying he's overlooked and then you go right ahead and overlook him."

Walton scored 20 points and grabbed 17 rebounds in the victory over USC while Larry Farmer, another overlooked Bruin, and Wilkes scored 16 and 14 points, respectively.

The score was tied at 12-12 in the early minutes when Walton hit on a layup to start a 12point spurt that put the Bruins in front and the Trojans never came close again.

"We looked good in those early minutes," said Trojan coach Bob Boyd, "but then we lost our poise and any concept of what we were doing out there. Some of our players got caught up in the tenseness of it."

Wooden, befitting a coach of a super team, said he never thought his club was in trouble and figured it was just a matter of time before it exploded.

The loss was the first of the year in conference play for the Trojans, who now are 4-1 in the Pac 8 and 13-5 overall

Only one other Pac 8 game was played Saturday and in that one Rick Kelley, Stanford's 7-foot center, hit on 20 of his game-high 28 points in the second half as the Cardinals came on to beat California 73-68.

In the West Coast Athletic Conference, University of San Francisco and Santa Clara continued on their winning ways, the 19th ranked Dons beating Nevada-Reno 89-66 and the Broncos routing Nevada-Las Vegas 95-73.

Santa Clara and USF, old WCAC rivals, are tied for first with 6-0 records. They have their first showdown of the year this Saturday in San Francisco and then meet again three nights later at Santa Clara. Those two games should decide the division title.

All America Ed Ratleff scored 28 points to lead fourth ranked Long Beach State to an easy 103-82 victory over Los Angeles State and into a tie for first with San Jose State in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association. Both the 49ers and Spartans are 4-1. Long Beach meets San Diego State twice this week while San Jose plays Pacific twice.

out of his way to warn all concerned with the Winter Games that any more blatant professionalism or commercialization in them could mean their death.

"I draw your attention," said Killanin about the hubbub caused by his announcement of Innsbruck, "to the fact that there are a lot of people critical of the winter Olympic Games on the grounds of eligibility, the small number of countries involved and of the commercialization.

"I want particularly to stress that the position of commercialization at Innsbruck will be watched very carefully Much will depend on our future attitude on what happens at Innsbruck." Killanin said.

Marilyn Wins Bowler Of Year Tourney

Marilyn Epidendio defeated Roberta Thorsen in the finals yesterday, 179-169, to win the Marin County Women's 600 Club Bowler of the Year tournament at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael

Mrs. Epidendio finished first in the qualifying with an 861 score for four games, then sat down as Mrs. Thorsen, who qualified fourth, defeated three opponents for the right to challenge her

The tournament involved 12 bowlers, the top one from each month of 1972. Mrs. Epidendio was the January winner and, coincidentally, is also the January winner for 1973, so she is certain of returning to defend her title.

Mrs. Thorsen, the December winner qualified with a 747 series, placing her behind Mrs. Epidendio and Penny Tauscher (July) and Barbara Eastland (May), who tied at 753. Jackie Newsom (August) was fifth at 719.

Mrs. Thorsen defeated Mrs. Newsom, 177-170, and then working her way up the ladder, beat Mrs. Eastland, 178-154, and Mrs. Tauscher, 182-153, before confronting Mrs. Epidendio.

Mrs. Epidendio won $50 cash plus a $25 paid entry to the State Queens Tournament later this year in Bakersfield. Her qualifying games were 218, 225, 194 and 224. High game for the day was bowled by Anne Maillard, 229.

In the second half, Cossack coach Bill Trumbo changed to a zone and that caused Hayward to shoot outside. The Pioneers shot 27 per cent in the second half after a 45 per cent first half effort.

In the preliminary game, the Sonoma State junior varsity avenged an earlier loss to North Peralta College with an 87-78 victory.

Election Of Blacks Seen As Beginning Of Trend

ATLANTA (UPI) — The election of 598 black officeholders across the South in 1972— including two members of Congress—marks a "spiraling trend which yet has far to go before it reaches its peak," the Voter Education Project (VEP) said Sunday.

The fact that 1,276 black candidates ran across the South in 1972 was a high water mark for Negro participation in Dixie politics, the VEP said. VEP is a private, nonprofit, educational organization that promotes minority political participation in 11 Southern states.

"The most important victories were those of Andrew Young of Atlanta and Barbara Jordan of Houston, Texas," executive director John Lewis said. "More than just a victory for their immediate constituency, their election as representatives in the United State Congress has great meaning for blacks throughout the South,"

Lewis said five of 10 city council seats in Selma, Ala. went to blacks. Alabama led all states in the number of blacks elected to office with 117 of 242 black candidates running successfully.

Selma and Dallas County, which saw bloody civil rights battles during the 1960's, had only 2.3 per cent of its black citizens registered to vote in 1965. But last year, 67 per cent of the county's blacks were on voter lists.

Arkansas, the last Southern legislature without a black member, elected one black to the state senate; two others won election to the state house of representatives and 96 others captured local offices.

"Such victories restore faith in the political process and keep alive our dreams for a positive transformation of the southern region," said Lewis.

He said more blacks went to the national conventions in 1972 than ever before and blacks were instrumental in the passage of prison reform legislation in Louisiana and open housing laws in Virginia. Black voters also provided a margin of victory for many white candidates, including Gov. Edwin Edwards of Louisiana, said Lewis.

Young's election as Georgia's first black congressman led the VEP's report on the state. Two blacks won election to the state senate and 14 others were sent to the state house of representatives. In other races, 46 blacks were victorious.

Louisiana appeals court Judge Ernest Morial won the highest elected court post held by a black in the South. Otherwise, 86 blacks won posts in Louisiana elections, including eight to the state house of representatives.

South Carolina elected 59 black officials in 1972, including four state representatives. North Carolina had 24 successful black office seekers.

In Tennessee, the first black to run for the U. S. Congress in modern times met with defeat, but 37 other blacks were elected.

Texas blacks placed 46 officeholders, with 27 black officials being elected in Mississippi and 20 in Virginia.

However, one VEP official, Harry Huge, said the figures only "scratched the surface, both in terms of the potential of minority voters yet to be registered and the relatively small number of black elected officials."

Broadcast License Law Asked

I-J Special Report

WASHINGTON — A bill to extend from three to five years the validity of broadcasters' licenses has been introduced by Rep. Don H. Clausen, R-First District.

Clausen said he was disturbed "over the possibility that the licensing renewal procedure could allow licenses to become a political football with government intervention in program content and editorial policy."

The bill would give license holders preference in renewals by the Federal Communications Commission if they demonstrate "substantial" performance of their duties to serve the public, according to the bill.

Clausen said the bill was needed "because of the increasing instability and lack of continuity in the FCC's handling of license renewals. Conflicting decisions by the FCC and federal courts have given rise to a chaotic situation that Congress should resolve."

The bill was referred the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee.

Ex-Convict Charged In Attack Rampage

TUSKEGEE, Ala. (UPI) — An ex-convict was being held at an undisclosed state prison today charged in a rampage of rapes and stabbings that brought state troopers and a standby force of National Guardsmen to this terrified city of 11,000.

Macon County Sheriff Lucius Amerson said Sunday night the suspect, David L. Goode of Tuskegee, "was secretly transported to a state institution for safety reasons and to preserve law and order." He declined to elaborate on the move.

The 65 state troopers who arrived Saturday to help in the search for suspects remained on patrol today, but the 100 National Guardsmen who stood by on alert near this city Saturday had been pulled out.

Amerson said that although some victims indicated there might have been more than one assailant, Goode was "the only one we have with concrete evidence. At present there's nobody we can link him with. We'd like to think he is the only one involved."

Goode was held without bail on six charges, including the murder of Evelyn Page, one of three elderly sisters raped and stabbed at their home Friday night.

He was charged with assault with intent to murder the other sisters, Carribac Carr and Josie Green, who were reported in critical condition at a hospital.

Mayor pro tem Willie Whitehead said Mayor Johnny Ford asked for the troopers and Guardsmen to back up the 50 local law officers because "whatever it took to protect people in their homes, we wanted to have it.

Smith Williams, Ford's assistant for public affairs, said "There's no sensible motive for the crime. Whoever did it apparently has some hangup over elderly women."

Williams said Goode was arrested without incident Saturday night a few hours after "someone called the mayor and said a man had been loudmouthing in public about what he had done."

"It turned out to be a pretty good lead," Williams said.

To Resume Study

The Mill Valley-Sausalito Joint School Committee, formed to study ways of increased cooperation between the Mill Valley and Sausalito School districts, will resume consideration of Joint programs at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the Mill Valley Middle School.

Charged With A Lesser Crime

Two men arrested on suspicion of burglarizing a San Anselmo natural foods store that has gone out of business have been charged in Marin Municipal Court with the lesser crime of malicious mischief.

Kenneth Charles Caramella, 27, of San Jose, and Dennis Stephen Morgan, 30, of Los Gatos, pleaded innocent Thursday and were slated to return to court Feb. 21 for a pretrial conference.

The two were arrested in San Jose Jan. 26 after San Anselmo police traced $700 in equipment reported missing from Everybody's Natural Food Store at 1 Saunders Avenue to a San Jose supplier of organic produce. Caramella and Morgan work for the company, The Well, which reportedly was owed money by the San Anselmo store.

Picket Protest Yorty Meeting

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Pickets marched in front of city hall when Mayor Sam Yorty met with the mayor of Moscow, Vladimir Promyslov, during the weekend.

The pickets protested Russian treatment of Jews wishing to go to Israel. One protester called the meeting "a slap in the face" to the city's Jews, "as if the mayor had met with Hitler if this were 1939." Yorty said he told his Moscow counterpart that American Jews are concerned about the treatment of Jews in Russia.

ATTENTION:

SELF-EMPLOYED INDIVIDUALS

If you have one or more employees, you may have previsouly considered a tax-deductible retirement plan (Keogh) but abandoned the idea when you saw the cost of including your employee(s).

If you are older than your employee(s), these costs can be substantially reduced. Take an actual case, for example:

	Age	Earnings	Keogh Contribution
Owner	58	$20,000	$2,000
Employee	29	7,000	124 (!)
		Total Tax Deduction:	$2,124

In most plans, the owner's contribution for the employee would have had to be $700. But this owner's plan isn't like most Keogh plans!

If you are older than your employees and still don't have a retirement plan, perhaps you should take another look.

UNSER, KELLY WIN

Deacon Has Fun In Golf Tourney

SAN JUAN P.R. (UPI) — Del Unser and Leroy Kelly won the $10,000 first prize Sunday in the American Airlines Golf Classic but Deacon Jones got the biggest cheer

Unser slender Philadelphia Phillies outfielder and Kelly rugged Cleveland Browns running back, shot a 54-hole net 177 over the El Conquistador Hotel course to win the $30,000 tournament for baseball-football player teams by five strokes

Jones the gigantic defensive tackle from the San Diego Chargers hit the 410-yard 18th hole with two well-played shots. His ball was about 30 feet from the cup. All he needed was two putts for a net birdie

Back and forth he putted taking four strokes on the green. As he picked up his ball from the cup with Puerto Rico television cameras grinding away the Deacon turned and hurled his putter about 100 yards in a nearby lake. Then he wound up and threw a perfect pitch with his ball to follow the putter

He turned to the gallery with the wide grin on his face and said, "that was more fun than getting a quarterback."

The win was a fortuitous one for Unser and Kelly.

Unser who has been traded twice in the last two years, needs the money to move his family again.

"Sure I'll take the $5,000,' he said 'I'm no super star like most of these other fellows With a batting average like mine I need all the money I can get Unser, after a slow start hit .238 for Cleveland last year.

Kelly lost $1,000 in cash while dancing in the hotel lounge Saturday night.

'I don't feel so bad about the money I lost now," he said "I've got five times as much as I had last night."

Kelly who was dancing to the singing of Deacon Jones, said he thought he put his money clip in his pocket, but later discovered the trousers did not have a pocket

The San Francisco team of Giant pitcher Juan Marichal and 49er placekicker Bruce Gossett finished second at 182 and received $2,500 each. Both said they intended to give the money to charity, the major portion of it to the Roberto Clemente Memorial Fund for Nicaraguan earthquake victims. Third, worth $1,000 each, went to two Houston representatives, Astro outfielder Jim Wynn and Oiler quarterback Dan Pastorini.

AFTER HAWAIIAN OPEN WIN

Golfer Schlee Dons Gold Blazer

HONOLULU (UPI) — When Tom Watson finished the third round of $200,000 Hawaiian Open Saturday holding a four-stroke lead, John Schlee, who was second exclaimed "I hope he wins it. We non-winners have to stick together.'

Little did Schlee know at that time that he would be wearing the gold blazer given to the Hawaiian Open champion Sunday

Schlee, who had never won a tournament since joining the tour in 1965, fired a four-under-par 68 while Watson crumbled.

'I'm going to put the $40,000 into the bank along with all of the $500 I've won this year," he laughed.

His 15-under-par 273 was two strokes ahead of Orville Moody, who finished with a 69 to pocket $22,800.

Watson had a disastrous double bogey on the 13th along with two bogeys on the front nine to finish with a three-over par 75 and a 276. It was still good enough for third and $14,200, his biggest purse to date

Gay Brewer, who shared the first-round lead with Watson and George Archer, was alone in fourth with 277 after a 69, good enough for $9,400.

Schlee, who was tutored by Ben Hogan, moved into the lad on the 14th when he carded a birdie on the par-four hole. One hole back, Watson ran into problems with a water meter and soared to a double bogey.

But Schlee said the turning point was the 15th when he hit his drive into the right rough. "I tried to recall what Ben Hogan had told me," he said.

Using a four-iron, gripping the club like the way he was taught and playing the ball the way Hogan would have done it, Schlee hit around a tree and landed 12-feet from the green where he got his par.

Schlee credited Brewer and J.C. Snead, who was playing with him, for encouraging him all the way

"Snead was even more nervous than I was," he said.

"I was tense and nervous" said Watson, the 23-year-old Stanford graduate who is in his second year on the tour.

Snead finished with a 69 and 278 for $8,200 while Hale Irwin and Johnny Miller were at 279 with 66 and 69 respectively.

Lanny Wadkins, who had a 66, was at 280 while Archer, Billy Casper, Brian Allin, Juan Rodriguez, DeWitt Weaver and Larry Ziegler were at 281.

Archer had a 71 as did Allin, while Rodriguez, who is playing seriously, finished with a 67 Weaver and Ziegler both carded 69's while Casper had a 70.

Lee Trevino managed to break 70 for the first time this year with a 68 for a 282 while Bruce Crampton, winner of the Phoenix and Tucson opens came in with an even-par 72 for 283.

Rod Funseth, who started off the year winning the Los Angeles Open, had a 69 for 285.

Petaluma Hosts Santa Rosa '5'

Petaluma and Santa Rosa high schools renew their old rivalry tomorrow night at 7 o'clock when the Panthers invade the Petaluma gym; but with both schools out of contention for the North Bay League basketball crown, nothing much more than pride will be at stake.

In other prep basketball action tomorrow night at 7 o'clock, Rancho Cotate of Rohnert Park, travels to Forestville for a Sonoma County League clash with El Molino, St. Vincent hosts non-league for Cloverdale in the Kenilworth Junior High gym in Petaluma, and Tomales hosts Calistoga in a North Central League II contest.

The Trojans are in a three-way tie for fifth place in the NBL with a 2-6 mark, six games behind the league leading and undefeated Vallejo Apaches. Santa Rosa is four games behind at 4-4, good for fourth place.

Last time the two teams met, the Panthers edged Petaluma 63-59 in the last minute of play on free throws by Chris Allen. Allen, a 6-foot guard who has scored over 1,000 points in his varsity career, is the leading scorer on the Santa Rosa squad with a 20-points per game average.

Rancho Cotate has virtually eliminated itself from the SCL race, barring any second-half miracles, currently standing in sixth place with a 2-4 record, four and a half games behind Cardinal Newman of Santa Rosa. El Molino is in last place with an 0-6 mark.

St. Vincent, which kept its North Central League II record spotless Friday night with a 55-53 win over Kelseyville, takes a 10-4 overall record against the powerful Cloverdale Eagles, 12-4 overall.

Tomales, which got its initial NCL II victory of the year with a 77-57 win over Upper Lake, has a good chance to win against the Wildcats who are also 1-3 in league play.

EGO INVOLVED

Mays-Namath Fuss: A View Of Elements

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — They were talking about the Willie Mays-Joe Namath fuss in Puerto Rico, and someone brought up the word "ego"

"What's wrong with having an ego? I see nothing wrong with it at all." said Warren Spahn, a superstar in his own right elected to the Hall of Fame the other day and one of those honored here Sunday night by the Milwaukee chapter of the Baseball Writers Association of America.

"When I first heard about the Mays-Namath thing, I thought it was a publicity gag," Spahn went on. "I wasn't down there in Puerto Rico and I don't know what actually happened, whether it was a matter of two egos or not, but without ego, you have no ambition and without ambition you have no purpose."

That could be oversimplification on Warren Spahn's part, but in at least one respect, he's right. some degree of ego was involved in what happened between Willie Mays and Joe Namath in Puerto Rico last Friday.

What happened was that the two were paired together as partners in the opening round of the American Airlines Golf Classic, and when Namath showed up 40 minutes late, saying he didn't get a wakeup call from the hotel operator, Mays refused to play with him

Each was assigned a new playing partner and Namath later apologized to Mays, which should have ended the entire matter right there, except that it didn't.

Little Del Unser, the Philadelphia Phillies' new outfielder, and Leroy Kelly the Cleveland Browns' running back, won the tournament Sunday, but people will hardly remember that

Instead they'll only remember the episode between Mays and Namath even though both later insisted it was much ado about nothing. Human nature is like that. Few people care who won the tournament. People are now likely to keep wondering what got into Willie to make him stalk off the way he did.

The fact Mays said his walkogg esd "nothing against Joe personally," and that he was willing to play with anybody, even "a rookie", so long as he showed up on time, does not take away from the fact that Willie Mays feels he has reached the station in life where a certain amount of respect is coming to him—even from someone like Joe Namath.

The entire incident smacked of Hollywood's old "star system", a system which prevailed among movie actors and actresses 25 years ago, far more than it does now.

Getting back to the golf tournament, though, the sponsors, American Airlines, do everything to make all the contestants feel at home. They even pamper them and nobody among the 64 contestants were pampered more than Mays and Namath.

Both were provided with private hotel suites while all the other contestants had to rough it in mere luxurious $80 a day rooms.

A guy can get a little spoiled in an atmosphere like that.

Curiously or not, most of the other contestants sided with Mays. They felt Namath should have been on time, whether he missed his wakeup call or not.

For his part, Namath was generally sorry about all the trouble he caused.

"Willie has always been one of my heroes," he said, "Look, if they want to kick me out of the tournament, they can, and I'll go."

Mays had no desire to see Namath disqualifed as the Jets' quarterback certainly would have been had the tournament been played under offficial Professional Golfers Association rules.

All Willie wanted to do was get going and the way I saw it, he shouldn't have gotten so overheated.. He might have had to wait a while but he would have been a lot better off making a joke of the whole thing.

After a slow start, the Bruins had spurted to the front of the NHL's Eastern Division lead in front of Montreal in late December. But the losing skid dropped the club into third place with 67 points, only five points ahead of Buffalo and six ahead of Detroit.

Sunday night, the Bruins settled for a 2-2 tie with the Philadelphia Flyers to pick up only their 12th point in their last 15 games.

Very Rough Day For Tom Watson

If you watched the television portion of the Hawaiian Open golf tournament over the weekend I bet you were pulling for young Tom Watson.

There was this 23-year-old boyish looking kid leading all the big names in the field through the first two rounds. Then Saturday, just in time for the TV cameras, Watson holed three consecutive birdie putts of 20, 30 and 25 feet on television holes, 15, 16 and 17. Time ran out and we didn't get a chance to see him par the 18th hole to take a four-stroke lead at the tourney's three-quarter mark.

YOUNG MR. WATSON, as the story goes, didn't get much sleep Saturday night. It's no easy thing to be staring first prize of $40,000 in the eyes.

Then came Sunday and the showdown for the young man who is on the tour for just his second year. By the time the TV cameras clicked on, Watson's lead had disappeared and now he was tied for first, but sinking fast. A double bogie on hole number 13 had helped that fat four-stroke bulge vanish. Yes, No. 13 had been unlucky for the curly-haired Watson.

STILL IN THE fight, there was Watson faced with a chip shot to the green which would have to carry over a sand bunker. These are the kind of shots that make you and I tremble. Too often we look up and send the ball straight to the sand as if directed by radar. Watson's ball had ended up in a tire track of some kind and he requested but was refused relief from the lie. When he finally chipped up, it looked just like my last chip shot on the ninth hole at Peacock Gap. Watson's ball was lofted directly into the sand.

He shook his head, walked up to the ball and did the same thing I did last time I was faced with a bunker shot at Indian Valley. He got too much ball, not enough sand, and sent it soaring over the green.

WHEN I MEET disaster in the sand dunes of a golf course, it just costs me a chance to break 100. For Watson, a bright fellow who just a few semesters back was deep in his books at Stanford University, it meant much more.

That's why I was really pulling for him when he finally reached the 18th hole and had a long putt for an eagle 3. He came close and had a tap-in for a birdie which gave him third place and a check for $14,200. He was still trying to fight back on that 18th green. Orville Moody was a stroke better and made $22,800, but the brass ring went to John Schlee, 15 under par with 273, three strokes better than Watson who had shot a 75 on this closing day on the Waialae Country Club course in Honolulu.

SCHLEE, 33, has been battling golf courses and other golfers for eight years on the tour and this was his first victory, so the top prize was well deserved.

Anyway, if you were watching the tourney in color, wasn't it beautiful? Hawaii is really a land of paradise. When I was there last March during some Giant exhibition baseball games against a Japanese team, I broke away from the hustle and bustle of Waikiki Beach long enough to drive around the Waialae course and the setting is really breathtaking. But alas. I didn't have my golf clubs along.

Marin Cagers Smash Solano, 89-42

By LEW CODDINGTON

A basketball team with an 18-3 record played a 4-17 team Saturday night in Kentfield, and the outcome was exactly what could be expected, only more so.

College of Marin, making 10 shots in a row at one stage and scoring 18 points in a row at another, pulverized Solano College of Suisun City in a Camino Norte Conference game before about 400 fans, 89-42.

The beating was even worse than the final score indicated, if that's possible. With eight minutes left, Marin had a 75-29 lead, and twice later got the margin up to 48 points.

The game concluded the first round-robin of the conference schedule, and left Marin (now 19-3) tied for first place at 6-1 with West Valley College of Campbell, 85-58 victor over Canada College of Redwood City Saturday night. Solano (now 4-18) which has not won a CNC game since 1971, is 0-7.

Wil Garner scored 18 points, Len Smith and Joe DeMaestri 14 apiece and Joe Casteel 10 for Marin. When the reserves entered, John Crozier and Mike Lindquist distinguished themselves, Crozier getting 11 points and four rebounds and Lindquist seven points and eight rebounds.

"We went to the offensive boards tonight, which is something we didn't do against Skyline Tuesday (in a 74-69 victory)," said Tar head coach John Panagakis. Marin outrebounded Solano, 50-27.

The Tars left no doubt from the beginning, opening up a 13-2 lead. When Solano closed to 13-7, Marin went on another tear to make the score 24-7.

The 21st and 22nd points came as Smith fed DeMaestri, and began the string of 10 straight successful shots from the floor. DeMaestri and Garner made four each and Lindquist and Casteel hit the others. At the end of the hot spell, Marin was ahead, 40-13.

The Tars led at halftime, 49-23, and a little later were on top 55-27 when they went on another rampage, scoring 18 straight for a 73-27 lead. DeMaestri, Garner and Casteel got four points each.

Solano scored only six points in the first 12 minutes after intermission, and just 19 in the second half, the seventh time this year Marin has held an opponent to 20 or less in a half.

Sonoma Five Rallies, Tops Hayward By 11

By PAUL DWORIN

For the second game in a row, Sonoma State college fell behind early and then buried an opponent in the second half with an avalanche of points as the Cossacks beat visiting Hayward State, 76-65, for a Far Western Conference basketball victory in Rohnert Park Saturday.

The two weekend victories raised the Cossacks conference mark to 5-1; they are now in a first-place tie with Chico State, 99-89 victors over Sacramento State Saturday. Sonoma visits Chico Saturday, 8 p.m.

Down 41-34 at halftime, the Cossacks came out gunning in the second half, canning four quick baskets on jumpers by Bill Belander and Steve Tiedeman, and a George Schandelmier tip, to take over the lead at 42-41.

Hayward then regained the lead and held it for six minutes until Belander put in four straight baskets and Tom Fitchie one to put the Cossacks back on top to stay at 58-50.

In the next four minutes, Sonoma outscored the Pioneers 13-4 as Belander made four more baskets.

"I don't know what was wrong in the first half," said Belander who scored just six points in the opening 20-minutes, "but I felt good in the second half." Good is not the word for his performance. The 6-foot-4 junior from San Diego put in a game-high 28 points and grabbed nine rebounds. For the game, he hit on 14 of 26 field goal attempts.

The Cossacks got off to an early 24-14 lead behind the inside work of Dan Heien and the outside shooting of Steve Tiedeman, but with ten minutes to play in the half, Sonoma went ice cold and was outscored 15-0 before Fitchie got them back on the scoreboard with two straight 25-footers.

It wasn't so much that Hayward was shooting well from

IDLE WARRIORS SET PRACTICE TOMORROW

OAKLAND (UPI) — Golden State Warrior coach Al Attles wishes Jim Barnett could handle himself in every game the way he did against Seattle.

Barnett and Cazzie Russell combined for 62 points Saturday night to give the Warriors a 123-101 National Basketball Association win over the Supersonics.

Barnett got 30 points, tying his second high game as a Warrior.

"It was a great game for Jim," said Attles. "If we could expect that type of game from him all the time, we'd be set."

However, Attles added that Barnett is "not that type of player all the time, and we know it."

The Warriors were idle last night and will have today off.

"Then it's practice Tuesday and Wednesday," Attles said.

The Warriors host Portland Thursday night. The Warriors are 9½ games behind the first-place Los Angeles Lakers in the Pacific Division.

Innsbruck Is Olympic Games Site

Combined AP & UPI

LAUSANNE, Switzerland — The reverend made an impassioned plea, mustering all the eloquence of a sermon from his pulpit. But the Olympic executives were unmoved and gave the 1976 Winter Games to Innsbruck, Austria.

"We knew we were working against heavy odds," said the Rev. Bernard Fell, main spokesman for the group which had been hoping they could persuade the executive body of the International Olympic Committee to award the Games to Lake Placid, N.Y.

"We had only four days to prepare our application, get it printed and then come over here to argue our case," said the minister of the United Methodist Church. "If we'd had a little more time, we might have made it. Even the film we showed them of our skiing slopes at Lake Placid was six years old. It was all we could manage at such short notice."

Fell had told the IOC executives: "In 1976, we will, as the world is our witness, be good to the Olympic Games.

But the effort was all in vain for the community of 5,000 which, in 1932, had hosted the first Winter Olympics in the United States.

Innsbruck, a city of 116,000 with all the facilities of the successful 1964 Winter Games still intact, ran away with the selection yesterday.

Besides Lakes Placid, the IOC executives also turned down bids by Chamonix, France, and Tampere, Finland.

The crisis preceding the selection of Innsburck began when Denver, Colo., the original host, withdrew. In a statewide ballot last November, Colorado voters had overwhelmingly refused to approve the use of state funds to help stage the Games.

Meanwhile, Lord Michael Killanin, Avery Brundage's successor as IOC president, went

Gregg Reaches Goal With Car Race Win

Combined AP & UPI

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Curly haired, handsome Peter Gregg reached his goal. Curly haired, handsome Hurley Haywood crossed the threshold to the future.

The pair of skilled race drivers, so alike and yet so different, made a perfect team in piloting a Porsche Carrera to a surprise victory in the 24 hours of Daytona sports car race yesterday a triumph so easy Gregg said, "We didn't run the car any harder than I will drive my Porsche 911 going back to Jacksonville."

In the first half of the race that began Saturday at 3 p.m. their performance was overshadowed by the 119 m.p.h. laps around the 3.81-mile course Mike Hailwood and Derek Bell of England turned in a pair of Gulf Mirages as they dueled with Francois Cevert and Henri Pescarolo in a French Matra that won last year's 24-hour race at LeMans.

But the Mirages and Matra fell victim to mechanical troubles under the brutal pounding. Then Gregg and Haywood had to play a supporting role to the glamorous pair of Indianapolis winner Mark Donohue and CanAm champion George Follmer in a sister Porsche Carrera until it, too, went out ear the halfway point with a broken piston.

They finished nearly 85 miles ahead of a second-place Ferrari GTB driven by Milt Minter of Los Angeles and Francois Migault of France. A Corvette shared by David Heinz of Tampa, Fla., and Bob McClure of Bethel Park, Pa., was 15 miles farther back.

Gregg, at 31, says he is reducing his racing schedule to spend more time with wife Jennifer and sons Jason, 10, and Simon 8.

"It's not my goal to become famous at racing," said Gregg, who owns a lucrative foreign car dealership in Jacksonville 95 miles to the north.

He called Haywood his protege, and predicted a big future for the 24-year-old who found his way from his native Chicago to Florida, where he enrolled in business administration at Jacksonville University and met Gregg at a racing event.

"In two days time, I taught him to drive around the track within two seconds of my time," Gregg said.

Haywood declares his goal is to be "a top flight professional driver. I'll be in CanAm on my own this year. If I do well, I look for better things in the future. Maybe this victory will help."

NHL BRUINS

Guidolin Replaces Johnson

BOSTON (UPI) — The Boston Bruins today fired coach Tom Johnson and named Armand "Bep" Guidolin of the American Hockey League Boston Braves to replace him.

The move came on the heels of a mid-season skid in which the Bruins had won only four of 13 games since Jan. 4.

Johnson will remain with the team in an administrative capacity.

Mangaging director Harry Sinden said he "felt a change was necessary at this time." He said Guidolin would take over immediately.

Guidolin, 47, has coached the Braves in the AHL since the team's inception a year ago. Last year, he guided the club to the Eastern Division title and this season the Braves have been holding down the second spot behind the Nova Scotia Voyageurs.

Previously, as coach of the Oshawa (Ont.) Generals, Guidolin had coached Bobby Orr, Wayne Cashman and Nick Beverley, all now with Boston.

Guidolin turned pro with the Bruins during the 1942-43 season when he was only 16-years-old and he still holds that distinction as being the youngest ever to play in the National Hockey League.

His major league career was interrupted by a hitch in the Canadian Armed Forces but he still managed a nine year NHL career with the Bruins, Detroit

Goalie Meloche Is A Model Of Frustration

OAKLAND (UPI) — Montreal's Canadiens won a National Hockey League game 6-1 Sunday night and the busiest and most frustrated man on the ice was goalie Gilles Meloche of the California Golden Seals.

Twice he tried and failed to stop breakaways while his teammates attempted to skate back in time.

A shot by Murray Wilson, the second breakaway, was blocked by Meloche who had to leave the net. But then Jacques Lemaire picked up the rebound and made the goal.

In all, the Canadiens took 39 shots, making three of them good in the first period and putting the game away early.

There was a boisterous and unhappy crowd of 9,022 in the Oakland Arena for the game and at least two of them had more or less violent words.

Seal Coach Fred Glover said one disgruntled fan moved behind his team's bench and "called everybody on the team everything in the book."

Another spectator pushed the critic over the rail into an area between the Seal and Montreal benches.

PREP BASKETBALL

Marin Catholic To Host Novato

Marin Catholic High School, which three weeks ago was trying to think of ways to avoid the cellar, will have a chance this week to make a run at first place in Marin County Athletic League basketball.

The Wildcats will host Novato at 7 p.m. tomorrow in an important game, and will entertain league-leading Drake Friday in an even more important one. Tomorrow's other games find San Marin at San Rafael, Terra Linda at Redwood and Tamalpais at Drake, all at 4 p.m.

"Actually, there never has been a 'turning point,' " said Marin Catholic coach Dave Gonsalves. "We've played only one bad game all year. The ones we lost early were close, and we made the other team win them."

The "bad" game was a 52-45 loss to Redwood Jan. 16 which dropped the 'Cats' record to 1-3. They have not lost since, and their four-game winning streak is the longest in the league this year.

The lone Wildcat of any great size is 6-foot-4 center Tom Cronin, who scoed 22 points Friday in a harrowing 48-46 win over San Marin. Anothe leading rebounder is 6-1 Ben Partee, who did a stellar defensive job Friday, combining with 5-10 Paul Bartolini to hold San Marin's high-scoring Hoza Wright to nine points.

Despite the lack of size, the Wildcats have outrebounded their opponents, chiefly because they permit their foes few defensive rebounds. They wait patiently for the good shot on offense, frequently hitting 50 per cent or better despite being the league's lowest-scoring team. On the other hand, they lead the league in defense.

Enigmatic Novato (4-4) has lost three straight on the road after holding the unchallenged league lead at one point. The losses have come by one, four and five points, but it's rapidly becoming apparent in the balanced league that to contend, a team must win the close ones.

Tamalpais (2-6) beat Novato Friday, and is a wholly different team from the one Drake demolished by 31 points in their first meeting. "The team that's going to win the championship is going to have to beat us," insists coach Bernie Schneider.

Drake (6-2) has won three in a row since a two-point loss to Novato Jan. 19, or more to the point, since forward Don Asay and guard Rick Herbert were installed in the starting lineup. The two have scored 92 points in the three games.

Redwood (5-3) rebounded from a shattering 81-60 loss to Drake to defeat San Rafael Friday and remain on the Pirates' heels. The Giants face a Terra Linda (4-4) team which has dropped three of its last four, including a 75-70 loss to Drake Friday.

Like Novato and Terra Linda, San Marin (4-4) has reached the point where it cannot afford any more losses. The Mustangs lost to San Rafael last time around, 70-57, but the Bulldogs (2-6) have lost all six games since then.

Sabich Triumphs In Ski Slalom

BURNSVILLE, Minn. (UPI) — Spider Sabich, Snowmass, Colo., nipped 6-foot 5 Austrian skier Harald Stuefer for first place Sunday in head-to-head slalom competition at the St. Paul Winter Carnival's McDonalds' Cup at Buck Hill.

Sabich, 28, hiked his point total in the Benson & Hedges Grand Prix Ski Tour to 162 and raised his earnings to $13,325. Stuefer remained in second place with 156 points and picked up $1,500 to increase his total earnings to $12,900.

Jean-Claude Killy of Megeve, France, fastest slalom qualifier and winner of Saturday's giant slalom competition was leading his race against Mike Schwaiger of Austria when he fell and spun into the crowd. He was not hurt.

Schwaiger went on to take third place money of $1,200 and moved up to 16th in the tour standings. Killy retained his third place overall position with 134 points and earnings of $11,400.

Gourmet Wine And Glass Shop Due In Downtown San Rafael

A gourmet wine and glass shop will open in downtown San Rafael at 891 Fourth Street (corner of Lootens Place), where Gallenkamp Shoes was formerly located.

Owners of Gourmet Wine and Glass will be John J. Collins and his wife Adrienne of San Rafael.

"We're shooting for about a March opening," said Collins. "We plan to have 300 varieties of wines, mostly premium wines, both domestic and imported." Collins said he will have the largest display of cocktail and wine glasses in this area — about 2,000 different glasses.

The store will also carry a complete line of bar supplies and tools. Collins plans to use rough redwood, some tiffany lamps, and subdued lighting to create the wine cellar mood.

Collins has been an electrician in San Francisco for about 12 years and did considerable work at Ghirardelli Square. He was also bartender and liquor store employee for about four years. He and his family came to Novato in 1962 and have lived in San Rafael for the past five years.

Gallenkamp Shoes, which operated at the site until last month, closed its San Rafael outlet and consolidated operations with its Northgate Mall store.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Explanation Given Of 'Floating Supply'

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. There appears to be a need for an explanation of how "floating supply" of a stock is determined. — R.C.

A. Shares held by company officials, by members of their families or indirectly through trust accounts are considered "closely held." In other words, these are not usually available for trading, but are held as long-term investments. Changes in such stockholdings are reported weekly in the Wall Street Journal under the heading "Insider Transaction."

In addition, one company may hold shares of another firm as an investment. These shares under most conditions would be excluded when determining floating supply. Institutionally held shares are also thought of as closely held, although these are frequently unloaded on the market creating sharp price fluctuations. After deducting any of the above holdings from the outstanding common, the resulting number would be the "floating supply."

Q. Why does Florida Steel (NYSE) have the lowest price/earnings ratio in the steel industry when it earns more than any of the other companies? I own 100 shares bought at $26. — J.M.

Florida Steel produces steel reinforcing bars used in concrete construction. Since more than 70 per cent of sales emanate from the construction industry, the company is generally classified with this group rather than with the steel producers. However, among the five firms fabricating similar products, Florida commands the lowest multiple.

Because all company mills are operating now at close to full capacity, only modest increases in output will be possible with present facilities. However, a 75 per cent larger furnace is scheduled to be in operation at the Tampa mill by April. The prospects for higher product prices are dim, despite the relaxed Phase II rules, since Florida's profit margin is now higher than in any of the base years. An upgrading in product mix to the higher profit lines would generate some earnings gains. Shares no trading at only 6.5 times estimated 1973 earnings are undervalued andshould be held in conservative accounts.

Claim Rate Is Boosted For Airline

LOS ANGELES (BW) — The Civil Aeronautics Board has granted authority to the Flying Tiger Line to increase the minimum amount a shipper may claim for goods lost or damaged in most domestic air shipments from 50 cents a pound, or $50 (whichever is higher), to $8.16 a pound, or $50.

In granting the increase, effective immediately, the board said it would study the results and compare them with the existing lower liability conditions which remain in effect for other airlines.

The all-cargo carrier said this is the first time an airline has been granted the authority to increase the amount payable on shipper claims.

Flying Tiger retained the 10-cent excess value charge per $100 of excess declared value. The international shipment charge will remain at 40 cents per $100 of total declared value.

Under Flying Tiger's new rules, shippers may declare excess valuation on a whole shipment or a portion of a shipment.

Prices Dip Narrowly On Market

Declines led advances by about a 7-to-6 margin among he more than 1,780 issues on the tape.

Phase III and a weakening dollar still troubled investors. Also, increases in interest rates have led many to fear the Federal Reserve System is clamping down on credit. While this can help inflation, it has a bearish market impact inasmuch as it could slow expansion in the latter half of 1973, analysts said.

American Stock Exchange prices moved lower in slow trading.

INCOME TAX FACTS

By PETER J. WIKEL, C.P.A.

Political Contributions May Be Deducted If Form 4908 Filed

Political contributions are deductible if the candidate or the campaign committee qualified by filing Form 4908 in the case of a candidate, or Form 4909 in the case of a campaign committee directly with the Internal Revenue Service and fully complying with all of the rules.

The political candidate or campaign committee can secure a copy of Technical Information Release No. 1145 dated Feb. 23, 1972, from the Internal Revenue Service which gives details for qualifying.

If the candidate or the campaign committee has qualified, then contributions to them are deductible, but you will need a receipt on the form prescribed by the Internal Revenue Service for each contribution, or you will need a cancelled check showing the payment and what it was for and you may be called upon for further verificaiton if all you have is your cancelled check.

A contribution to a national, state or local committee of a national political party is eligible for credit or deduction without the national, state or local committee filing these Forms 4908 and 4909, since this has been taken care of on a national level.

The amount of the credit which you can deduct on your income tax return is not more than one-half of the total contribution that you made and in no event more than $12.50 on a single or separate return, or more than $25 on a joint return.

As an alternate to a direct deduction of a credit against taxes, you can deduct the total amount of your gift, but not in excess of $50 on a single return or separate return, or more than $100 on a joint return as an itemized deduction under miscellaneous deductions on Schedule A of your tax return if you itemize your deductions.

If you are paying taxes on your top dollar at a rate in excess of 50 per cent and you itemize your deductions, then obviously it would be to your benefit to claim the itemized deduction for the contribution rather than the credit since the credit only permits a 50 percent deduction from taxes whereas a deduction from income with a tax rate in excess of 50 per cent will give you a greater deduction.

Antihijacking Measures Are Started In Oakland

OAKLAND (BW) — New antihijacking procedures were to go into effect at noon today — one day early — at Oakland International Airport using the so-called "sterile concourse."

The Federal Aviation Administration has ordered local agencies to provide police and a search of all hand-carried luggage for every flight effective Feb. 6.

With the "sterile concourse" plan all passengers will be screened at a common point, rather than at individual airline gates as in the past. At Oakland International this point will be at the entrance to the concourse, just off the main lobby.

Carry-on items of passengers will be searched and the passengers themselves screened with magnetometers, which are metal-detecting devices. Police surveillance will be provided by the Oakland Police Department.

The sterile concourse, with all passengers for all airlines passing through a single check point permits the most economical methods since a minimum of personnel can be used.

To avoid flight delays airlines are urging passengers to check in earlier for their flights. Allowing 45 minutes instead of the usual 15 to 30. This will be especially important at peak morning, mid-day and evening hours.

Passengers also are urged to check as much of their luggage as possible so that as little search as possible will be necessary.

Passenger screening at airline gates has been compulsory since the beginning of the year.

Lakers Burst Bullets' Bubble

By U P INTERNATIONAL

The Los Angeles Lakers burst the Baltimore Bullet bubble

The Bullets anxious to wrap up the Central Division title early to prepare for their first round playoffs against its Atlantic Division opponent were riding a four-game winning streak Sunday when they were shelled by the Lakers heavy artillery—Jerry West and Gail Goodrich

The Los Angeles Happiness Boys scored 28 points apiece as the Laker troupe posted its 18th consecutive National Basketball Association victory 125-115

Our problem was letting them jump out too early," explained Baltimore guard Phil Chenier who scored 22 points against the Laker defense 'West shoots off those Los Angeles picks, but that's not saying I could stop his jumper even if I fought my way past Chamberlain Wilt just moves me out of the way Whe West is shooting I guess there's nothing much you can do."

Baltimore held the Lakers even for the first quarter, but lost the game in the second period when Los Angeles outscored the Bullets, 38-29. Wes Unseld tallied 24 points for the losers, but was outclassed by Chamberlain under the boards, 20-8 Archie Clark also scored 24 for Baltimore

In other NBA action, Chicago ripped Milwaukee 121-99; Boston topped Philadelphia, 123-115· New York beat Cleveland 114-97 Houston routed Buffalo, 130-118 and KC-Omaha mauled Seattle 120-98

Bob Love scored a career high 49 points as Chicago cut Milwaukee's lead in the Midwest Division to 4½ games.

The hapk's 76ers led Boston by 12 points going into the fourth quarter, but couldn't contain the Celtics in the final period as Jo Jo White scored 11 f his game high 38 points in the session.

Earl Monroe powered New York to victory over Cleveland by hitting all seven shots in the fourth quarter after the Knicks trailed by a point with 9:37 left in the game.

Houston, playing its fifth game in six days, received a 30-point shooting performance from Jack Marin. Rockets team captain Jimmy Walker was ejected after drawing two technical fouls.

KC-Omaha's Nate Archibald became the first player to score 2,000 points in the National Basketball Association this season when he poured in 31 points against Seattle. spencer Haywood topped the Sonics with 27 points.

Ex-Olympic Hero Stars For Detroit

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Just one year ago Henry Boucha was helping work a miracle for all of America. Now, he's merely trying to achieve the incredible for the Detroit Red Wings.

Boucha was one of the star performers for the United States Olympic hockey team that amazed almost everyone by winning the silver medal at Sapporo, Japan, last February. Immediately after his return home, he signed a professional contract with the Red Wings.

Although he was nowhere near an immediate success in the National Hockey League last year, Boucha now finds himself in the middle of another budding Cinderella story as Detroit continues its surge for a playoff berth that just a short while ago seemed out of reach.

Boucha, a tireless worker even when he isn't scoring, came up with his seventh and eighth goals of the season Sunday night as Detroit bombed the Vancouver Canucks 8-2. It was the fourth consecutive victory for the Wings, who at one time were 14 points in back of fourth-place Buffalo, but now trail the Sabres by only a single point in the East Division.

Buffalo, which had to struggle for a 1-1 tie on Long Island Saturday night managed to maintain its slim hold on fourth place by beating the Islanders 5-1 in a home ice rematch Sunday night.

In the West Division, the Chicago Black Hawks stretched their lead over second-place Philadelphia to 10 points by belting the St. Louis Blues 5-2 while the Flyers played to a satisfying 2-2 tie against the slumping Bruins at Boston.

The Montreal Canadiens maintained their four-point edge over the Rangers in the East race by beating the California Golden Seals 6-1 after New York had stretched its winning streak to eight games by belting the Atlanta Flames 6-0. In an afternoon contest, the Minnesota North Stars avenged a Saturday loss at Pittsburgh by edging the Penguins 4-3.

Mickey Redmond scored his 17th goal in his last 17 games and Marcel Dionne added a goal and two assists to support Detroit's attack.

Chico Maki, Jim Pappin and Dan Maloney scored within a four-minute span of the first period to provide Chicago all the offensive power it needed to stretch its unbeaten string to eight games. The Blues, making a late run at a West Division playoff berth, had their non-losing skein snapped at nine games.

Wooden Is Upset With Newsmen

'No question, Walton is our big man." Wooden said after his Bruins whipped cross-town rival Southern California 79-56 Saturday night to extend their Pacific 8 Conference record to 5-0, 1972-73 overall record to 17-0 and winning streak to 62.

"But Keith Wilkes had two great games last week when we broke the record (consecutive victory mark to 61). You sports writers keep saying he's overlooked and then you go right ahead and overlook him."

Walton scored 20 points and grabbed 17 rebounds in the victory over USC while Larry Farmer, another overlooked Bruin, and Wilkes scored 16 and 14 points, respectively.

The score was tied at 12-12 in the early minutes when Walton hit on a layup to start a 12point spurt that put the Bruins in front and the Trojans never came close again.

"We looked good in those early minutes," said Trojan coach Bob Boyd, "but then we lost our poise and any concept of what we were doing out there. Some of our players got caught up in the tenseness of it."

Wooden, befitting a coach of a super team, said he never thought his club was in trouble and figured it was just a matter of time before it exploded.

The loss was the first of the year in conference play for the Trojans, who now are 4-1 in the Pac 8 and 13-5 overall

Only one other Pac 8 game was played Saturday and in that one Rick Kelley, Stanford's 7-foot center, hit on 20 of his game-high 28 points in the second half as the Cardinals came on to beat California 73-68.

In the West Coast Athletic Conference, University of San Francisco and Santa Clara continued on their winning ways, the 19th ranked Dons beating Nevada-Reno 89-66 and the Broncos routing Nevada-Las Vegas 95-73.

Santa Clara and USF, old WCAC rivals, are tied for first with 6-0 records. They have their first showdown of the year this Saturday in San Francisco and then meet again three nights later at Santa Clara. Those two games should decide the division title.

All America Ed Ratleff scored 28 points to lead fourth ranked Long Beach State to an easy 103-82 victory over Los Angeles State and into a tie for first with San Jose State in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association. Both the 49ers and Spartans are 4-1. Long Beach meets San Diego State twice this week while San Jose plays Pacific twice.

out of his way to warn all concerned with the Winter Games that any more blatant professionalism or commercialization in them could mean their death.

"I draw your attention," said Killanin about the hubbub caused by his announcement of Innsbruck, "to the fact that there are a lot of people critical of the winter Olympic Games on the grounds of eligibility, the small number of countries involved and of the commercialization.

"I want particularly to stress that the position of commercialization at Innsbruck will be watched very carefully Much will depend on our future attitude on what happens at Innsbruck," Killanin said.

Marilyn Wins Bowler Of Year Tourney

Marilyn Epidendio defeated Roberta Thorsen in the finals yesterday, 179-169, to win the Marin County Women's 600 Club Bowler of the Year tournament at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael

Mrs. Epidendio finished first in the qualifying with an 861 score for four games, then sat down as Mrs. Thorsen, who qualified fourth, defeated three opponents for the right to challenge her

The tournament involved 12 bowlers, the top one from each month of 1972. Mrs. Epidendio was the January winner and, coincidentally, is also the January winner for 1973, so she is certain of returning to defend her title.

Mrs. Thorsen, the December winner qualified with a 747 series, placing her behind Mrs. Epidendio and Penny Tauscher (July) and Barbara Eastland (May), who tied at 753. Jackie Newsom (August) was fifth at 719.

Mrs. Thorsen defeated Mrs. Newsom, 177-170, and then working her way up the ladder, beat Mrs. Eastland, 178-154, and Mrs. Tauscher, 182-153, before confronting Mrs. Epidendio.

Mrs. Epidendio won $50 cash plus a $25 paid entry to the State Queens Tournament later this year in Bakersfield. Her qualifying games were 218, 225, 194 and 224. High game for the day was bowled by Anne Maillard, 229.

In the second half, Cossack coach Bill Trumbo changed to a zone and that caused Hayward to shoot outside. The Pioneers shot 27 per cent in the second half after a 45 per cent first half effort.

In the preliminary game, the Sonoma State junior varsity avenged an earlier loss to North Peralta College with an 87-78 victory.

Fund Delay May Hike Bay Recreation Cost

Park Funds Eliminated From National Budget

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

A delay of at least one year to start buying private land for the Golden Gate National Recreation Area has been threatened by the Nixon administration's proposed new budget.

The recreation area's superintendent acknowledged the delay probably will mean the authorized ceiling of $61.6 million to buy the 16,211 acres of private land will prove too little because of inflation.

The $61.6 million was based on National Park Service estimates of land values last year, a figure that probably would hold up for only three years, Supt. William J. Whalen told the Independent-Journal today.

He stressed that the proposed $268 billion budget contained no money for park service land acquisition anywhere in the nation, and that the new recreation area was not being "picked on."

Whalen speculated that the prospect of getting needed funds in fiscal 1974-75 were "very good." He said the park service will "ask for just as much money as we can get," but did not know how much it had asked the administration to include in the proposed budget.

Whalen said there may be some surplus park service funds — perhaps $2 million to $6 million — available this fiscal year to start buying the private holdings. All but 11 of the 16,211 acres are in Marin between the Golden Gate Headlands and Point Reyes National Seashore.

The 34,000-acre recreation area, which consists largely of federal, state and San Francisco county lands, stretches along the ocean south to the San Mateo County line and includes Alcatraz and Angel islands.

Whalen predicted that despite the first year's delay, purchase of the private lands will "move much quicker" than the 10 years it took at the national seashore.

Pledges by the park service last year to buy all the private property within three years, he noted, were contingent on getting the necessary funds in time.

The budget does propose $2.5 million to start opening to the public the federal, state and county lands. Whalen said this money, if appropriated, should allow more public use of forts Barry, Baker and Cronkhite on the Marin headlands.

The recreation area bill also authorized $58 million to develop the land for public recreation, but none of this was sought by the park service in the proposed budget.

The bill provided that the government could pay property owners 10 per cent down, with the rest of the purchase price spread, with interest, over 10 years. The administration, however, rejected this because it would commit payments from future budgets.

The interior committees of both the House of Representatives and Senate warned last

Congressmen Told Budget Hikes Would Raise Taxes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Any additions by Congress to President Nixon's proposed $268.7 billion budget would lead to tax increases and more inflation, Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz testified today.

If Congress cooperates to hold down spending, the increase in consumer prices will slow to 2.5 per cent and unemployment will drop to about 4.5 per cent in the year beginning July 1, Shultz told the House Appropriations Committee.

"In order to prevent a resurgence of inflation, and to prevent also an increase in taxes, we again need close cooperation between the Congress and the executive branch," Shultz said.

Shultz, Budget Director Roy L. Ash and Chairman Herbert Stein of the Council of Economic Advisers appeared at the hearing to justify the administration's budget requests.

The issue of congressional appropriations and White House refusal to spend some of them has become one of the main points of contention between the Democratic-controlled Congress and the Republican administration.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, suggested Sunday that Congress resort to "crude means" in its contest with the executive branch, while White House adviser John D. Erlichman defended President Nixon's refusal to spend money he considers unnecessary.

In his prepared testimony, Shultz called for cooperation between Capitol Hill and the White House.

"Such cooperation is vital to preserve the integrity of fiscal policy," he said. "... Only this way can we maintain a healthy economic environment in which the economy can grow, the number of unemployed can be reduced and the rate of inflation can continue to slow.

"If we fail in this endeavor, if federal spending soars beyond full employment revenues, it cannot help but lead to more inflation or more taxation or both."

Stein said that if Nixon's budget proposals are followed, "there is every indication that the forces at work ... will produce continued vigorous expansion in the economy."

THE DRINKING DRIVER

Arrests, Convictions Zooming

By LARRY MOWELL
(First of two articles)

The threat of arrest and jail hasn't stopped droves of motorists from driving while intoxicated at one time or another, but law enforcement officers are hoping arrest, conviction and education will have a more sobering effect.

Statistics show the deck has been stacked more and more in recent years against the drunken driver trying to weave his way home to bed.

In 1968, the Marin County District Attorney's office filed 656 drunken driving complaints, but charged nearly twice as many the following year. By 1970, the figure swelled to 1,520. An all-time high of 2,383 was reached in 1971 before the total dipped last year to 1,975.

At least 90 per cent of those charged were convicted, according to Dist. Atty. Bruce B. Bales.

During the past two years, drunken driving has accounted for more than one quarter of the local prosecutions, but the lawbreakers are seldom hardened criminals or skid row winos.

"It is the most pervasive, most socially acceptable drug problem we have," Judge David R. Baty of Marin Municipal Court said.

Businessmen and laborers, attorneys and policemen, doctors and housewives, politicians and reporters all have felt the sting of an enforced tour of the county jail drunk tank and subsequent criminal charges.

"Some of the nicest people in the world get picked up for this," attorney Leonard Shaw said.

The bumper crop of arrests is due to the California Highway Patrol, which posts a virtual picket line along Highway 101 in Marin each night. Patrol arrests soared from 471 in 1968 to 2,091 in 1971, according to information officer Keith E. Chapman.

Patrol Commissioner Walter Pudinski attributed the spiraling total to a policy of keeping patrolmen rolling on the lookout for drunken drivers instead of parking in speed traps.

That policy is reflected in the statewide figures. Drunken driving arrests by the highway patrol rose 17 per cent to 95,667 in 1972, despite a 14 per cent drop in all citations and arrests from 1971.

Marin's contribution to the total is gleaned primarily from the 20 miles of Highway 101 between the Golden Gate Bridge and Sonoma County line.

In the early morning hours when weaving cars are most prevalent, eight to ten patrol cars are on the move compared to two or three eight years ago, according to Chapman.

One reason for the open season on drunken drivers is this statistic: 16 of the 42 fatal traffic accidents in Marin last year involved drunks, Chapman said.

But how many highballs and beers are too many? Is the fellow who boasts he can drink everyone else under the table and who proceeds to do so any more sober than his companions?

State law says no. About four ounces of alcohol in the system — enough to give a reading of .10 on tests — mean a motorist

Engineers Say BART System Unsafe Under Full Operation

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The Bay Area Rapid Transit system as presently designed "will not provide adequate passenger safety" under full-scale operation, a three-member engineering panel reported to the legislature today.

But changes can be made in the $1.4 billion system "that will provide adequate passenger safety under all service conditions," the group told the Senate Public Utilities Committee, which asked for the study.

Presently the system operates in the East Bay on a combination manual-automatic technique where one train cannot move ahead to the next station until the train operator receives a telephone call from that station saying the track is clear.

This system has been instituted because once BART first got under way Sept. 11, there were some problems detecting trains that were stopped on the tracks, an aide to the Public Utilities Committee said in an interview.

Bob Foster, the committee aide, said BART officials say they think they have a mechanical solution for this problem which would involve a "track scrubber" brush that cleans wheels so it will be possible to insure effectiveness of the designed system for detecting when a train is stalled or stopped on the tracks.

BART information officer Mike Healy said BART has plans to install scrubbers on all trains. He said tests have proved the devices "one hundred per cent effective" in detecting dead trains.

"They've been very successful," Healy said when contacted at BART's Oakland headquarters. "The question is when and how to put them on. Initially we are putting scrubbers on about 10 cars."

Healy said BART officials have not seen the engineers' full report yet, but added that he believes it notes BART has already implemented some of the recommendations.

Under "full operation," the BART system would have to operate on an automatic basis once the San Francisco branch of the tracks is completed, Foster said.

After eight years of construction, the 28-mile section between Oakland and Fremont was opened. A week ago the operating line was extended 11 miles to Richmond.

The study panel was composed of Dr. Clarence A. Lovell of Fairfax, Va., Dr. Bernard M. Oliver of Palo Alto, and Dr. William M. Brobeck of Berkeley.

Viet Cong, South Vietnamese Holds First Talks On Future

PARIS (UPI) — Viet Cong and South Vietnamese officials met for the first time today on the political future of their war-torn country, announced agreement on a number of procedural matters and decided to meet again Wednesday.

The two sides, led by deputy delegation members, met for the first time without their North Vietnamese and U.S. allies. The talks are being held under a requirement of the Vietnam peace pact, signed in Paris 10 days ago.

In sidewalk statements to reporters after the more than two hour meeting at the Kleber Avenue conference center where the Vietnam accords were signed, the delegations said:

"At the preparatory meeting today on the procedure for the official negotiations between the two South Vietnam parties as called for by the Paris agreement on Vietnam, the two delegations agreed on a certain number of points."

Dinh Ba Thi, deputy leader of the four-man Viet Cong delegation, said: "Some points remain to be settled.

The Saigon mission leader, Nguyen Phuong Thiep, said: "We have discussed the modalities concerning the procedure for the opening of consultations as foreseen by the Paris agreement. We have agreed on a certain number of procedural points. We shall continue our discussion on Wednesday."

Neither side gave any indication which points were agreed upon and which remained to be settled.

Thiep said Saigon was determined to achieve a correctly applied and respected peace agreement.

"I wish to recall," he said, "our desire to open consultations with the other party as quickly as possible with a view to forming the National Reconciliation Council and thus achieve at the soonest date the most satisfactory solution to the political problems in South Vietnam."

Under the peace accord signed Jan. 27, the two sides must seek to establish a National Council within three months to supervise free elections in South Vietnam.

Dinh Ba Thi, leading the Viet Cong delegation, said, "Since the signing of the Paris accord, the Provisional Revolutionary Government has strictly respected and seriously applied the agreement.

"As to the internal problems, we believe that the sooner they are solved the better--and that they be solved within 90 days in a spirit of reconcilation and concord and mutual respect.

"It is in this spirit that we shall spare no effort to ensure the success of today's preliminary meeting," Thi said.

The meeting is intended to decide the level at which the political talks are held, the site and the frequency of meetings.

UNSER, KELLY WIN

Deacon Has Fun In Golf Tourney

SAN JUAN P R. (UPI) — Del Unser and Leroy Kelly won the $10,000 first prize Sunday in the American Airlines Golf Classic but Deacon Jones got the biggest cheer

Unser slender Philadelphia Phillies outfielder and Kelly rugged Cleveland Browns running back, shot a 54-hole net 177 over the El Conquistador Hotel course to win the $30,000 tournament for baseball-football player teams by five strokes

Jones the gigantic defensive tackle from the San Diego Chargers hit the 410-yard 18th hole with two well-played shots. His ball was about 30 feet from the cup. All he needed was two putts for a net birdie

Back and forth he putted taking four strokes on the green. As he picked up his ball from the cup with Puerto Rico television cameras grinding away the Deacon turned and hurled his putter about 100 yards in a nearby lake. Then he wound up and threw a perfect pitch with his ball to follow the putter

He turned to the gallery with the wide grin on his face and said, "that was more fun than getting a quarterback."

The win was a fortuitous one for Unser and Kelly.

Unser who has been traded twice in the last two years, needs the money to move his family again.

"Sure I'll take the $5,000,' he said 'I'm no super star like most of these other fellows With a batting average like mine I need all the money I can get Unser, after a slow start hit .238 for Cleveland last year.

Kelly lost $1,000 in cash while dancing in the hotel lounge Saturday night.

'I don't feel so bad about the money I lost now," he said "I've got five times as much as I had last night."

Kelly who was dancing to the singing of Deacon Jones, said he thought he put his money clip in his pocket, but later discovered the trousers did not have a pocket

The San Francisco team of Giant pitcher Juan Marichal and 49er placekicker Bruce Gossett finished second at 182 and received $2,500 each. Both said they intended to give the money to charity, the major portion of it to the Roberto Clemente Memorial Fund for Nicaraguan earthquake victims. Third, worth $1,000 each, went to two Houston representatives, Astro outfielder Jim Wynn and Oiler quarterback Dan Pastorini.

Aeschlimann Gets Junior Bowling Win

Ken Aeschlimann rolled a handicap series of 685 to defeat Jerry Walker by 22 pins and win the singles competition in the Classic division in the eighth annual Marin County Junior Bowling Tournament, held over the weekend at Greenbrae Lanes.

Walker gained revenge in the Classic doubles, teaming with Larry May for a 1,261 total which defeated Aeschlimann and George Sakellariou by 66 pins

AFTER HAWAIIAN OPEN WIN

Golfer Schlee Dons Gold Blazer

HONOLULU (UPI) — When Tom Watson finished the third round of $200,000 Hawaiian Open Saturday holding a four-stroke lead, John Schlee, who was second exclaimed "I hope he wins it. We non-winners have to stick together.'

Little did Schlee know at that time that he would be wearing the gold blazer given to the Hawaiian Open champion Sunday

Schlee, who had never won a tournament since joining the tour in 1965, fired a four-under-par 68 while Watson crumbled.

'I'm going to put the $40,000 into the bank along with all of the $500 I've won this year," he laughed.

His 15-under-par 273 was two strokes ahead of Orville Moody, who finished with a 69 to pocket $22,800.

Watson had a disastrous double bogey on the 13th along with two bogeys on the front nine to finish with a three-over par 75 and a 276. It was still good enough for third and $14,200, his biggest purse to date

Gay Brewer, who shared the first-round lead with Watson and George Archer, was alone in fourth with 277 after a 69, good enough for $9,400.

Schlee, who was tutored by Ben Hogan, moved into the lad on the 14th when he carded a birdie on the par-four hole. One hole back, Watson ran into problems with a water meter and soared to a double bogey.

But Schlee said the turning point was the 15th when he hit his drive into the right rough. "I tried to recall what Ben Hogan had told me," he said.

Using a four-iron, gripping the club like the way he was taught and playing the ball the way Hogan would have done it, Schlee hit around a tree and landed 12-feet from the green where he got his par.

Schlee credited Brewer and J.C. Snead, who was playing with him, for encouraging him all the way

"Snead was even more nervous than I was," he said.

"I was tense and nervous" said Watson, the 23-year-old Stanford graduate who is in his second year on the tour.

Snead finished with a 69 and 278 for $8,200 while Hale Irwin and Johnny Miller were at 279 with 66 and 69 respectively.

Lanny Wadkins, who had a 66, was at 280 while Archer, Billy Casper, Brian Allin, Juan Rodriguez, DeWitt Weaver and Larry Ziegler were at 281.

Archer had a 71 as did Allin, while Rodriguez, who is playing seriously, finished with a 67 Weaver and Ziegler both carded 69's while Casper had a 70.

Lee Trevino managed to break 70 for the first time this year with a 68 for a 282 while Bruce Crampton, winner of the Phoenix and Tucson opens came in with an even-par 72 for 283.

Rod Funseth, who started off the year winning the Los Angeles Open, had a 69 for 285.

Petaluma Hosts Santa Rosa '5'

Petaluma and Santa Rosa high schools renew their old rivalry tomorrow night at 7 o'clock when the Panthers invade the Petaluma gym; but with both schools out of contention for the North Bay League basketball crown, nothing much more than pride will be at stake.

In other prep basketball action tomorrow night at 7 o'clock, Rancho Cotate of Rohnert Park, travels to Forestville for a Sonoma County League clash with El Molino, St. Vincent hosts non-league for Cloverdale in the Kenilworth Junior High gym in Petaluma, and Tomales hosts Calistoga in a North Central League II contest.

The Trojans are in a three-way tie for fifth place in the NBL with a 2-6 mark, six games behind the league leading and undefeated Vallejo Apaches. Santa Rosa is four games behind at 4-4, good for fourth place.

Last time the two teams met, the Panthers edged Petaluma 63-59 in the last minute of play on free throws by Chris Allen. Allen, a 6-foot guard who has scored over 1,000 points in his varsity career, is the leading scorer on the Santa Rosa squad with a 20-points per game average.

Rancho Cotate has virtually eliminated itself from the SCL race, barring any second-half miracles, currently standing in sixth place with a 2-4 record, four and a half games behind Cardinal Newman of Santa Rosa. El Molino is in last place with an 0-6 mark.

St. Vincent, which kept its North Central League II record spotless Friday night with a 55-53 win over Kelseyville, takes a 10-4 overall record against the powerful Cloverdale Eagles, 12-4 overall.

Tomales, which got its initial NCL II victory of the year with a 77-57 win over Upper Lake, has a good chance to win against the Wildcats who are also 1-3 in league play.

EGO INVOLVED

Mays-Namath Fuss: A View Of Elements

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — They were talking about the Willie Mays-Joe Namath fuss in Puerto Rico, and someone brought up the word "ego"

"What's wrong with having an ego? I see nothing wrong with it at all." said Warren Spahn, a superstar in his own right elected to the Hall of Fame the other day and one of those honored here Sunday night by the Milwaukee chapter of the Baseball Writers Association of America.

"When I first heard about the Mays-Namath thing, I thought it was a publicity gag," Spahn went on. "I wasn't down there in Puerto Rico and I don't know what actually happened, whether it was a matter of two egos or not, but without ego, you have no ambition and without ambition you have no purpose."

That could be oversimplification on Warren Spahn's part, but in at least one respect, he's right. some degree of ego was involved in what happened between Willie Mays and Joe Namath in Puerto Rico last Friday.

What happened was that the two were paired together as partners in the opening round of the American Airlines Golf Classic, and when Namath showed up 40 minutes late, saying he didn't get a wakeup call from the hotel operator, Mays refused to play with him

Each was assigned a new playing partner and Namath later apologized to Mays, which should have ended the entire matter right there, except that it didn't.

Little Del Unser, the Philadelphia Phillies' new outfielder, and Leroy Kelly the Cleveland Browns' running back, won the tournament Sunday, but people will hardly remember that

Instead they'll only remember the episode between Mays and Namath even though both later insisted it was much ado about nothing. Human nature is like that. Few people care who won the tournament. People are now likely to keep wondering what got into Willie to make him stalk off the way he did.

The fact Mays said his walkogg esd "nothing against Joe personally," and that he was willing to play with anybody, even "a rookie", so long as he showed up on time, does not take away from the fact that Willie Mays feels he has reached the station in life where a certain amount of respect is coming to him—even from someone like Joe Namath.

The entire incident smacked of Hollywood's old "star system", a system which prevailed among movie actors and actresses 25 years ago, far more than it does now.

Getting back to the golf tournament, though, the sponsors, American Airlines, do everything to make all the contestants feel at home. They even pamper them and nobody among the 64 contestants were pampered more than Mays and Namath.

Both were provided with private hotel suites while all the other contestants had to rough it in mere luxurious $80 a day rooms.

A guy can get a little spoiled in an atmosphere like that.

Curiously or not, most of the other contestants sided with Mays. They felt Namath should have been on time, whether he missed his wakeup call or not.

For his part, Namath was generally sorry about all the trouble he caused.

"Willie has always been one of my heroes," he said, "Look, if they want to kick me out of the tournament, they can, and I'll go."

Mays had no desire to see Namath disqualifed as the Jets' quarterback certainly would have been had the tournament been played under offficial Professional Golfers Association rules.

All Willie wanted to do was get going and the way I saw it, he shouldn't have gotten so overheated.. He might have had to wait a while but he would have been a lot better off making a joke of the whole thing.

After a slow start, the Bruins had spurted to the front of the NHL's Eastern Division lead in front of Montreal in late Demcember. But the losing skid dropped the club into third place with 67 points, only five points ahead of Buffalo and six ahead of Detroit.

Sunday night, the Bruins settled for a 2-2 tie with the Philadelphia Flyers to pick up only their 12th point in their last 15 games.

VITAL HIGHWAY — Cambodian troops today reopened Highway 4, vital "Road to the Sea," that was severed three days ago by Communist troops. The strategic highway, pinpointed on this UPI newsmap, connects the capital of Phnom Penh with Cambodia's only deep sea port facility at Kompong Song.

Cambodians Reopen Vital Highway To Sea

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Cambodian troops today reopened Highway 4, the vital link between the capital and the nation's only deepwater port at Kompong Thom that was severed by Communist troops three days ago.

Elsewhere in the country, the Cambodian command said Communist troops cut Highway 2 and struck at government positions along Highway 5 early today.

Western military observers speculated that the Khmer Rouge (Cambodian Communists) struck at Highway 4, 34 miles southwest of Phnom Penh, primarily as a diversionary tactic allowing them to move food and supplies into their hideouts in the northern mountains.

A government armored unit moved down Highway 4 today to the cheers of infantrymen still combing the fields either side of the road.

"Most of the Communists have been gone since yesterday," he said. "In the last 48 hours we've had two killed and about 25 wounded—all by sniper machinegun fire."

Prisoner Release Seen At Least A Week Away

SAIGON (UPI) — Michael Gauvin, the Canadian chief delegate to the International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS), said tonight that he presumed the release of Vietnam war prisoners would begin in "a week or so," an indication the release may not come at midweek as expected.

Communist attacks dropped to a new low today as two parallel cease-fire observation teams flew into regional headquarters throughout the country, but there was a sharp tank battle near Hue in which six of nearly 30 attacking Communist tanks were destroyed.

Gauvin emerged from a four-hour meeting of the ICCS chiefs and said, "We have been warned about the possibility of an exchange of prisoners and to be ready. We are ready and I just forewarned the commission."

Asked when the release of prisoners would begin, Gauvin said, "Within, I presume, a week or so. I don't know where and I don't know when. But I know it is in the offing."

Gauvin's statement appeared to back away from his comment after a meeting Sunday that prisoner releases might begin by the middle of this week.

The ICCS discussed cease-fire violation complaints and named Gauvin chairman for the first month of operation. The ICCS chairmanship will rotate on the monthly alphabetical order of Canada, Hungary, Indonesia and Poland.

On reports of the cease-fire violations he said, "We have asked them (the regional ICCS teams) to get in touch with the Joint Military Commission (JMC) teams which should be in place very soon, to provide the necessary liaison so they can do the necessary investigation."

Both members of the ICCS and the JMC, made up of the United States, the Viet Cong and North and South Vietnam, sent their first permanent teams into a number of regional headquarters today. Their activities were kept secret from newsmen who were barred from observing their operations.

Bar Backs Protection Of Newsmen

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A lawyers group said today federal legislation to protect reporters from forced disclosure of sources or unpublished information received in confidence is constitutional and should be approved by Congress.

The Association of the Bar of the City of New York submitted the proposal to a House subcommittee as it opened hearings on bills aimed at shielding newsmen and news media materials from subpoena.

Contempt-of-court citations against newsmen have been on the increase, bringing protests from journalists and members of Congress that the people's access to information is gravely endangered. Some reporters fear that forced disclosure of sources could keep tipsters from revealing vital information on unannounced government policy or corruption.

Benno C. Schmidt Jr., professor of Law at Columbia University, said the bar association believes the legislation should protect only professional journalists receiving confidential information.

A reporter's eyewitness observations of public events would not be protected and even confidential information should be compelled under certain circumstances, Schmidt said.

Agnew May Welcome Prisoners

CLARK AIR BASE, Philippines (UPI) — The top medical officer at Clark Air Base indicated today that Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, currently on a Southeast Asian tour, may welcome the first group of American POWs leaving Hanoi.

Col. John W. Ord, commander of the Clark Air Base Hospital said he wanted to shield the returning POWs from any "large crowd-type of hullabaloo" and said he was counting on Agnew's "wisdom" to employ the "gentle approach."

Agnew, who is touring Indochina countries to explain the U.S. role in post-war Vietnam, was in Singapore today and is scheduled to visit Manila—though not necessarily Clark Air Base—on Friday. Of a possible Agnew visit to Clark, Ord said:

"I'm sure Mr. Agnew is fully aware of the requirement to approach gently any of our returnees. The thing that would really bother me is if this became a large crowd-type of hullabaloo sort of thing. Certainly any individual with the wisdom of someone like Mr. Agnew could handle that kind of thing superbly, and I would have no problem in my mind relative to that."

Ord, 49, a native of Baker, Ore., repeatedly emphasized at a news conference that the POWs will be given unhurried but thorough medical examinations free from harassment and fatigue when they arrive from North Vietnam.

Reports from Saigon indicated that the first of 562 known prisoners may begin arriving at Clark sometime this week. Ord said that rest, excellent food and good medical treatment were his prescription for a speedy return to the United States, possibly within 72 hours for a "fair percentage" of the men after their arrival.

Ord added that the 60 physicians who will treat the prisoners will be on the alert for any contingency, including tropical ailments and psychiatric problems.

Asked if any sort of fanfare or elaborate welcoming ceremonies, including an appearance by Agnew, might cause the returnees stress, Ord said, "We have to presume that many of the men for a long period of time have not been used to high pressure (or) large groups of people around them—really with them as the focus of attention.

"And it would seem to me it would be desirable to shield the men from that sort of thing until we have a chance to look at them from a medical standpoint," he said.

Ord said it was impossible for him to give a "moment by moment" schedule of the returnees. In general, he said, the POWs upon their entry at the 270-bed Clark hospital will be quickly checked to determine the presence or absence of medical problems and to make decisions on individual diets.

After their first rest period, the men will provide blood and urine samples, followed by a "detailed history and physical examination" and then a series of X-rays.

One of the early decisions, Ord said, will be to determine when each returnee will be able to meet his personal "escort," one of the 380 men chosen to ease the POWs' return and provide him with companionship and answers to any of his questions. The escorts also will ask the returnees for information about other prisoners and missing men.

Ord said there were about 60 physicians representing all medical specialities at the hospital.

Cabinet Shuffled

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Prime Minister Indira Gandi shuffled her cabinet Sunday night and expanded its membership from 54 to 60. She also took over the key portfolio of home affairs in order to personally supervise the federation of India's 21 states.

Food Spokesman Favors Controls

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A spokesman for the supermarket industry said today he agreed with President Nixon's decision to keep the food industry under mandatory economic controls.

Clarence G. Adamy, president of the National Association of Food Chains, said supermarket operators had suffered as much as anyone from inflation, and that the industry's return on investments was down to 0.3 per cent, the lowest in recent history.

Adamy asked the Senate Banking Committee to extend Nixon's power for one year—to April 30, 1974—to set wage and price controls. Nixon removed controls from most of the economy except the food, construction and health industries.

"We, as an industry, have an enormous stake in returning this country to a period of price stability—and especially food price stability—and we support every reasonable effort to bring this about," Adamy said.

Adamy said that uncertainty over possible union requests for big wage settlements in 1973 made it clear that Nixon's power to intervene in the economy "must be maintained at least for another year and possibly for a long time in the future."

Another witness, Arthur N. Okun, who was on the Council of Economic Advisers under Presidents John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson, also testified the Economic Stabilization Act should be extended for one year.

"I am convinced that the diligent pursuit of a wage-price restraint program is critical to our chances of attaining prosperity without increased inflation in 1973 and the years ahead," said Okun, now a senior fellow at the Brookings Institution in Washington.

He said Phase I and II of Nixon's economic policies "contributed significantly in my judgment, to a deceleration of inflation in the last year and a half even as the economy moved into a period of vigorous recovery."

He said that while Phase III is "potentially effective in principle, none-the-less, at the present time I cannot have complete confidence that the program will be implemented with full effectiveness in practice."

He said one of his major criticisms was that big companies and unions are required to report wage or price increases only at quarterly intervals rather than reporting them in advance before they are implemented.

Cleveland School Strike Settled, Others Go On

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Cleveland's 140,000 public school students were due back in the classroom today after negotiators for 3,200 striking non-teaching employes and the Cleveland Board of Education reached tentative agreement on a one-year contract. But strikes affecting another 388,000 pupils continued today in Philadelphia and St. Louis.

"It's a total victory for the unions," said attorney John R. Climaco who represented the striking custodians. "We got all the things we asked except the money, which we are going to talk about at a later date."

The contract calls for numerous adjustments in working conditions, the evening-out of vacation schedules and sets a limit of 23 hours overtime each non-academic employe can work. Some employes had been working as much as 60 hours each week.

The strike began last Wednesday, with the city's teachers refusing to cross picket lines.

In Philadelphia, negotiators for the striking teachers and the board of education held an unprecedented televised meeting Sunday, making public for the first time the differences that have blocked a contract settlement for 15 months.

The strike entered its fifth week today with 285,000 public school students remaining on extended vacation.

John Ryan, chief negotiator for the Philadelphia Federation of Teachers, said the union had cut its wage demands by 25 per cent. He placed the price of a three-year package at $84 million.

The school board repeated its offer of a $32 million wage package.

The St. Louis strike entered its third week today, with the board of education threatening to press contempt-of-court proceedings against the city's 4,000 teachers.

Teacher's in Missouri's largest city have ignored two temporary restraining orders and a temporary injunction issued against the strike and pickets.

A hearing was to be held today before Circuit Court Judge Thomas F. McGuire, and board vice president Dr. Andrew Doyle said Sunday he "wouldn't be surprised" if the board sought the contempt of court citations.

The board has maintained the teachers are violating state laws that prohibit teachers' strikes and collective bargaining with teachers.

Heath Opposes Withdrawal Of Europe Troops

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Prime Minister Edward Heath of Britain believes the unilateral withdrawal of some of the 300,000 U.S. troops in Europe might force a number of West European nations to "make a deal" with the Soviet Union.

"If the United States withdraws, this would encourage the Soviet Union to use its influence in a variety of ways," Heath said. "There are a number of European countries which would not stand up ... who would be likely to make a deal with the Soviet Union."

Heath, whose remarks were made in a television interview broadcast Sunday, did not identify the countries. However, he presumably was referring to Norway and Denmark, located on the northern flank of the NATO region. Heath insisted Great Britain would not be intimidated by the Russians.

The British prime minister was interviewed on NBC's "Meet the Press."

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Lindy Boggs Wins

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Louisiana Democrats chose Lindy Boggs, widow of former House Majority Leader T. Hale Boggs, to take her missing husband's place in Congress.

Mrs. Boggs, 56, crushed four opponents in a special primary election Saturday. She polled more than 70 per cent of an exceptionally light vote, leaving her opponents to split up 14,903 of the 56,084 ballots cast.

She still must defeat Republican candidate Robert E. Lee March 20 in a special election, but since Louisiana is traditionally a solid Democratic state she is considered a shoo-in.

She would be the first woman Louisiana has ever elected to Congress, although two women have been appointed to the Senate to fill out brief terms of senators who died in office.

Eye Danger

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — More than half the eye makeup used by American women may be contaminated by bacteria and fungus, can cause infections and in some cases severe loss of vision, a Georgia researcher reported Sunday.

"When one considers that millions of women are using eye cosmetics on a daily or occasional basis, the fact that a significant percentage of the makeup in use may be contaminated with micro-organisms, some capable of causing severe eye infections, then the problem seems of some importance," said Dr. Louis A. Wilson.

Wilson, an associate professor of opthalmology at the Medical College of Georgia in Augusta, Ga., addressed a science writers seminar sponsored by Research to Prevent Blindness Inc.

Wilson said that "to date 1,031 eye cosmetics — mascara, eye shadow, eye liner, etc. from 460 women have been evaluated for bacterial and fungal contamination.

Missile Boats

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Israel said Sunday it is building a fleet of high-speed missile boats named "Flash," a $10 million craft the builder calls the first of its kind and one of the world's most sophisticated types.

The announcement moves Israel a step nearer its declared goal of not relying on foreign countries for weapons.

Ever since France decided in 1967 to halt the flow of its equipment to the Middle East, the armed forces have striven to become self-sufficient. France was the leading supplier of planes and boats to Israel until then.

Rear Adm. Benjamin Telem, the navy commander, said Sunday that the boat will triple Israel's sea strike range to several thousand miles while increasing its waterborne firepower and accuracy.

Offer Rejected

VIENNA (UPI) — Western diplomats said today they rejected a Soviet offer to start the long-delayed talks on mutual East-West reductions in troops and arms in central Europe now despite lack of agreement on how to conduct them.

The Soviet Union suggested an "unstructured" meeting for today similar to one held last Wednesday that officially opened preliminary talks on Mutual and Balanced Force Reductions.

Diplomats said they did not think full-scale talks could start before Wednesday or Thursday at the earliest.

Among the problems are such questions as the seating of delegates and the chairmanship. But the diplomats said the most serious problem was the status of Romania and Bulgaria —two Warsaw Pact nations left out of planning for MBFR because they have no troops in central Europe.

Crucifixion

SANTO DOMINGO (UPI) — The 31-year-old wife of a self-styled French yogi was removed from a cross Sunday after a 52-hour ordeal she carried out as part of a "sacrifice for world peace."

Mrs. Patrick Tamao was treated in a hospital and released. Doctors said she was in good condition.

Earlier, her husband also underwent a self-ordered crucifixion for the same reason.

Doctors examined Mrs. Tamao immediately after she was removed from the cross and said her condition was good although she was pale and suffered a slight fever.

Patrolman Not Be Retried For Shooting

EUREKA (AP) — Former Highway Patrolman Robert Hahn will not be retried on manslaughter charges stemming from the fatal shooting of a logger, Humboldt County authorities say.

Hahn, whose first trial ended in a hung jury last December, was charged with involuntary manslaughter in the slaying of William Smith, 37, of Westhaven. He was dismissed from the patrol after failing to report the shooting.

After reviewing the evidence and interviewing jurors who split 10-2 for acquittal, Dist. Atty. William Ferroggiaro said Sunday he decided not to retry Hahn.

During the trial, Hahn, 43, claimed his gun discharged accidentally as he chased Smith, who had driven his motorcycle into a ditch alongside U.S. 101.

Hahn, now a trailer court operator, says he will ask to be reinstated as a patrolman.

Arson Suspect

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — Three victims of a weekend fire in a crowded cafeteria have identified Charles Cornell Reardon, 49, as the little man in a yellow suit who started a fire that injured 13 persons.

Police said yesterday three victims of the Concord cafeteria fire picked Reardon out of a lineup with five other men at police headquarters.

Reardon, a frequent customer of the cafeteria on Collins Avenue, was ordered held without bond for a mental competency hearing today before Ciruit Court Judge Gene Williams. City Court Judge Richard S. Hickey denied bail to Reardon and referred the case to circuit court, which must rule on mental competency.

Irish Violence

BELFAST (UPI) — Security chiefs said today the latest surge of violence in Northern Ireland has brought the province to the brink of civil war. Sources said officials were considering a curfew in Belfast to curb the bloodshed.

The possibility of a curfew and more British troops to enforce it arose today in the wake of weekend shooting sprees that left 10 men dead and at least 28 more wounded. It made it the bloodiest weekend in a year.

Skiers Killed

INNSBRUCK, Austria (UPI) — Avalanches in two Austrian winter resorts killed 11 persons yesterday, 10 of them members of a West German club trapped when snow crashed down on them. Two other persons were seriously injured.

The biggest avalanche was near the village of Gerlos where the "white death" buried 24 Bavarians on a weekend ski outing. Ten were killed.

The other avalanche occurred in the Tyrolian village of St. Anton, the scene of annual World Cup ski races. One West German skier died.

Body Sought

EAGLE GROVE, Iowa (UPI) — Authorities today renewed their search for the body of a woman still believed to be trapped in the ruins of two buildings that were leveled by a gas explosion.

Twelve bodies were recovered earlier from the tons of debris that was once the Chatterbox Cafe and Coast to Coast Store, but the body of Mrs. Lucille Anderson, 55, a cook at the cafe, was still missing. All the victims were killed by the force of the Friday night explosion.

Searchers poured through the rubble from daybreak to sunset Sunday in vain for Mrs. Anderson's body. A spokesman at the Eagle Grove Police Department said the search was to resume at dawn.

Over 30 Years Experience In Nutrition
HERE'S HEALTH!
by JUNE EMBURY

The recent National Health Federation convention in Los Angeles was a rewarding experience. Along with such great familiar lecturers as Adelle Davis, we heard new ones, such as the renowned Emanuel Cheraskin, who holds degrees in both medicine and dentistry! He's uncommonly open-minded in his efforts to learn and teach us how to meet an age-old challenge: living with the environment.
Professor Cheraskin investigates new approaches and old ones as they come to his attention, including some labelled "quackery" by orthodoxy. He urges us to make allowances as we adapt to the environment. For example, by taking supplements such as vitamins E and C and minerals. Incidentally, Dr. Cheraskin was keenly interested in our Birkenstock "happy feet" sandals because they're made to provide maximum freedom with flexible support.

Gourmet Wine And Glass Shop Due In Downtown San Rafael

A gourmet wine and glass shop will open in downtown San Rafael at 891 Fourth Street (corner of Lootens Place), where Gallenkamp Shoes was formerly located.

Owners of Gourmet Wine and Glass will be John J. Collins and his wife Adrienne of San Rafael.

"We're shooting for about a March opening," said Collins. "We plan to have 300 varieties of wines, mostly premium wines, both domestic and imported." Collins said he will have the largest display of cocktail and wine glasses in this area — about 2,000 different glasses.

The store will also carry a complete line of bar supplies and tools. Collins plans to use rough redwood, some tiffany lamps, and subdued lighting to create the wine cellar mood.

Collins has been an electrician in San Francisco for about 12 years and did considerable work at Ghirardelli Square. He was also bartender and liquor store employee for about four years. He and his family came to Novato in 1962 and have lived in San Rafael for the past five years.

Gallenkamp Shoes, which operated at the site until last month, closed its San Rafael outlet and consolidated operations with its Northgate Mall store.

RALPH C. LEWIS of Novato, vice president of North American Reinsurance Corp. in San Francisco, was elected president of the Insurance Company Managers Association of Northern California.

He succeeds Harold M. Steele, assistant vice president of Fireman's Fund American Insurance Companies.

Wilson

LARRY G. WILSON has been named assistant manager at Crocker Bank's Corte Madera office, replacing John F. Brown, who was appointed assistant manager at Crocker Bank's Kentfield branch.

A graduate of Tulane University in New Orleans, Wilson joined Crocker Bank last year. He lives in San Francisco.

REDHILL BARBER SHOP at Redhill Shopping Center in San Anselmo is under new ownership.

Leo J. Alexander, who formerly operated Hub City Barber Shop in downtown San Anselmo, and Frenchie Blankenship of Novato bought the Redhill Barber Shop from Joseph Hildreth and the estate of Lloyd Sanders. Sanders died in a motorcycle mishap in San Rafael last Sept. 8, and Hildreth has entered the trucking business.

Alexander operated the Hub City Barber Shop at 564 San Anselmo Avenue from 1966 until last month. The old barber shop is now a part of the expanded Miscellaneous gift shop.

MARC PHILLIP LEIBOVITZ, 25, of Mill Valley has joined the San Rafael law firm of Bagshaw, Martinelli, Gorrigan & Jordan as an associate and full-time attorney. He was former law clerk for the firm, located in the Albert Building at 1010 B Street.

Leibovitz graduated from University of Clifornia at Berkeley in 1969, won his law degree from Hastings College of Law in June of 1972, and passed the July California bar examination.

Leibovitz

Raube

JEROME H. RAUBE of San Rafael has been named assistant vice president and manager of the real estate department of the Bank of California's main office in San Francisco.

Raube joined the Bank in 1963, transferred in 1966 to the Portland office, and left the bank in 1968 to join a small business. He returned to the bank's San Francisco main office in 1971 as real estate loan officer.

JIM'S SPORT SHOP at 703 Grant Avenue in Novato is conducting a final sale before calling it quits after 22 years in business.

Arthur L. Gee of Novato, one of the partners, said he is closing because of illness. His partner is Harold Greenwald, also of Novato.

They said the exact date of closing will depend on how soon the entire inventory and fixtures are sold out.

Jim's Sports Shop was established in 1951. Greenwald took over in 1964 and Gee joined him in 1966.

REALTORS BREAKFAST — A savings and loan official will discuss "Money Prognostication — 1973" at tomorrow's breakfast meeting of the Marin County Board of Realtors. The meeting is set for 8 a.m. at the Corte Madera Lions Club. Speaker is Mrs. Pat Mikel Mello, vice president and chief loan officer of Homestead Savings and Loan Association office in San Francisco.

AMERICAN FOREST Products Corp. in San Francisco announced the appointment of George J. Ehlers of Fairfax as senior industrial engineer in the applied technology department. Formerly with Fibreboard Corporation, Ehlers joined American Forest Products last Nov. 9.

THE CHAIR PLACE, which opened last year in San Rafael at the corner of Fourth Street and Tamalpais Avenue, is expanding into adjoining space at 939 Tamalpais Avenue. The dividing wall was removed to provide space for a wider selection of chairs.

"We have a greater variety of bar stools and counter stools, with different styles and price ranges," said owner Karel Langer.

The space at 939 Tamalpais was occupied last year by Carnaby's gift shop, followed briefly this year by Thomas C. Ryan of Marin Restaurant Associates selling Diner's Out tickets.

MILDRED HOWIE of Corte Madera, who operates Mildred Howie Public Relations, has been named one of the judges for the San Francisco Advertising Club's 22nd annual Point-of-Purchase advertising exhibition.

Winning entries will be on display at the Sheraton Palace Hotel for the Point-fof-Purchase Day luncheon meeting on Feb. 14.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Explanation Given Of 'Floating Supply'

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. There appears to be a need for an explanation of how "floating supply" of a stock is determined. — R.C.

A. Shares held by company officials, by members of their families or indirectly through trust accounts are considered "closely held." In other words, these are not usually available for trading, but are held as long-term investments. Changes in such stockholdings are reported weekly in the Wall Street Journal under the heading "Insider Transaction."

In addition, one company may hold shares of another firm as an investment. These shares under most conditions would be excluded when determining floating supply. Institutionally held shares are also thought of as closely held, although these are frequently unloaded on the market creating sharp price fluctuations. After deducting any of the above holdings from the outstanding common, the resulting number would be the "floating supply."

Q. Why does Florida Steel (NYSE) have the lowest price/earnings ratio in the steel industry when it earns more than any of the other companies? I own 100 shares bought at $26. — J.M.

Florida Steel produces steel reinforcing bars used in concrete construction. Since more than 70 per cent of sales emanate from the construction industry, the company is generally classified with this group rather than with the steel producers. However, among the five firms fabricating similar products, Florida commands the lowest multiple.

Because all company mills are operating now at close to full capacity, only modest increases in output will be possible with present facilities. However, a 75 per cent larger furnace is scheduled to be in operation at the Tampa mill by April. The prospects for higher product prices are dim, despite the relaxed Phase II rules, since Florida's profit margin is now higher than in any of the base years. An upgrading in product mix to the higher profit lines would generate some earnings gains. Shares no trading at only 6.5 times estimated 1973 earnings are undervalued andshould be held in conservative accounts.

Claim Rate Is Boosted For Airline

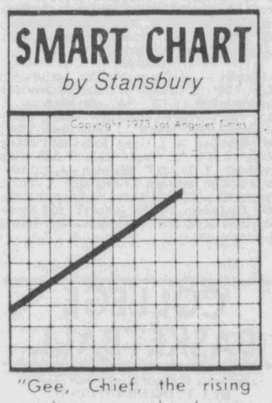
LOS ANGELES (BW) — The Civil Aeronautics Board has granted authority to the Flying Tiger Line to increase the minimum amount a shipper may claim for goods lost or damaged in most domestic air shipments from 50 cents a pound, or $50 (whichever is higher), to $8.16 a pound, or $50.

In granting the increase, effective immediately, the board said it would study the results and compare them with the existing lower liability conditions which remain in effect for other airlines.

The all-cargo carrier said this is the first time an airline has been granted the authority to increase the amount payable on shipper claims.

Flying Tiger retained the 10-cent excess value charge per $100 of excess declared value. The international shipment charge will remain at 40 cents per $100 of total declared value.

Under Flying Tiger's new rules, shippers may declare excess valuation on a whole shipment or a portion of a shipment.



"Gee, Chief, the rising market sure makes heroes out of all us incompetent managers."

Prices Dip Narrowly On Market

Declines led advances by about a 7-to-6 margin among he more than 1,780 issues on the tape.

Phase III and a weakening dollar still troubled investors. Also, increases in interest rates have led many to fear the Federal Reserve System is clamping down on credit. While this can help inflation, it has a bearish market impact inasmuch as it could slow expansion in the latter half of 1973, analysts said.

American Stock Exchange prices moved lower in slow trading.

INCOME TAX FACTS

By PETER J. WIKEL, C.P.A.

Political Contributions May Be Deducted If Form 4908 Filed

Political contributions are deductible if the candidate or the campaign committee qualified by filing Form 4908 in the case of a candidate, or Form 4909 in the case of a campaign committee directly with the Internal Revenue Service and fully complying with all of the rules.

The political candidate or campaign committee can secure a copy of Technical Information Release No. 1145 dated Feb. 23, 1972, from the Internal Revenue Service which gives details for qualifying.

If the candidate or the campaign committee has qualified, then contributions to them are deductible, but you will need a receipt on the form prescribed by the Internal Revenue Service for each contribution, or you will need a cancelled check showing the payment and what it was for and you may be called upon for further verificaiton if all you have is your cancelled check.

A contribution to a national, state or local committee of a national political party is eligible for credit or deduction without the national, state or local committee filing these Forms 4908 and 4909, since this has been taken care of on a national level.

The amount of the credit which you can deduct on your income tax return is not more than one-half of the total contribution that you made and in no event more than $12.50 on a single or separate return, or more than $25 on a joint return.

As an alternate to a direct deduction of a credit against taxes, you can deduct the total amount of your gift, but not in excess of $50 on a single return or separate return, or more than $100 on a joint return as an itemized deduction under miscellaneous deductions on Schedule A of your tax return if you itemize your deductions.

If you are paying taxes on your top dollar at a rate in excess of 50 per cent and you itemize your deductions, then obviously it would be to your benefit to claim the itemized deduction for the contribution rather than the credit since the credit only permits a 50 percent deduction from taxes whereas a deduction from income with a tax rate in excess of 50 per cent will give you a greater deduction.

Antihijacking Measures Are Started In Oakland

OAKLAND (BW) — New antihijacking procedures were to go into effect at noon today — one day early — at Oakland International Airport using the so-called "sterile concourse."

The Federal Aviation Administration has ordered local agencies to provide police and a search of all hand-carried luggage for every flight effective Feb. 6.

With the "sterile concourse" plan all passengers will be screened at a common point, rather than at individual airline gates as in the past. At Oakland International this point will be at the entrance to the concourse, just off the main lobby.

Carry-on items of passengers will be searched and the passengers themselves screened with magnetometers, which are metal-detecting devices. Police surveillance will be provided by the Oakland Police Department.

The sterile concourse, with all passengers for all airlines passing through a single check point permits the most economical methods since a minimum of personnel can be used.

To avoid flight delays airlines are urging passengers to check in earlier for their flights. Allowing 45 minutes instead of the usual 15 to 30. This will be especially important at peak morning, mid-day and evening hours.

Passengers also are urged to check as much of their luggage as possible so that as little search as possible will be necessary.

Passenger screening at airline gates has been compulsory since the beginning of the year.

Convict Wants The Public To See 'Inside' San Quentin

Model Prisoner Cites Harmful Atmosphere

By PAT ANGLE

A "model prisoner" at San Quentin who has spent nearly a third of his life behind bars believes the people of California must demand the right to visit the prison, talk with the inmates and see for themselves what is happening in the world beyond its walls.

"This prison doesn't rehabilitate men; it turns them into animals, then lets them loose on society," said 32-year-old Robert Lokey. "It harms those outside as much as those within and the forces operating San Quentin have no right to keep the people from learning just what they have bought with their tax dollars."

The boyish-looking convict, interviewed after he asked the Independent-Journal for a chance to tell the public about conditions at the institution, charged that San Quentin inmates are treated worse than those in other prisons.

He also contended that the prison administration encourages inmate disturbances for economic reasons and said that many men who have managed to rehabilitate themselves despite the system are being imprisoned long after they are capable of returning to the community.

Lokey, who is serving a life sentence without possibility of parole, has been at San Quentin since 1962. He was convicted of fatally shooting a man during the kidnaping and robbery of a young San Diego couple.

He is not one of the prison's troublemakers or militants, according to prison officials, but rather recognized as a man "who has made a very constructive adjustment and considerable personal advancement" while serving time.

During his confinement, Lokey has completed his high school education, a course in office machine technology and obtained an associate of arts degree, graduating with honors from the College of Marin prison program. In addition, he has invented an electric saw which shuts off automatically when a hand (or any part of the body) comes near it, and a portable braille writing machine.

Yet, despite his many achievements and "good adjustment" while at San Quentin, the inmate sees the prison as "a terrible sore, a cancer" where convicts receive treatment inferior to those in other institutions.

"Why are some men here allowed only one change of clothing a week to work and live in until they stink to high heaven, when in other places, they get two or more?" he asked.

Lokey also said that convicted felons in other institutions are all permitted radios in their cells, "but only the privileged few get them here.

"Why are we confined in tiny, four-foot wide cells, while those elsewhere are twice as large? We have no hot water in our cells as other convicts do. There is no diet food prepared here for people with stomach disorders, while there are diet lines at other places."

In addition, Lokey charged that other prisoners around the state have it better because they can purchase television sets for their cells, wear their hair the way they want to and wear civilian clothes.

"I'm not advocating the prisoners be coddled, although many people will probably think so," he said. "But it's important that the people of this state realize that being confined for years in little concrete blocks is punishment enough for a man. It's not necessary to harass him, feed him garbage and take away everything that makes life bearable, like clean clothes."

Lokey accused prison personnel and administrators of abetting and encouraging disturbances and strikes among the inmate population.

"A black convict stabs a white inmate and over the prison's intercom system, an official says: 'All right, we know you're having a race riot in there; you'd better cut it out or we'll come in with guns.'"

Likewise, he said, it is often the guards who spread rumors of a strike, leaving the inmates "in fear, worrying, wondering what to do. If they strike, they will be punished; if they don't, they could be killed for failing to go along with their brothers."

Lokey said he believes that the strikes and disturbances are designed and planned by officialdom — with a purpose. "Afterwards, the convicts are at each others throats. . .another San Quentin yearly budget has been justified, more pay for guards, more operating money. . ."

Although San Quentin is scheduled to cease operation as a maximum security institution next year, the inmate thinks it will remain in its present capacity for some time, "even though it should have been closed during the last century.

"There are forces in this state that want to keep this prison open at all costs, people like legislators and others who don't care what kind of treatment is given to 'those criminals,'" he said. "They are the ones who think the worse the treatment is, the better."

He described as another needless cruelty the failure of many to obtain paroles even though they have rehabilitated themselves. He cites his own case as an example.

"I'm the epitome of the rehabilitated man. I was born in here, because I wasn't anything when I came in. Nobody around here can say I've caused any trouble."

To be freed, Lokey's no-parole sentence must be commuted by the governor. His case has been before the Adult Authority — which makes recommendations on commutations — three times. Each time the authority has refused to recommend that he be given his freedom.

Although a two-man committee from the Authority suggested after interviewing him in November of 1971 that his sentence be commuted, the recommendation was turned down by the full board two months later.

"They've told me I'm doing beautifully, that I had a good possibility of freedom, but nothing has happened. Why won't they give me a chance?" Lokey asked.

Lokey's brother, Galen, now on parole after serving nine years in prison for his part in the kidnaping-murder, also said he believes his brother has changed drastically — for the better — while in prison.

"When this happened, Bob was just a motorcycle bum, irresponsible, unreliable, with no goals, just living from day to day," the younger Lokey said. "Now he's completely different; he has definite goals. He wants to help other people, that's why he invented the braille-writer for blind people."

"Hell, yes, the guy should have his chance," said one prison official who refused to be quoted in the matter.

One person who is convinced that Lokey should spend the rest of his life in prison is Sen. H. L. Richardson, R-Arcadia, a member of the state's Select Committee on Penal Institutions. Richardson says he makes it a practice to review all commutation requests "because I'm interested."

"If Lokey were freed, after serving only 10 years, we would be destroying any kind of deterrent effect of the law," Richardson said. "Does a man have a right to viciously assault a woman, murder her husband and be back out on the street in such a short time?"

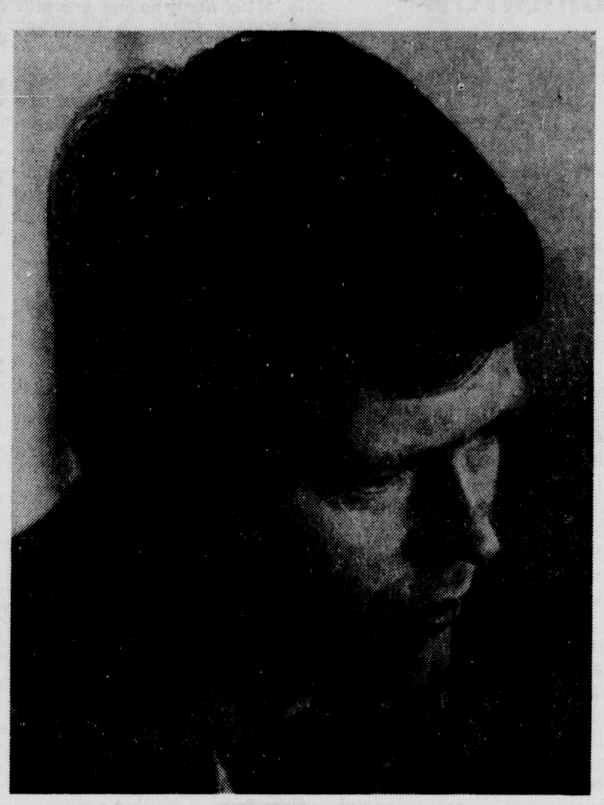
Richardson, who acknowledges lobbying state penal officials against the inmate's release, said he will continue to fight to keep Lokey in prison, adding he is not concerned about whether or not he seems to be rehabilitated.

"His crime was a heinous one, coldly premeditated and I don't believe people who plan and carry out acts like that should ever be freed," the senator said. "Besides, Lokey has an extensive prior record of arrests for burglary and assault in several states; he wasn't a juvenile without prior run-ins with the law when he committed the crime he is now imprisoned for."

He added: "So I decide to work to free Lokey and he kills someone again. What do I say to the person's family. . .'Gee, I made a mistake' or 'I'm sorry.'"

The plight of the prisoner and its adverse effect on society as a whole will continue, according to Lokey, "until the people of the state arouse themselves to begin to question these conditions in their prisons and look into them.

"I'd like to come to my cellblock (where minimum security prisoners live) and talk to people and see what it's like in here," he said. "I can promise they'll be in no more danger than walking out on the street."



ROBERT LOKEY

"The forces operating San Quentin have no right to keep the people from learning just what they have bought with their tax dollars."

Warden Says Inmate Has Personal Burden

"Bob Lokey has suffered a very great personal disappointment (in not being paroled) and that's why he's saying these things," Associate Warden James W. L. Park said in reply to Lokey's charges about conditions at San Quentin.

Although Park declined to say whether he thought the convicted murderer should have his freedom, he did have good words about the man's prison record.

"He's made some very positive accomplishments here. He's made a constructive adjustment and considerable personal advancement."

"But the intention of the Legislature that passes that law was that the guy was going to spend the rest of his life in prison," the associate warden said. "It's up to the man himself to convince the governor's office that he poses no further threat to the community, that he has made a change substantial enough to override the will of the people."

Park also concurred in Lokey's contention that there are forces in the state that want to keep the antiquated prison open. "That's true," he admitted.

"The only way to close San Quentin is to build new prisons and there are many people on all sides of the political spectrum, who object to that.

"The conservatives don't want to spend the money.

"The radicals don't want any prisons at all.

"And the liberals are afraid we will build another bastille, which is the way they see San Quentin."

Park and Lee E. DeBord, prison information officer, also had replies for many of Lokey's other allegations:

DISTURBANCES — "Our people create about 10 per cent of the problems through ineptitude and not for any sinister reasons. Ninety per cent of our problems come to us in the men who are sent here, often failures who couldn't make it in other institutions." — Park.

INFERIOR TREATMENT — "The grass is always greener somewhere else. When I was at Soledad, I heard that everything worked great at San Quentin and terrible at Soledad. When I got here, I heard just the opposite" — DeBord.

CLOTHING — "Many of our men get two changes of blues (exterior clothing) twice a week, but some don't. Because of our large population, the laundry was not set up in a way to provide two changes for all. But we're looking at the situation now to see if we can change it." — DeBord.

HOT WATER — "When San Quentin was built, ordinary folk on the outside didn't have hot water in their homes. Now it would cost millions of dollars to install hot water throughout the prison. The Adjustment Center (a maximum security facility for problem prisoners) has hot water in cells because it was built in 1959." — Park

CELL SIZE — "Basically, our cells are the same size as most cells in other prisons. Many men don't spend more than seven hours a day in their cells." — Park.

TELEVISION — "We can't have individual televisions in the cells because our antique electrical system can't take the strain. We're trying to do something about this now" — Park.

DIET FOOD — "If a man needs a special diet, our medical staff wants him hospitalized so they can control it. Our doctors feel most people with stomach problems can select an adequate diet from the regular menu." — Park.

MARQUISAT

BEAUJOLAIS PRIMEUR

Because this UNIQUE wine didn't get into our stores until January 15th, we decided to extend it through February as wine of the month.

Every Winter there is great anticipation in the cafes of Paris—anticipation of the arrival of this "new" wine of Beaujolais. In December and January all the cafes along the Champs Elysees sport sidewalk posters announcing the arrival of the Beaujolais Primeur. Now for the first time in the United States, a Beaujolais Primeur is available from one of the oldest and most reputable firms in France, Pasquier-Desvignes in St. Lager.

Beaujolais is perhaps the classic red wine which should be drunk and enjoyed while still young. The "BEAUJOLAIS PRIMEUR" ("New Beaujolais") is perhaps the classic example — bottled almost immediately after the vintage, it is full of life and the fruit of the grape, capturing all of the delightful qualities of Beaujolais.

By French law, Beaujolais Primeur cannot be bottled before November 15th, and within days afterward shipments are on their way all over France and now to America. This delicious young wine is ready for immediate consumption and by Spring it should all be drunk and enjoyed. The wine can be served with any foods with which one would drink a light red wine.

Exclusively offered at $3.49 the fifth $37.69 the case

Please hurry as we were able to purchase only 50 cases of this delightful wine.

SHAGGY DOG STOPPED TRAFFIC

This grey shaggy dog somehow made its way to the center divider on Highway 101 just north of the pedestrian overpass in San Rafael. California Highway patrolmen stopped traffic on Puerto Suello Hill about 8:30 a.m. after receiving many calls about 7 a.m. When the traffic stopped, the dog took off, running north, and was caught by Patrolman Harold A. Drady (left) who turned the dog over to Humane Deputy Roy Griggs (center) while Patrolman Richard J. Fenske looked on. The dog apparently was unhurt and was just frightened, patrolmen reported.

Arrests, Convictions Of Drunk Drivers Up

is presumed to be "under the influence of intoxicating liquor" and guilty of drunken driving.

Someone's size and weight influence the effects of one drink, but five drinks in an hour will push almost anyone over the limit, according to Raymond David, an alcohol analyst working in Marin's drug analysis laboratory. A glass of wine or beer has about the same effect as a shot glass of distilled liquor, he said.

For the mathematically inclined, he provided a formula: multiply the number of drinks equivalent to one ounce of 100 proof liquor by .025, then subtract .020 for each hour of drinking to determine the blood alcohol level in the system.

The formula adds up to bad news for revelers who try to sneak by. Liquored drivers are sitting ducks for highway patrolmen, who are trained to recognize their zany meanderings, but there is some safety in numbers. "There are a lot of them out there all the time," Chapman said.

He said drivers with blood alcohol levels between .13 and .25 have a "goofy, lightheaded numbing sensation" that causes all sorts of erratic driving. Officers look for cars going too slow or too fast, changing speeds rapidly, weaving across lane lines or having trouble in corners — almost anything that singles them out from normal traffic, Chapman said.

Some go 100 miles an hour and think they are going 35; others realize they are drunk and go very slowly. Chapman said he once stopped a drunken driver traveling four miles an hour on a freeway, but he added the very drunk, very bizarre motorist isn't the most serious threat.

"The guy that has a couple of belts after work is more dangerous than the guy that can't pronounce his name," Chapman said. "He is the guy you always hear saying, 'Yeah, I'm okay to drive.' "

That type is much more dangerous because he is so much more prevalent, Chapman said, but it takes practice to spot the slight driving imperfections that give away his condition.

Anyone with five or more drinks in his system loses depth perception, reaction time and his sense of speed, Chapman said. Those impairments mean when "you get an intoxicated driver in a lot of traffic, he is going to have an accident," he said.

When a officer stops a suspected drunken driver, he checks for the odor of distilled spirits, slurred speech and glassy eyes. If any symptoms are present, the driver is asked to perform balance tests. Such as walking heel to toe, leaning back with the eyes closed, and placing finger to nose.

Should the driver refuse or become belligerent, "he is going to get booked," Chapman said.

Every driver arrested also is required to submit to either a urine, breath or blood sample for analysis of alcohol in his system. If he refuses, it means automatic loss of license for six months.

At the Marin County Jail, each driver arrested is searched, fingerprinted, photographed, booked and placed in the drunk tank for at least four hours to sober up with all the other drunks.

Why do drivers risk arrest?

Chapman placed part of the blame on egos, which won't let drivers admit they have had too much to drink and on the lack of public transportation late at night.

But despite the patrol's emphasis on catching drunken drivers, Chapman said the real solution is to reach them before they get on the road and have a chance to injure or kill someone, including themselves.

Fund Drive Kicked Off At School

William R. Kimball Jr., a member of the board of trustees, has been named chairman for the drive, Future Imperative. Katharine F. Branson, first headmaster of the school, was honored at the party.

The main thrust of the drive will be to increase the school's endowment from the present $100,000 to $500,000 to ensure its future.

The drive will also seek $300,000 for a fine arts center and library building to be built on three levels at the site of the present faculty parking lot.

Another $220,000 will be sought to reduce outstanding debts of $650,000 and another $40,000 of the drive will be set aside for site development and renovation of older buildings. Plans call for centralizing all parking behind the dining hall and adding a visitors parking lot near the gymnasium.

Advanced contributions have totaled $340,000 and the goal is expected to be reached by December of 1974.

Bill Seeks Return Of Windfall

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Assemblyman William T. Bagley today introduced legislation requiring that nearly $10 million in interest profits go to property taxpayers instead of mortgage lenders.

The measures was prompted by a disclosure from mortgage lenders that their computers aren't programmed to identify the owner-occupied, singlefamily homes eligible for tax reductions in November.

Because of the computer snafus, the lending institutions will collect more money than necessary this year from about 3.6 million homeowners who allow their mortgage holders to pay their property taxes for them.

Bagley noted the lenders have said they won't be able to calculate the exact tax reduction attributable to each taxpayer until 1974.

Without his bill, Bagley said Sunday, the extra payments already programmed would mean "a windfall of close to $10 million" in interest profits for mortgage lenders from the impound accounts this year.

"To give anyone other than the taxpayer the interest-free use of the millions of dollars involved would subvert the intent of those of us who have sought property tax relief for so long," Bagley said.

The property tax relief was approved by the 1972 legislature in a $1.1 billion measure increasing the homeowner's property tax exemption from $750 to $1,750 this year.

Drug Case To Superior Court

A 25-year-old San Francisco man has been bound over to Marin Superior Court on four counts of possessing illegal drugs in Sausalito two years ago.

Ordered to appear Wednesday was Dana William Hope. Municipal Court Judge David R. Baty set the appearance after ruling there is enough evidence to try Hope.

Hope was charged with having heroin, cocaine, LSD and marijuana after Sausalito police raided a residence in 1971.

A warrant was issued July 8, 1971, when he missed a court date, but he was not found until Dec. 30.

Identical charges against 22-year-old Connie Lucille Fitzpatrick of Sausalito were dismissed last year by Baty. He ruled she had been denied a speedy trial.

Republicans Led By Luce, Haerle

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Two close political allies and former aides of Gov. Ronald Reagan have been elected to head the California Republican party.

Gordon C. Luce, 47, president of San Diego Federal Savings and Loan Association and former secretary of the state Business and Transportation Agency, was chosen by the Republican State Central Committee Saturday as its new chairman.

Luce, the former vice chairman, was unopposed. He will serve two years, spanning the 1974 gubernatorial and Senate elections.

Paul R. Haerle, 41, a San Francisco attorney and former Reagan appointments (patronage) secretary, was elected vice chairman. He will have the inside track to succeed Luce and become chairman during the 1976 presidential election.

Luce and Haerle both were endorsed by Reagan.

Although they lean toward the party's conservative side, the two are regarded as good political tacticians who are more pragmatic than philosophical.

In an indirect slap at the Democrats' new state chairman, liberal Assemblyman John L. Burton of San Francisco, Luce told the GOP convention:

"The Democrats again in California have set their course for the radical left, judging from the party elections last weekend. For the second straight year, the Democrats will be controlled by the McGovern side of the party.

The convention provided a pre-primary arena for four gubernatorial contenders — Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke, former Lt. Gov. Robert H. Finch, Attorney General Evelle J. Younger and Controller Houston I. Flournoy. Reinecke got by far the warmest reception.

Gov. Ronald Reagan, who will not run for a third term, told delegates Republicans must sell their story to Democrats and independents so "they send men and women who share our dreams to the legislature, to the halls of Congress and — yes — to the courthouse and to city hall."

Reagan's press secretary, Edwin Gray, later said the governor did not intend to imply he favors politicizing local government through partisan elections and was referring to "philosophy not politics."

Delegates adopted a resolution urging the legislature to change the law so the party's national committeemen and women can be selected by the state central committee. Now they are chosen every four years by the state's delegation to the national convention.

The convention also adopted a resolution urging Reagan to veto any reapportionment bills which do not give the GOP a "fair and proper share" of legislative seats. Republican lawmakers are attempting to negotiate a redistricting compromise with Democrats and support it by overriding a Reagan veto if necessary.

Other officers elected were women's vice chairmen Laura Edwards, Lafayette, Elsie Buchneau, Madera, and Margaret Scott, Santa Monica; secretary Tirso Del Junco, Pasadena; assistant secretaries Bruce Hasenkamp, Menlo Park, and Cathy Swajian, Indio; treasurer Russell Collier, Menlo Park: assistant treasurer Verna Mattox, Torrance.

Members Vote To Continue Church Policy

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI) — Members of Jackson's First Baptist Church, the largest in the state, voted overwhelmingly Sunday "to contiue its policy of admitting to its services all who come to worship, but to deny admittance to demonstrators and publicity-seekers."

"This action was taken to clear up misunderstandings about church policy which have been in evidence recently," a church spokesman said.

Two groups, including blacks, said they were "physically blocked" from entering the church in downtown Jackson a week earlier by a church "greeting committee."

New Death Penalty Move Eyed

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Gov. Ronald Reagan may sponsor another ballot initiative to restore capital punishment if the legislature refuses to implement a measure approved last November by voters.

He disclosed this Saturday in an address to the Republican state convention.

Californians overwhelmingly endorsed a ballot measure in November to reopen the gas chamber, but left it up to the legislature to decide which crimes would be punishable by death.

The legislature is dominated by Democrats, and their leaders — including Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti—have predicted no implementing bills will be passed at the 1973-74 session.

"They said it is their duty when the people have made a mistake to make their own decisions for the people," Reagan told convention delegates. "We Republicans believe the people made a decision to put capital punishment back on the books and we are going to do our best to see it is done."

Then Reagan departed from his prepared text to add: "If not at the legislative level, we might as well let the people make another 'mistake.'"

Delegates loudly applauded.

Reagan's press secretary, Edwin Gray, elaborated later that the governor has been discussing with close aides the idea of sponsoring an initiative drive to place a measure on the 1974 ballot specifying the death penalty crimes.

Reagan Approves $1.8 Million Rural Legal Assistance Grant

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Gov. Ronald Reagan, once highly critical of the California Rural Legal Assistance program, quietly has approved a new $1.8 million federal grant to keep CRLA alive for another year.

His decision was conveyed to the federal government in a Nov. 28, 1972, letter written by Edwin Meese III, the governor's executive secretary. The letter was not released to the public.

The Reagan administration two years ago accused CRLA of inciting campus unrest, fomenting prison violence and failing to serve the legal needs of the poor.

Asked why Reagan changed his attitude toward the legal services organization, Meese told a San Francisco Examiner reporter: "Because our evaluation has shown they had complied with the conditions sufficiently for refunding.

"There has been an improvement in their performance and complaints have fallen off to near zero. I think they understood we meant business when we said begin acting like a professional legal organization or get out of business."

However, another administration official said the CRLA is doing nearly the same work it always has, but the organization has simply "changed style," indicating it is less flamboyant.

The governor once vetoed a CRLA grant and ordered a study of the organization. Federal antipoverty officials subsequently overrode his veto and a blue-ribbon panel of jurists investigating the feud chided Reagan for "unfairly and irresponsibly" attacking CRLA.

While the CRLA has received another year's funding, the Reagan administration reportedly has been drafting its own new proposals for providing legal assistance to the poor, mostly in urban areas.

Still Explosion Kills Operator

SPRINGFIELD, Tenn. (UPI) — convicted moonshiner Charles McGarnett, due to begin a one year prison term today, died Sunday when an illegal still exploded.

"He died making moonshine," said Robertson County sheriff's deputy Joe Robertson.

The 37-year-old Middle Tennessee resident was killed when a butane gas tank used to operate a "pretty big" still exploded, the deputy said, destroying the barn in which the still was housed.

McGarnett was to begin a prison sentence for making untaxed whisky, Robertson said.

SOME CAR BUYERS refuse to be carried away by flamboyant styling. Fine machinery and functional efficiency rank first in their demands.

These buyers will find a perfect match in the new Mercedes-Benz 280C Coupe. Here is a pillarless five-seater that makes its case on engineering depth instead of surface glitter.

The 280C weighs one and a half tons, carries five adults and costs $9,614.* Its first impression is one of understated elegance; but only as your experience deepens over the miles and the months will its mechanical virtues unfold.

A painless model change

Technically speaking, the 280C is a new model for 1973. Engineering changes from the preceding 250C include a new double-overhead-cam 2.8-litre engine, wider wheel rims, and radial ply tires.

But aside from a nameplate that now reads 280C instead of 250C, exterior changes were shunned. A handsome car remains a handsome car. Current Mercedes-Benz Coupe owners do not feel suddenly betrayed.

The painless model change. Some day it may be universal.

The engineers prevail—again

You can detect the fine hand of engineering logic even in the 280C's graceful roof line.

This hardtop roof is so carefully shaped that it neither cramps rear-seat headroom nor blocks the driver's rearward vision.

That roof is fused to a body built to rival Mercedes-Benz sedans for structural strength. Body panels are welded to a platform chassis rather than bolted to a frame. If you caught a raw Coupe body before painting began, you would count more than 6,000 individual welding points.

Separate subframes carry the engine and suspension. Rubber "biscuits" are strategically placed to help cushion the chassis against flexing motions of the engine and drive train.

Startling measurements

The 280C is lighter by more than 1000 lbs., shorter by as much as 3 feet than its major domestic coupe rivals. Yet observe that the 280C's 19.8 cubic feet of trunk space exceed them all, that important interior dimensions virtually match them all.

Note too that the 280C turns in a circle of only 36.4 feet, slightly tighter than a VW 1200 "Beetle." Those larger cars do not.

A trimmer car can use a trimmer engine size; the engineers capitalized on the 280's lighter weight by fitting it with a beautifully smooth new double-overhead-camshaft engine—an engine that revs up to 6500 rpm, feels unstrained at 80 mph, but displaces only 2.8 litres in cylinder capacity. Size of engines used by the 280's major price competitors: 7 litres and over.

Here is another technical fact to ponder. None of the 280C's heavyweight competitors, 7-litre engines and all, sees fit to offer—even as an extra-cost option—what this Coupe provides as standard equipment: four-wheel, caliper-type disc brakes.

280C roof line stresses function, not fashion

Power-assisted steering comes as standard too. It is remarkable for the precise steering feel it transmits; manual effort is reduced but sensitivity is not sacrificed. This is one power steering system designed to keep you in touch with the road.

That padded lever on the console is the shifter for a 4-speed automatic transmission, also standard. If you prefer shifting for yourself you can snap through the gears manually.

Fully independent suspension

If riding smoothness and softness were the only goals, Mercedes-Benz engineers would have likely given the 280C the same kind of suspension as its domestic "luxury" rivals: independent at front, solid one-piece axle at the rear.

But adroit handling was also the goal—and stability on rough roads.

So the engineers suspended each of the 280C's four wheels on its own separate axle: fully independent suspension, in simple terms. The same suspension principle used on 200-mph racing cars.

You won't feel the benefits of independent suspension in the showroom. But try a winding, potholed road.

Understated comfort

You ride in seats padded not only with foam rubber but also natural fibers, laid over a network of hand-tied coil springs.

The steering-wheel hub, doors, armrests, even the ashtrays in the rear are padded. Precise fitting of windows and doors is intended to help minimize those shrieks and whistles of the wind at highway speeds.

Seal the windows closed and flick on the built-in air conditioner: you will feel sealed off from the turmoil of the outside world as your 280C sweeps along.

Step outside and check some of the 280C's thoughtfully practical details. Those wraparound chrome bumpers are protected by thick wraparound rubber bumpers. A rubber-lined rail runs along the body sides. The chrome roof strips are more than ornaments: the engineers put them there as ski-rack anchors.

280C Coupes now available

The first new 280C Coupes have now landed in America. Contact your authorized Mercedes-Benz dealer to see and test drive this different kind of coupe. In its understatement lies one of the shrewdest automobile investments you may ever make.

Interest Lacking In School Election

San Rafael is assured a lively election campaign for city council, with interest added by a string of seven charter amendments which will be on the ballot. Where the council candidates stand on some of these will help define campaign issues.

However, the election of two members of the board of education appears to be almost forgotten

AT THIS WRITING, five candidates have announced and/or filed for the two city council openings: incumbent Lawrence Mulryan, Carl J. Brown, Richard C. Fox, Jack G. Nixon, and Thomas R. O'Toole. But only a single candidate has filed for board of education: incumbent Paul K. McMullen, now serving by appointment to fill out the term of Paul L. Jones, who moved out of Marin.

Besides McMullen's term, that of Lawrence I. Kramer Jr., senior member of the board of education, is expiring. Kramer wants to terminate his long service on the San Rafael board and, prior to that, on the Dixie School District board. He has said he will not seek another term. However, if no one else appears interested, it is possible he might change his mind.

FILING DEADLINE for city election candidates is Thursday. Those considering running for the San Rafael Board of Education should not confuse this with other school board elections in Marin, for which filing continues until Feb. 16. The San Rafael board is elected under city charter provisions, being a part of the city government.

Two — possibly three — persons besides McMullen are reported considering the board of education race. We would hope there would be at least four candidates for the two vacancies to give voters adequate choice.

Lack of interest in the board of education election is a little hard to understand in light of widespread discussion of the public school system and often-heard complaints about some of the directions taken by our city schools.

It is also a little surprising that there seems no rush for representation from the Terra Linda area, recently annexed to the city and already part of the high school district before that. Although our illogical school districting puts these people in the Dixie Elementary School District, they are eligible for the city board of education and have a direct interest because it controls Terra Linda High School. Purely on the basis of geographical representation, we would expect some candidates from that area, which has been represented by Kramer.

BOARD OF EDUCATION service is a thankless job; and it is a hard, time-consuming job if done as it should be. It pays nothing — not even the $100 a month which city councilmen collect. But there is no more important job in local government.

The quality of schools is, in the long run, determined by the quality of members on their governing boards. We need the best to run the schools in San Rafael.

We hope the filing deadline on Thursday will not find a no-contest situation for these very important positions.

Raccoons' Many Voices

Those who are only mildly acquainted with Marin's raccoons probably don't realize how many different sounds they make. They hiss like a cat, growl like a dog, whine like a puppy, scream like a wildcat, emit a long tremulo like a screech owl, as well as making an assortment of raccoon noises.

That's no menagerie in our yard. It's just a couple of raccoons.

WHICH END IS HORSE?

Bridge District Giving Sausalito The Brush-Off

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

Sausalito and the Golden Gate Bridge District have contrary versions of which end is the cart and which the horse when they dicker about a ferry terminal.

The city insists that a detailed environmental impact study be made before it decides what to do about the district's long-stalled plan for a permanent downtown terminal. The district insists that the city council agree to the terminal before the study is made.

It has been almost three months since the city spelled out the 11 conditions (politely called "discussion points") it wanted met before acting on the district's plan. Although the district claimed then that the issue had to be settled immediately so construction plans could proceed by December, the district never has had a public discussion of the city's conditions.

THE DISTRICT'S first response did not come until Jan. 23. It came from board president Stephan C. Leonoudakis, who must have guessed what position the board wanted to take on the city's conditions.

His letter ignored 10 of the points, instead calling upon the council for "an expression of your general concurrence in the relocation of the Sausalito Yacht Club and ferry Berkeley, as well as the general location of the improved ferry terminal at the site indicated on the (district's) master plan.

"Upon receiving this concurrence," he concluded, "we will then be in a position to proceed to the next stage of the planning process."

He graciously was silent on the new law the district slipped through the Legislature empowering it to ignore the city and simply go ahead and put the terminal wherever it wants. From the city's view, this would be the result if it gave in before the study was even made.

The city council will tackle the letter when it meets at 8 p.m. tomorrow in City Hall.

The spiciest item this month was that state prison authorities "have proposed the use of electronic sensors for the continuous surveillance of parolees." It seems that a transducer would be placed under each parolee's skin "ready to sound off the alarm to a master computer if the parolee steps out of the geodesic limits set by the authorities."

Comments by a spokesman for the Department of Corrections were unflattering, but closed with the observation that the scheme was not expected "before the year 2000, according to our long-range plan."

The same issue of Voice, which arrived on Jan. 26 — three days after peace broke out — carried "Thoughts on the War" by Barbara Boxer. She declared that "Congress is the only hope" to end the war.

THE HORSEFEATHERS for Humility Award goes to Sen. Lawrence E. Walsh, D-Commerce, for celebrating his appointment as chairman of the Senate Transportation Committee with a press release declaring the great happening meant that "development and establishment of a balanced transportation system in California today took a giant step ahead."

"Nixon sent me."

"Gee, Fang, I feel so much more secure with you along!"

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

After-Dinner Dialogue Concerning Disaster

These two Buchwaldian types are seen after supper. Daughter, making like an adult, is looking at the newspaper; father is busy at his desk. Their dialogue:

"Daddy, what does 'disastrous' mean?"

"It means expensive, dear. You can see in the pictures."

"Daddy, it says crews were rushed to the scene. What does that mean?"

"Overtime, dear."

"Daddy, why does the government let people live in those places?"

"Does it? I don't know why."

"Will the government take care of those people?"

"I guess so."

"Does the government take care of us, daddy?"

"Look, Virginia! Go help your mother, I have to work on these tax forms."

Note: To conserve irony, this can be filed and recycled after earthquake, brush fire, tsunami, etc.

Bayside Acres Fire Shows Tax Inequity

Your picture story in the Jan. 9 issue showing San Rafael firemen fighting a blaze in Bayside Acres exemplifies the fine spirit of co-operation existing between the San Rafael and Marin County Fire Departments. Unfortunately, it again brings to light one excessive tax inequity imposed upon the residents of San Rafael by Marin County government.

The unincorporated areas surrounding San Rafael, including Bayside Acres, Country Club, Los Ranchitos, Rafael Meadows, and all of Santa Venetia are protected by the Marin County Fire Department. This protection consists primarily of one, one-man fire truck operating out of a gas station in Santa Venetia. San Rafael, on the other hand, has 85 firemen manning six fully equipped stations. It can be seen that while the unincorporated areas seem to have poor protection the city gives excellent protection. To rectify this situation the county has a policy of calling for "mutual aid" from San Rafael immediately upon receipt of a building fire in these areas. "Mutual aid" is a contract plan instituted by the various fire departments to assist one another at emergencies beyond their means of ability to control; it was never intended to provide "first in service".

In the recent Bayside Acres fire "mutual aid" was immediately requested bringing two San Rafael engine companies and a battalion chief to the scene some 10 minutes before the first M.C.F.D. unit. . .

While it may be neighborly and kind for San Rafael to give this service, it is beyond my means of comprehension why the people of Terra Linda, Bret Harte and Sun Valley should provide free first class fire protection to Bayside Acres, Country Club, etc. If they should desire adequate fire coverage they should pay for it either by contracting with the city or incorporating into same.

Attacks On Postal Service Unwarranted

Today's editorial, Jan. 29, is extremely mediocre and deserves a ton of brickbats.

I am tired of your attacks on the United States Postal Service. I feel that you are against the USPS because you are "sour grapes" about the service you received during your strike . . .

Why shouldn't the whole U.S. Postal Service rate a set of stamps? After all, it's not a one-man operation. There are thousands of people involved. Granted some are more dedicated than others; I resent your implication that postal employees are second grade people. I think you should print a public apology.

Why don't you research your editorials better instead of insulting people? The last 10-stamp set was issued on July 4, 1968 (historic flags) and not during World War II as you claim.

I believe that the USPS is not any worse than your editorials. Sometimes, like today, your editorials are shabby, to say the least. Someday when you are able to produce a 100 per cent interesting and factual newspaper, then maybe the U.S. Postal Service will be 100 per cent effective.

EVA-MARIA O'DOUL

(Postal employees certainly are not second-rate people. Neither are employees of other government agencies, nor those of thousands of private enterprises. A 10-stamp set for each class of employees, perhaps? — Editor.)

Nixon Economic Policies — Before And After

One aspect of Nixon's domestic economic policy is now clear. Before the elections, raise Social Security benefits 20 per cent. After the elections, cut veteran pensions 50 per cent. In fact, many veteran pensions are being eliminated completely. The joker in the national poker deck that makes this legal is the so-called "permissable income level" which is now approximately $3,700 per year. There is now a bill before the Congress that would permit the "permissable" income to be raised to approximately $4,400. (In face of today's cost realities it should be at least $4,200.)

To prevent hardship in thousands of good, patriotic families, I urge everyone — not only veterans and their families but everyone to write their congressman (a postcard will do) to increase the present inadequate "permissable income level."

The answer to "What Price Glory"? It ain't low.

THE NEEDLE

By HAROLD COFFIN

Workers don't enjoy working. The only surprising thing about this conclusion is that a bunch of researchers at the Upjohn Institute had to work all year to arrive at it.

The recommended solution is a "redesign of work." Presumably, to make workers happy by taking the labor out of working.

The way it is now, the only guys who enjoy work are those who are assigned to watch others do it. Trouble is, there aren't enough of those research jobs to go around.

Hard work is what made this country great. But that was back in the old days when folks didn't know they were supposed to enjoy working.

Shooting Of Senator Stennis; What Prominent Victim Next?

WASHINGTON — John Stennis, perhaps the most respected man in the U.S. Senate, lies in "very serious" condition at Walter Reed Army Hospital. He may die by the time this is printed, in which case the country will have lost a solid rock from the foundation of integrity and decency that holds it up.

Immediately after Stennis was robbed and shot by bandits in front of his house on a quiet street in northwest Washington, his Senate colleagues and other politicians began calling his wife, visiting the hospital and telling the newspapers what a commendable career he has led. It was not till late the next morning at the White House that the first thing to cross my mind after the shooting was laid out in public. That was when a reporter asked Mr. Nixon whether his latest cutting down of a national figure moved him to any further action on gun control laws.

WHAT HE SAID was of little solace to Mrs. Stennis, or to the survivors of any of the other gun victims in the nation's future. He already had praised the senator appropriately, and described the shooting as "senseless. . .one of those things that happens in large cities today, fortunately not happening as much as it did previously" (this squeezing out two cents' worth of credit for the cutback in urban crime claimed by administration statisticians).

As for gun control, he made it clear that it is primarily Congress's problem, not hung up by lack of White House leadership. Then, as a substitute for such leadership, he engaged in some of the most illogical bush-circling you ever heard — except in Congress where the same evasive action is taken even more lengthily every time the subject arises.

r. Nixon noted that Stennis apparently was wounded by a cheap .22, a "Saturday night special," and "obviously if they had had a .45 he'd be dead." On its face, that sounds as if a cheap handgun is bad enough, and a more deadly, heavier, more expensive handgun is worse. However. . .

Once again, he endorsed a ban on sales of the cheap pistol but not on more deadly weapons. What we need, he said, is a "precise definition that will keep the guns out of the hands of criminals and not one that will impinge on the rights of others to have them for their own purposes in a legitimate way." Having said as much, he quickly shot down his own halfhearted argument by recalling that it was not a "Saturday night special" that felled George Wallace last spring.

IT IS NO SURPRISE that Mr. Nixon under question gives two minutes of double talk that might as well be the chant of a tobacco auctioneer, as a means of moving on to the next question. Up at the capitol, where they have a chance to reflect long and hard on these matters, you might expect roll call votes to disclose more organized thinking. And they do — but it is the thinking of that highly organized lobby, the National Rifle Association.

In gist, Mr. Nixon said he would leave the matter in the capable hands of Sen. Roman Hruska, R-Neb., who carried the banner of the gun lobby gallantly through the gun control debate last August. Hruska led the fight and voted against every amendment that would have strengthened the bill banning "Saturday night special" sales, which passed the Senate and died in the House. Consistently voting with him were a whole string of senators who praised their fallen colleague this week, and in fact a lopsided majority of the entire Senate — including John Stennis himself.

Perhaps, one lady here said dreamily, now that it has happened to one of their own, the people at the capitol will get serious about gun control. It would be encouraging to think that after the deaths of John and Robert Kennedy and Martin Luther King and other anonymous thousands, the wounding of George Wallace and now Stennis would have that effect.

But what is more likely is that the Congress will find out that the senator was shot by a .22 Smith and Wesson blue-steel plastic-grip five-shooter Serial No. 2218222266, or something similar, and bravely pass a bill to ban all pistols of that precise description. Then we will wait, not very long, to find out who the next prominent victim is to be.

Kissinger Not Out Of Job; He Acquires Four New Ones

Henry Kissinger's unanswered question — At the end of his 90-minute briefing on the Vietnam settlement, after White House Press Sec. Ronald Ziegler had said the time had come to end questioning, a reporter posed one more. "Have you," he asked, "worked yourself out of a job?"

Kissinger ignored it.

The answer is no. Kissinger has no intention of resigning and the President has no intention of letting him resign.

KISSINGER'S FOUR new jobs. He is going to have plenty to do. His four preoccupations stem from events already in the making. He will be stimulating and co-ordinating U.S. policy in these areas:

1 — The new SALT II talks to cut back the Soviet-American arms race in offensive nuclear weapons.

2 — The NATO-Warsaw Pact negotiations on mutual and balanced force cuts in Central Europe.

3 — New efforts to further an all-European detente — Eastern and Western European countries, Scandinavia, Russia, the United States and Canada.

4 — Further initiatives to build on the improved relations with China and the Soviet Union.

The successful Vietnam negotiations wiped out any passing disagreements and annoyances which may have developed between Mr. Nixon and Dr. Kissinger.

WHAT IS WEAKEST link in Vietnam peace? From Saigon's standpoint it is the continued presence of North Vietnamese troops in those areas in the south controlled by the Viet Cong. This was a concession which both the United States and South Vietnam had to make in return for numerous concessions made by Hanoi.

These forces will help the Viet Cong protect their territory and have a potential to resume an offensive. But there will be attrition because the agreement does not permit them to be replaced or augmented. There are at least 145,000 North Vietnamese soldiers in the south and President Thieu has one million men under arms.

WHAT IS HANOI'S biggest concession? The North Vietnamese gave up the core of their previous negotiating demands — that the Communists be given a prime role in a South Vietnamese coalition government. The Viet Cong have a veto over holding free elections, but if they keep putting off the elections they simply keep Thieu in power.

THE WATERGATE and the Ellsberg trials. They appear to have something in common. Defense counsel for the Watergate defendants developed the theory that because the defendants thought the public good was being overridingly served by their actions, then their attempting to steal Democratic Party secrets was legally justifiable.

The defense in the Ellsberg-Russo trial is developing a similar thesis — that because the defendants thought publishing the Pentagon Papers was so morally desirable, releasing classified secrets was legally justifiable.

SCIENCE LOSES Nixon ear but gains congress'. The President's decision to save some salaries by cutting out his science adviser will turn the science community to Congress. Congress now has its own office of technology assessment and hopes U.S. scientists who feel neglected by the White House will turn to the capitol.

CONGRESSIONAL REFORM needs 'Hoover Commission.' That's the view of Hubert Humphrey and several other senior senators. They hold that outside study and advocacy provided by two Hoover Commissions under Presidents Truman and Eisenhower made possible major reorganizations of the executive branch. They believe the same is needed if the House and Senate are to push through needed congressional reorganization.

Devotion Of Staff Relieves Pain That Fills Burns Center

"Those who treat burns will be rewarded in heaven."

"You come in here a child — you go out a man."

The first sentence is lettered on a sign which hangs over the nurses' station at the burn treatment center at St. Francis Memorial Hospital in San Francisco.

The other words were the thoughts of a patient, whose serious burns on his face, hands and legs had healed, and who was going home after several weeks in the burn center.

IT'S A PLACE that most Northern Californians fortunately will never see — a sterile little enclosed world of suffering on the fifth floor of the big new high-rise hospital building.

Firemen from all over the Bay Area know about it, though, and many departments contribute toward new equipment for the center.

Then there is a corps of former patients and their families — even relatives of people who died in the center — who have supported it, according to Dr. Vincent Pennisi of Mill Valley, the center's chief surgeon.

When the center was founded about five years ago, Dr. Pennisi said, the hospital staff expected that nurses assigned to the burn unit would not be able to take that duty for more than a few months.

The problems were described to me by another nurse, one who works at Marin General Hospital.

"We hate to see burn patients come in," she said; "they hurt so badly."

But the constant care given these hurting people — many of whom are badly maimed — is considered a challenge at the St. Francis burn center.

"When we first offered the nurses (in the burn unit) a chance to transfer to another department in the hospital after a few months, they flatly turned down the offer," Dr. Pennisi said.

"I've never seen such devoted nursing anywhere else," he added.

SPECIALLY TRAINED to treat burns, the staff includes registered nurses, licensed vocational nurses and aides, as in the usual hospital setup. However, at the burn center, one can't tell which is which. Not only are their pins and name badges (if they wear them) covered by identical gowns, they all seem to work equally hard.

Phrases like, "I'll get an aide to clean that up," are not part of the vocabulary of the registered nurses who work in the unit.

Along with the high level of care, constantly given to people who are mainly suffering a great deal of pain and for whom dressing changes are a many-times-a-day ordeal, the burn center staff manages to maintain a high level of good spirits and even, at times, humor.

Light-hearted kidding and sometimes a mild pillow fight can't help but make the days brighter for the patients.

It's comforting to the families of patients, too, that the burn center is in contact with the less than half a dozen other such units of this caliber in the country, and a constant exchange of new methods takes place.

Most Marin residents will never need the burn center — but it's there for those unfortunates and their relatives who do.

For those of us, like my 16-year-old son David, who's going to spend several weeks there, the burn center undoubtedly will be remembered as a place where he received the best of care when he needed it the most.

Skater's Insular View Of Skiers; One Kind Will Pass Muster

There are Montagues and Capulets.

There are Hatfields and Coys.

There are skaters and skiers.

This column will be a doubtless unavailing attempt by a Montague-Hatfield-skater to play half-fair with Capulet-Coy-skiers, which — to the put whole problem one way — is like asking a Siamese cat-owner to write a love poem about the German shepherd next door.

After all, consider the temperament of the skater. A lonely, suspicious character at best, with something of the cold edginess of his blades. If he happens to be a hockey player, he is given to antisocial tantrums of bumping, shoving, and hacking. If he happens to be a figure skater, he heads for a secluded corner to practice that navel-watching exercise on ice: the figure 8. If he is a speed skater, he locks his hands behind his back and bends over broodingly, as if staring at his frozen reflection — the ultimate Hamlet.

WHAT IS THIS HERMIT this ice-man (in every sense of the word) to make of the skier: that jolly, gregarious snowman?

To the skater, the skier seems not so much an athlete as the Last of the Big Spenders. He may pay more for just his aluminum poles — say, $40 — than the skater pays for his skates. Then there are those $90 foam-insulated boots, to say nothing of $250 Fiberglass skis.

Not to mention the haute-couture parkas. For every skier that competes on the slopes, there is one that competes on the wardrobe rack. A 10-best-dressed list of skiers would line up candidates like a ski lift on Saturday morning.

Which brings a skater to another amazed question: What sort of big outdoors sport is it that ends up as a sort of rural traffic jam?

TO THE RECLUSIVE skater, the skier is a man who has invented a new excuse to travel. Didn't Archer Winsten give the show away? "No matter how good the skiing close at hand," he wrote in the New York Post, "skiers have a well-developed yearning for faraway places and strong convictions that the snow is deeper and lighter elsewhere."

The snow is whiter in somebody else's backyard. All right. But once he has arrived at this illusionary "there," the skier, as often as not, leans his skis against the lodge and heads for the lounge.

He is a partygoer with a prop — a big mixer with a conversation piece.

Even if the skier is not a roamer, a dude, a partygoer — if, in fact, his primary purpose is to ski — it doesn't matter. Your blue-nose skater will still frown upon him. What kind of non-puritan sport is this where life is all downhill?

A skater works for his motion, by George. Skiing may not be quite so passive a "sport" as snowmobiling, but it is still, in a skater's skeptical eyes, a "speed kick."

ALL THIS IS CLEARLY a view lacking in sympathy — patently unfair.

But now comes the fair part. The scene is neither slopes nor skating pond but a sort of neutral territory. Meadows. Pastures. Woods.

Onto this scene glides a novel kind of skier. He schusses us no schusses. He skis pretty much as a skater skates — stride by stride, paying his way as he goes.

The fancy jackets are spurned. Old sweaters and denims will do. As well as bamboo poles, soft boots, and narrow, light skis with curly tips — all of which may cost less than $100.

In 1969, there were 50,000 pairs of cross-country skis imported to the United States; by 1972, the annual figure had risen to an estimated 200,000.

These skiers with a new taste for privacy — these skiers who behave almost like skaters — seem to be returning to the ancient origins of their sport. What Fadl Allah Rashid ed-Din wrote of Mongolian skiers in 1307 still applies to the latter-day tourers: "They fasten boards of wood to their feet with straps" and traverse "the steppes and level country, up hill and down dale, as if they were riding on elks or other animals." They "take a staff in their hand and press this staff against the earth, so that they glide on the upper surface of the snow, as one goes in a canoe on water."

Or even a skate on ice.

Millions For Road To Nowhere

BOSTON (UPI) — The $125 million "road to nowhere" opened to limited traffic today, becoming a $40 million-a-mile road to somewhere— sometimes.

There will be no gala ribbon-cutting ceremonies to inaugurate the three-mile stretch connecting Boston to Interstate 93, which runs to the New Hampshire border.

Gov. Francis W. Sargent, the man who did much win legislative approval for the highway, won't even be there to watch the first vehicles trickle along the fourlane, doubledeck causeway.

"You've got to be kidding," a spokesman said. "There will be no ceremonies and I think you understand why."

The highway has become an embarrassing political liability and nowhere on Beacon Hill is there anyone who wants to be associated with building it.

When the three-mile connecting link between the Central Artery in Boston and Somerville was nearly completed the state spent $90,000 to find how it could be used.

What it discovered was that it could hardly be used at all.

Cars attempting to get onto the connector from the Tobin Bridge interchange—one of the worst bottlenecks in the city—will be rerouted along city streets, then onto the connector by another ramp.

Inbound use of the highway probably will not be allowed until late in the spring, and then use will be limited to buses, emergency vehicles and maybe trucks, a state official said.

Officials stated that to fully open the inbound lanes would be to invite carnage due to heavy crowding and would have the effect of paralyzing traffic at the two-lane junction on the Central Artery.

It has taken 11 years to construct the three-mile section, which so far has seen extensive use only as a playground for Charlestown street-hockey players.

Guard Convicted In Attack Case

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A hospital security guard was convicted of the attempted rape of a woman who ran to him for help after two men tried to attack her outside the hospital.

A Superior Court jury Saturday found Harvey L. Pleasant, 36, guilty but acquitted Robert C. Smith, 40, his partner.

The victim, a 27-year-old Piedmont mother of two, told the court she was attacked by two officers after she sought their aid.

Both Pleasant and Smith were convicted of failing to make an arrest.

State Test Results Will Be Presented

The Larkspur School District board will hear a report on state test results for first, second third and sixth graders at its meeting at 8 p.m. Thursday in the district office.

Trustees also will work out procedures for hiring a new principal for Neil Cummins School and set dates and select a principal for summer school.

FROLICKING IN A MILLION

Third graders at the Michigan School for the Blind at Lansing, frolick among bottle caps. A year ago they set out to find what a million of something is like. Today, after a year of collecting, they found out, and learned that their one million bottle caps would make a line 17 miles long. Their teacher, Mrs. Jackie Taylor, said she found it difficult to describe what a million bottle caps look like, but she said "they smell like a very large brewery."

Houston's Smog Problem Laid To Pine Trees, Automobiles

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — A lobbyist for the Texas Chemical Council says he has the answer to what is causing that brownish smog over Houston: pine trees and automobiles.

"There's been a brown haze over downtown Houston for years and at least 30 per cent of that comes from plant turpentines from the pine forests around the city and much more from automobile exhausts," R.M. Love told the Texas Air Control Board Saturday.

The staff of the TACB had earlier indicated that much of the smog was caused by industrial plants and vapors emitted from ships and barges in the Houston Shop Channel. the staff had recommended stricter rules for the chemical industry, based on a study of ozone concentrations in the Houston area last spring and summer.

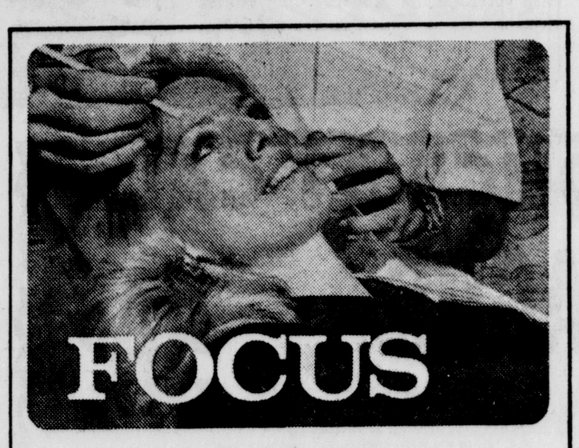
Love said the staff was just misinformed, like the public.

"A lot of confusion has led the public to believe the air is twice as bad, because the ozone is twice as bad," he said. "But that does not reflect the deterioration of air quality. The actual level of oxygen has not changed in the Houston area in the last 10 to 15 years.

He said the industry preferred emission controls allowing 40 pounds emission per day per source.

The regulations as recommended by the TACB staff would call for the installation by Dec. 31, 1974, of high temperature incinerators to burn wastes and installation of closed ventillation systems on all ships and barges using Texas waterways by Dec. 31, 1973.

Other rules would stipulate that all oil companies market a non-lead gasoline by July 1, 1974, and prohibit removal of emission control devices from autos.



Teeth Topics

This is National Children's Dental Health Week. Human teeth not only aid in the digestion process, but are important in speech, and help to determine the shape of the face. Man is one of the few creatures who can survive once he has lost his natural teeth, but modern dentistry and good hygiene now can enable a person to keep his natural teeth for life. Teeth are shaped according to the service they must perform. Some animals use their teeth for defense, while others are aided by teeth in locomotion, or in cutting down materials for their shelters.

Auto Union Funds Slim For A Strike

DETROIT (UPI) — A strike in the automobile industry this fall could leave United Auto Workers members marching on picket lines with no money coming in to pay their bills.

The union will have a strike fund approaching $50 million by the time contracts with the "Big Three" auto companies expire in mid-September — enough to pay hospitalization, medical and life insurance but not enough to provide strike benefits.

But UAW President Leonard Woodcock warns the small strike fund does not preclude a walkout —if necessary—against any of the auto companies, including General Motors, which was struck for 67 days in 1970 at a cost of more than $160 million to the union.

"The fact the strike fund is down shouldn't create any illusion in the minds of the companies that we're going to settle for settling's sake to avoid a strike," the union president said in a weekend interview with UPI.

Should there be a strike, union members in many states would qualify for food stamps, welfare benefits and unemployment compensation.

The 329,000 GM workers on strike in 1970 got $30 million in governmental assistance, one study showed.

Several businesses and business organizations, along with the Nixon administraion, hope to stop the practice. Dow Chemical Co. and the U. S. Chamber of Commerce are challenging the benefits in a court suit.

The U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare proposes to end food stamps to striking workers, a move Woodcock said "we're hoping to head off."

"We have a welfare system to take care of people in need," he said. "If you try to lay down a rule that when you're on a perfectly legal strike you have to be a scab to keep your family alive, that's introducing an element we've never had, even in the worst confrontation situation."

Woodcock said he could not be specific on what wage demands the union will make of GM, Ford and Chrysler when contract talks begin in mid-july to replace three-year contracts that expire at 11:59 p.m. Sept. 14. Demands will be determined in a series of conventions beginning this week and concluding in late March in Detroit, he said.

Wages may take a back seat to fringe benefits like a fully paid dental plan, "30-and-out" retirement with no age limitations, problems of safety and health in the plants and an end to compulsory overtime.

Woodcock said the fully paid dental program has to be a must item in a settlement since it was dropped in 1970 in favor of additional wages. Since that time, the UAW gained it in contracts with international harvester and Woodcock said the "Big Three" must "understand that one has to be there."

He also said there has been a strong reaction by plant workers against compulsory overtime, a fact of life in many fabricating and assembly plants as the automakers attempt to meet record demand for new cars.

"It's not so much they object to the overtime. It continues on and on," he said. "They are really resentful about being told, 'you have to and you have no choice.'"

Teen Court Rules On Two Issues

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — In the final session of the YMCA Model Legislature, a teen-age Supreme Court issued opinions on prostitution and sex discrimination.

The youth court, the first in the 25-year history of the YMCA event, ruled Sunday that a governor's make-believe veto of a make-believe bill to legalize prostitution did not violate the state constitution.

The court, led by Chief Justice Judy Rapport of Long Beach, also ruled that high school girls have the same right to athletic programs as high school boys.

Earlier, the youth legislature approved bills establishing beaches for nude bathing and setting up a state lottery.

The lawmakers also passed a bill allowing licensed physicians to issue contraceptives to minors without parental consent. However, Gov. Lisa Morrison has not decided whether she will sign the measure. She has 30 days to make up her mind.

The make-believe legislators also approved a measure calling for unconditional amnesty for draft evaders. But in a last-minute "change of heart," Gov. Morrison said she would not sign the bill. It will be transmitted without her signature to the President, vice president and California's congressional delegation.

About 570 young men and women from throughout California participated in the annual exercise in state government.

ART LINKLETTER
Nixon drug adviser

Nixon's Drug Views Said Too Simple

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Television personality Art Linkletter, whose daughter died while under the influence of LSD, finds his new views on drug abuse often place him in disagreement with President Nixon, whom he serves as an adviser on drugs.

Linkletter's new views—including a limited decriminalization for marijuana use—came about because of his intensive study of the drug abuse problem, which he finds "terribly complex."

"The President tends to oversimplify," Linkletter said. "He tends to see it as a black and white situation. It's really a blend of grays and that's what I try to present to him."

"The drug problem is a terribly complex one, in an area where we're fearfully lacking in knowledge and research. Quite often we really haven't known what we were talking about," he said.

Linkletter made a study of drug abuse in the three years since his daughter's death, "trying to shed the traditional emotional beliefs and get the facts of the matter," he told a conference at the University of California Medical Center Saturday.

One of his new conclusions, Linkletter said, is that marijuana use should be granted a limited decriminalization and he favors "giving kids who get caught our understanding and humane treatment" instead of jailing them.

However, he said, repeated offenders should be subjected to punishment "that's got some teeth in it."

American Tuna Boat Is Seized

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — An American-owned tuna boat, disabled and under tow, was seized by the Ecuadorian navy for violating the South American nation's claimed 200-mile territorial waters limit, the American Tunaboat Association reported Sunday.

The action against the San Diego-based Panama was the 23rd seizure of a U.S. vessel by the Ecuadorian navy this year, said August Felando, the association's manager. Ecuadorian authorities imposed a $78,880 fine on the Panama's owners, he said.

Doorbell Rings Twice Then It's Off To Jail

The doorbell rang twice. First it was the regular mailman, who got a signed receipt for the 20-ounce package from Bombay. Moments later it was the police with a warrant to search the premises at 1808 Centro West.

The addressee, Steven Richard Flynn, was booked into Marin County Jail with two companions found in his home. He was held in lieu of $1,000 bail, and was to appear today in Marin Municipal Court.

Police reported finding a substance believed to be marijuana in a pocket of Leigh Sanders Copley, 26, of Sebastopol. She was booked on suspicion of possession of marijuana, and released on $1,000 bail. She is to appear Wednesday in Marin Municipal Court.

Booked, on suspicion of possession of marijuana and narcotics paraphernalia, was George Jeffrey Dias, 24, also of 1808 Centro West. He was released on $1,000 bail, and is to appear in court on Wednesday.

Tiburon police reported the package was intercepted by postal inspectors in New York. Street value of its contents was estimated at up to $500.

Postal inspectors from San Francisco accompanied police on the regular morning delivery.

Oakland Fire Program Lauded

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — During 1972, the City of Oakland had the top fire prevention program in the United States, the National Fire Protection Association announced Sunday.

Nearby Hayward placed second among cities of between 50,000 and 100,000 persons and seventh in the overall competition involving 1,400 North American cities. The awards are based upon year round community efforts to reduce fire and educate the public in fire prevention.

The Association cited the 660-member Oakland department for conducting checks of 14,300 homes last year and making 24,000 inspections of commercial, institutional and industrial facilities.

Photographers Find Viet Cong Friendly And Anxious To Pose

EDITORS NOTE: UPI photographer Jeff Taylor was one of the first Americans to visit Viet Cong held territory since the cease-fire went into effect. Here is his story.

By JEFF TAYLOR

SAIGON (UPI) — On the first day of the Lunar New Year, I traveled with a colleague to see "Charlie" —the long-popular GI term for the Viet Cong.

Dave Kennerly of Time Magazine and I received government permission to take pictures of the Viet Cong, their families and one of their villages in the heart of traditional "enemy" country in the Mekong Delta.

We chose the day of "Tet" — the beginning of the Lunar New Year—for the simple reason that a cease-fire is traditionally held over this holiday and it was more likely to be observed by both sides more seriously than the official cease-fire already in effect for a week.

While we were still in Saigon-controlled terrain, several people told us there were no Viet Cong up ahead. "VC all go," they said. "They put up their flags then left several days ago." But we decided since we had come this far we might as well keep going and see for ourselves.

While walking across the narrow dike that straddles marsh-like rice paddies, we could see children cautiously peer out from behind bananna plants about 100 yards ahead.

But as we came closer, it was obvious that there were others besides children who watched our slow progress. A movement here, a glint of metal over there and suddenly there were at least a dozen silent faces gazing out from the dense cover.

"Chao and manh gioi," (hello, how are you) we called out, trying to sound happy. Frowns melted into smiles. "Chao anh," came the reply. We had made it.

From here on we were constantly surrounded by a mob of children who followed us wherever we went. It was like moving within a sea of humanity that broke just at chest level. If we had had any desire to run, it would have been impossible.

We were escorted to a small house and told to sit down and have some hot green tea, that the head man would soon arrive. Up to this point we might have been in any of the other Vietnamese villages both of us had visited so many times before. We shook hands with the elders, dropped our camera gear and sat down to begin thinking about what we were getting into.

We didn't have long to wait. Dave and I gazed at each other wide-eyed. "They're comin' through the wire," I thought to myself—the standard GI term for Viet Cong attacking an artillery base—as down a small path in front of us, men approached several at a time carrying AK47 rifles and wearing cast-off military gear and not so cast-off ammunition.

My first reaction was to just sit there and try to get my mouth closed and light a cigarette. Not far from the rear of the procession was a man armed only with a pistol. When he approached, we all stood to greet him.

Lt. Tu Phung, about 37 years old, commanded some 30 men who were mostly in their teens. The lieutenant talked to us through one of his men who spoke English.

"For a long time we have needed to get in touch with the press," he said. "Meeting you today is an honor for us. Rest assured, we will guarantee your security and if there are no obstacles, we invite you to stay with us awhile to visit several of our other villages. As you have seen, we come to welcome you. We respect the cease-fire. We hope peace will come, because our country has been wrecked by war. As you have seen."

Had there been any other Americans here lately, press or prisoners of war? The lieutenant's answer was no, we were the first Americans they had seen in a long time.

Then we began moving around. There were pictures to be taken everywhere. Any photographer would have gone crazy with delight. We must have seemed crazy to the people around us. We tried to get as many pictures as we could before returning to Saigon.

Throughout the day, as we were taken from one place to the other, soldiers, villagers and children begged to have their pictures taken.

From behind every tree, bush and clump of elephant grass, soldiers would leap out brandishing AK47s held high or B40 grenade launchers pointed at our lenses. They all tried to outdo each other for the crazy Americans.

At the village center we arrived to find scores of children had assembled to wave paper Viet Cong flags—a yellow star on a blue-and-red field—to hold up banners and shout cheerful slogans they had obviously practiced. None of it seemed forced or staged, though. They were genuinely enthusiastic.

The bright flags and the shouting were more than enough to make me worry that a South Vietnamese helicopter gunship would roll through it all at any moment. Sweat poured down my back as my mind's eye saw visions of armored personnel carriers (APCs), supported by F5 Freedom Fighter jets packing 500-pound bombs, rolling into Viet Cong hamlets with their flame throwers arched high over scores of grass houses like these—events Dave and I had both personally witnessed only four days before not more than five miles from where we were.

But there were no APCs, no planes, no bombs. We finished our picture taking and headed back.

"Chao anh manh gioi," we said. "Goodbye, good luck."

I waved over my shoulder and suddenly Kennerly and I were alone. We stood there for a moment, looked back once again, and grinned at each other. We had done it.

SEATED AT the large loom in her studio in Sausalito, Mrs. Theodore Bernardi demonstrates the techniques she used in creating tapestries, such as "Springtime," on the wall behind her. Mrs. Barnardi has a one woman show on display at the Philips-Allen Gallery in San Francisco. Drawings as well as tapestries are exhibited.

ARTIST'S VIEWS

Creativity Knows No Age Barriers

By BETTY FROST

"Tapestry, like painting, requires the active participation of the artist. Subtleties of color interactions, as the tapestry develops in wool yarn from the flat cartoon, mean the weaver must be an understanding artist with color as well as a weaving technician," Mrs. Theodore Bernardi explained.

Beatrice Bernardi also does water colors, oils and drawings. Her one-man showing of tapestries and drawings opened Friday evening at the Philips-Allen Gallery on Geary Street in San Francisco and will be on display through the month of February. The Sausalito woman is a member of the Marin Society of artists, women artists of San Francisco, and Spindles and Flyers, a Bay Area spinning organization.

In her spacious studio in the Bernardi home in Sausalito, there are four looms. The designer-weaver is currently working on the largest loom, creating a tapestry six feet wide and nine feet long. Other looms are being used by her proteges. She denies that they are "students", saying "they are creating their own projects. I am just here to offer advice if they need it."

A FIRM believer that creativity knows no age barriers, Mrs. Bernardi shares her studio with weavers whose ages range from 20 to 80.

All of her life Mrs. Bernardi's talents and energies have been focused on art. A native of Oakland, she studied at the California School of Fine Arts in San Francisco.

However she credits her husband, architect Theodore Bernardi and his mentor, famed California architect William Wilson Wurster with "the development of a creative outlook. Mr. Wurster," she said, "has a deep running philosophy to do the finest possible thing in each job."

Wurster originated the "Bay Region Style" of architecture, by using native materials, taking advantage of views and climate, and providing indoor-outdoor living with sheltered patios and decks. In the 1930's and 1940's. Wurster was Dean of the School of Architecture and Planning at Massachusetts Institute of Technology from 1944 to 1950, and associated with the University of California, first as Dean of the College of Architecture, and later as Dean of the College of Environmental Design,' through the years 1955 to 1963. Theodore Bernardi has been associated with the San Francisco firm of Wurster, Bernardi and Emmons since the mid-1930s.

Soon after Beatrice and Theodore were married 22 years ago, their home in a wooded setting on the Sausalito hillside, designed by Wurster, Bernardi and Emmons, was built. In 1956 the Bernardi residence received an Award of Merit from the American Institute of Architects.

The home has been on several house tours, including the Sausalito Nursery School and architectural tours. Mrs. Bernardi's studio was a point of interest to visitors to artists' ateliers, sponsored by the San Francisco Art Institute several years ago.

THOUGH AN architectural showplace, the house is a warm and hopsitable family home. Members of the household are two dogs, Tony, a poodle, and Poopy, a Samoyed-poodle mix. Poopy's favorite lounging place is a chair upholstered in a museum-quality fabric woven by Mrs. Bernardi.

"Our social life is encompassed by the professional activities of my husband and myself," Mrs. Bernardi said. Their home is often the setting for the first exhibit of a promising young artist, or a party to honor visiting architects.

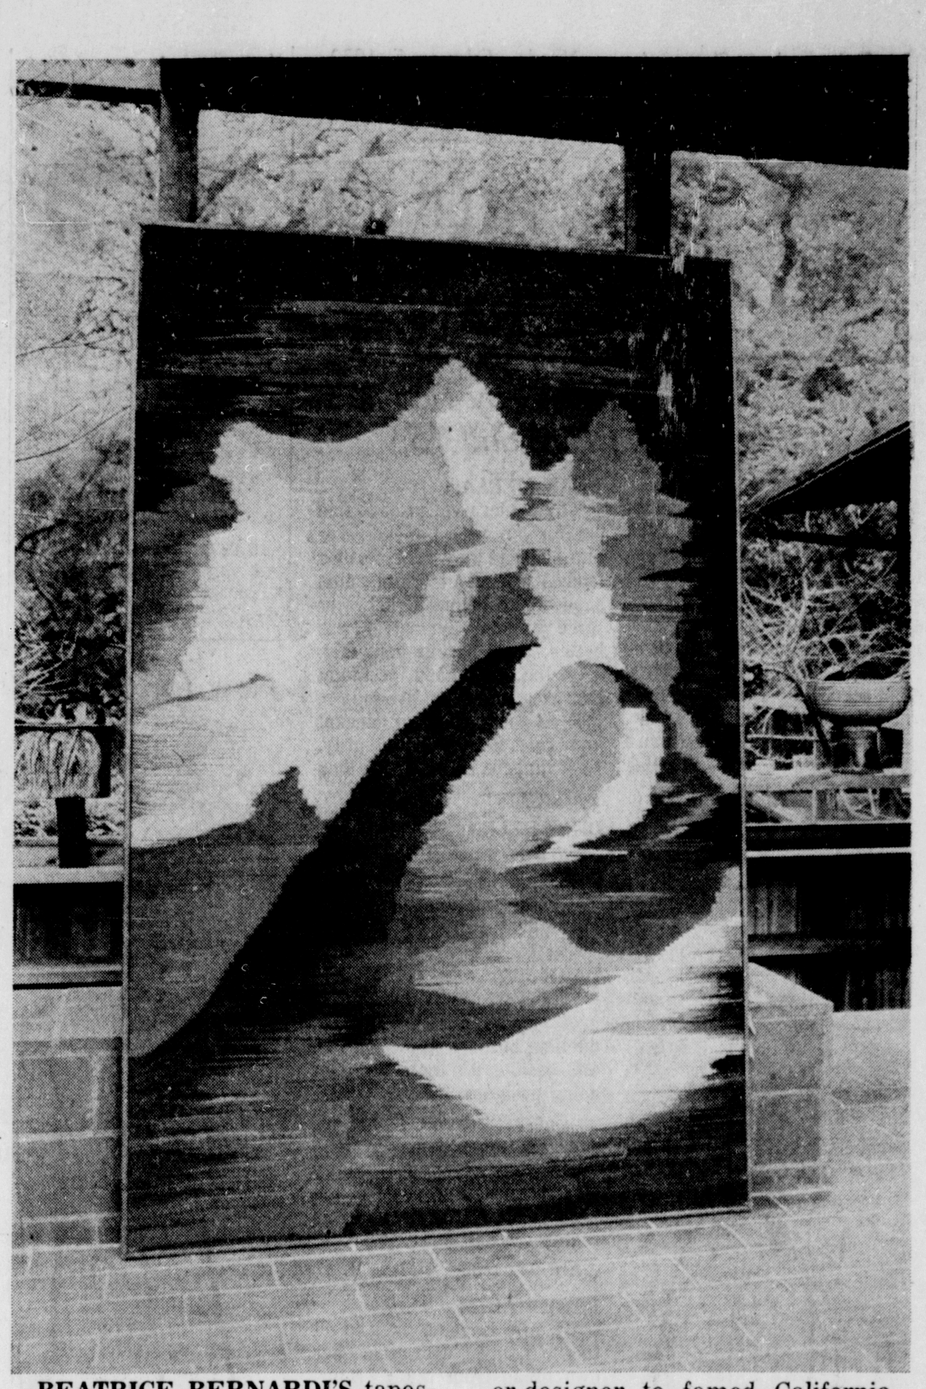
In the pre-World War II years, before such phrases as "culturally deprived" or "ghetto children" were on everyone's tongue, Mrs. Bernardi taught crafts to young children in New York City. After studying at Columbia University, she taught at Public School 125, a junior high school, and "After school we invented programs to keep the children off the street."

When she returned to California she continued to work with deprived children, "I could never ever after deny those needs," she said. She has been interested in the Sausalito Art Center since it began, and hopes that financial support will become available for its fullest development.

INTERESTED IN all the arts, Mrs. Bernardi resumed studying music, which she had learned as a child, several years ago. She plays the piano only for her own pleasure. "The main reward, "Mrs. Bernardi found," was that in studying other arts, such as music, you understand your own experiences more deeply. It is part of a coordinated whole. You add a new dimension."

The Bernardis love to travel. "Theodore and I have seen most of the major museums in the world, and all of the great cathedrals," she said, with a smile.

Sheri Williams, Mrs. Bernardi's niece, often accompanies the couple on their trips. Miss Williams has been assisting her aunt with preparations for the exhibit, with much of the work being done at Sheri's shop, the Aquarius Art center in Sausalito.



BEATRICE BERNARDI'S tapestry, "Winter" is displayed in the interior gallery of the Bernardi home in Sausalito. "Winter", one of a four part series depicting the seasons, was given by the weaver-designer to famed California architect William Wilson Wurster, whom Mrs. Bernardi calls "my husband's teacher and my teacher."

Hat Collector Extra Ordinary To Be Feted By Hospital Auxiliary

Irene Scott Pfaff von der Werth is a mouthful of names but their owner carries them as easily as she carries her 87 years.

In Mill Valley, where she has lived for the past 30 years, she is better known simply as "Nana" or "Vondy," however. Twice widowed, she still keeps her home on Cornelia Avenue and likes to walk into the center of town several times a week.

Mrs. von der Werth is one of the Friends of Founders who will be honored at the Valentine tea Feb. 14 when the Founders Auxiliary of Marin General Hospital honors its associate members at the home of Mrs. N. Charles Brusatori in San Rafael.

As a joke, the tea committee told the "friends" that everyone over 80 would get free transportation to the Valentine tea — Mrs. von der Werth accepted immediately. Mrs. von der Werth is also an active member of the Outdoor Art Club in Mill Valley, and she is noted in both organizations for her wide brimmed hats worn at a saucy tilt.

She has a large hat collection which fills drawer after drawer in her home.

Originally from Portland, Ore., Mrs. von der Werth was a cousin of the late Sen. Robert LaFollette of Wisconsin, Progressive Party presidential candidate in 1924.

Her first husband, Navy Capt. Edward Pfaff, died after World War I, and she later married Albert von der Werth, who died several years ago at the age of 93.

The Mill Valley woman's daughter, two stepsons, granddaughter and four great-grandchildren keep her from being lonely, and the friends she has made throughout Mill Valley are a part of her active life.

Her granddaughter, Mrs. B.J. Oliveau of San Francisco, is also a member of Friends of Founders.

Mrs. von der Werth admits to having seen many drastic changes in life style in her 87 years, but she doesn't like to look back. She is more interested in the present.

NOTED FOR the hats she wears to the Outdoor Art Club meetings and the Friends of the Founders Auxiliary of Marin General Hospital, Mrs. Albert von der Werth at 87 enjoys wearing the wide-brimmed styles from her collection with a jaunty tilt.

Specialist In Consumer Affairs Warns Of Deceptions In Contracts

In a booklet—Deceptive Sales Practices of Some Stores—Jean Drissell puts it this way:

"Frequently when buying an expensive item you do so through the installment plan. Many sellers, however, will try to get credit information out of you even before you've made up your mind to buy."

Miss Drissell says a salesman may ask you where you work, how long you've worked there, how much you make, how much your spouse makes.

"You don't have to give out this kind of information before a sale," Miss Drissell says. "Tell the salesman you'd like to look at his merchandise first."

THE LAW requires the seller to tell you the total cost of your credit purchase in terms of dollars and cents. However, in most of nearly 83 furniture stores in low-income neighborhoods surveyed by the Better Business Bureau this was not the procedure.

Almost none gave direct answers to a shopper's question of how much her payments would be and how long she'd have to pay.

"It seemed all the salesman were interested in was getting a few dollars deposit to serve as a binder on the furniture if the customer did not want to sign papers on the spot," Miss Drissell reported.

"Others probably thought they would jeopardize a sale by saying, early in the negotiations, exactly how much the customer had to pay. With the carrying charges, the amount was substantial."

DURING THE survey, one seller told the Bureau shopper her monthly payments would be "small." Another said:

"Don't worry about monthly payments. You'll be in good hands."

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Wife Covers Up Her Gray Hair But Doesn't Want Husband To

DEAR HELEN:

Because I dye the gray out of my hair and people say I look younger, my husband, who has a gorgeous head of gray, insists I put rinse on his hair too.

I can't stand darkening that beautiful silvery mop, but he doesn't want "to look like my 'old man'." How can I convince him that gray on a man is chic, elegant and stunning, but on a woman it's just old? — MERLA

DEAR MERLA:

Why not let your husband find out for himself? I mean, give him his head (any color) and his friends will soon tell him which shade turns them off. If two or three women say "silver was better," he'll change back fast.

On the other hand, he might look younger with a dye job . . . just as you might look elegant and chic in touched-up gray. Experiments are more fun than arguments, right? — H.

DEAR HELEN:

My wife wants to take belly-dancing in a class for amateurs that has just started here. Now why would she want to do a thing like that? — JITTERY

DEAR JIT:

Why not? Belly-dancing is great for exercise, weight reduction, husband seduction . . . and besides it's more fun than doing push-ups.

"Unusual" dance classes are very big these days. In some cities they're even bringing back the jitterbug craze of the 1940s (or was it 30s?), and this requires a partner!

Are you ready, Jit? — H.

DEAR HELEN:

My wife is going back to all the "old ways." She makes her own bread from whole grains, grows her own garden, makes yogurt, cheese, and we're building our own furniture, slowly. This is great — nothing's plastic at our house, and we work together on almost everything.

But: she wants to have our baby at home! She's read about the new "go-back" to home deliveries and says it's the only way. Her doctor ways she's in perfect health. He prefers the hospital but she is talking him around. My wife is good at that! Meanwhile we're studying books, taking classes in natural childbirth, etc. I have a feeling that, when the time comes, she'll just stall until the baby arrives. (We have health insurance — money's not the problem.)

Is this safe? — APPREHENSIVE HUSBAND

DEAR HUSBAND:

Home deliveries, with a doctor in attendance, are safe enough if there are no complications. But doctors prefer hospitals because unexpected things can happen, and that little black bag is no match for life-saving machines in an emergency.

Since your wife is determined to "do it herself," you'd both better have a conference with her obstetrician. Maybe she'll compromise if she realizes you can be in the operating room for the delivery. (But just in case she's stubborn, keep reading those childbirth books!) — H.

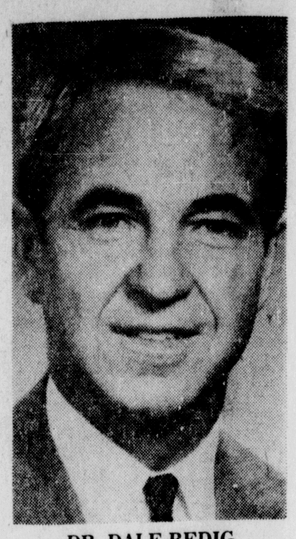
Programs Slated On Dental Health



DR. DALE REDIG
Tiburon speaker

To mark National Children's Dental Health Week this week, the Marin County Dental Auxiliary, in conjunction with the Dental Society, is presenting a series of programs on dental health education.

Tomorrow Dr. Dale Redig, dean of the University of Pacific School of Dentistry, will speak on "the Changing Curriculums of Dental Education Programs" at the home of Dr. and Mrs. James H. McCray, 7 Francisco Vista Court, Tiburon, for dentists, dental assistants, hygienists and students. Dr. Redig's talk will begin at 7:30 p.m.

On Thursday Dr. Richard Adams, Greenbrae, children's dentist, will speak on KTIM radio at 9 a.m. about new concepts in preventative dentistry. Also Thursday Mrs. Francoise Rothstein and her daughter Nicole, of Mill Valley, will be guests on KTVU's "Romper Room" show to illustrate good dental care. Dr. Marshall Rothstein of Mill Valley will appear on KPIX to discuss fluoridation concepts and dental health.

All the programs have been arranged by Mrs. Thomas Roeder, chairman of dental health education for the auxiliary.

The auxiliary members in Marin continually carry on their program of dental education for Marin school children through performances of their traveling puppet show, "The Golden Toothbrush," which they take to the county's schools. Puppeteers this year are Mmes. Gery Grey, Donald Strub, and Arden Valasek.

They also present demonstrations in schools of the toy dental unit, with a mannequin dental patient and the doctor's assistant and patients' families acted by elementary school children.

Mrs. Gary Darling is coordinating the toy dental unit this year.

The emphasis is on good nutrition and care of teeth to prevent dental problems.

Scholarship funds have been given by the auxiliary to students and institutions, and Mrs. Harry Humphreys is coordinator of the educational programs in conjunction with the Dental Assistant Program students at the College of Marin.

The auxiliary also runs a lending library of material for school educators and nurses, with Mrs. Peter Appel as chairman.

Later this year the auxiliary and Dental Society will present a one unit education course workshop for teachers and school nurses in latest concepts in prevention of dental disease. The workshops will be held April 28 and May 12 at Dominican College.

The auxiliary plans to help effect programs on dental health education in Marin's secondary schools, said Mrs. McCrary. Serving on the committee are Mmes. Joe Gryson, Gilbert Oliver, Rothstein and Larry LeVine.

HERE'S LOOKING AT YOU

McGovern Is Among Dressiest

The fashion organization named its best dressed men of 1973 Sunday and the list included the senator from South Dakota, band leader Doc Severinsen, lawyer William Kunstler, actor Burt Reynolds and Edward Finch Cox, President Nixon's son-in-law.

McGovern, the defeated 1972 Democratic presidential candidate, was "suitably attired in his international treks and stood out fashionwise during the cross-country presidential campaign," the foundation said.

Waldheim Says U.N. Should Work On Love

AGRA, India (AP) — The philosophy behind the building of the Taj Mahal should guide the deliberations of the United Nations, says U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim.

The Taj Mahal symbolizes the love of an emperor for his empress and "this is what we need in the United Nations — to love each other and not to fight with each other," he said.

Waldheim, who arrived in Delhi Saturday for four days of talks with Indian leaders, flew here with his wife Sunday to see the 17th century mausoleum erected by Mogul Emperor Shah Jahan in memory of his queen, Muntaz Begum, who died in childbirth in the 17th year of their marriage.

Incumbents Seeking Sonoma School Posts

Two incumbent trustees have filed for reelection to two school boards in Southern Sonoma County April 17.

In the Cotati-Rohnert Park School District, incumbent Maurice Fredericks has filed for reelection.

Fredericks, an attorney, will seek his second term on the board. He has served twice as board president and is currently on the finance, building and personnel committees.

Fredericks is a native of Petaluma and has lived in Rohnert Park since 1961. He and his wife, Betty, have three children who attend John Reed School. He is a member and past president of the Rohnert Park Chamber of Commerce, a member of the Sonoma County Comprehensive Health Planning Commission, Rohnert Park Lions Club and Optimist Club.

Fredericks said he would build much of his election campaign around passage of the $1.5 million bond election to build a new school.

Incumbent Anthony Carbone had previously filed for reelection to the board. The term of Gloria A. Garrett will also expire. Mrs. Garrett has indicated she will seek reelection, but has not yet filed papers.

In the Old Adobe School District, Petaluma, incumbent Margaret Kullberg became the first to file candidacy papers.

Mrs. Kullberg was first appointed to the board in 1963 and had since won two elections. She is a former teacher and lives at 1063 Stage Gulch Road, Petaluma.

She and her rancher husband, Oliver, have two grown children.

The terms of William V. Youngs and Dora Eldredge will also expire.

Butterfly Tree Fund Is Started

A Marin Conservation League fund to purchase the "butterfly tree" at Muir Beach and name it after conservationist Elizabeth Terwilliger has been set up.

Announcement of the fund was made by Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael, at the premier of two "Tripping with Terwilliger" films Friday night at College of Marin.

The tree is the winter home of Monarch butterflies which migrate there each year from the Sierra.

The films, made by the Marin Audubon Society under a grant from Standard Oil Co. of California, are 15 minutes each. In the movies, Mrs. Terwilliger, who has long led nature outings in Marin, leads children through a redwood forest and bay tide tidelands.

The films are now available to elementary schools through Standard Oil in San Francisco.

ART REVIEW

Show Is Without Pizzaz

By ADA GARFINKEL

Permissiveness in place of curatorial direction by the staff of Genesis Gallery has faulted the Mill Valley gallery's current 'February Show '73."

Not only is the lack of diligent screening obvious in some of the rather amateur outcroppings in the general display but the 'Featured Artists" exhibit also has been affected.

The gallery's policy of having three featured artists each month is good It offers an artist a rare opportunity to show his artistic mettle and growth by allowing him to show a body of work instead of a single one.

Being featured should stimulate an artist to rise to the occasion, to show his best and newest work. There should be no holding back.

If, for example, Nan Fowler – one of the featured artists — had been asked to hang some of her exciting new paintings — even just three or four — the whole tone of the show would have been considerably accelerated. As it stands now, it is pretty much deja vu and without pizzaz.

The two other featured artists are Pheobe Diegnan-Healey and Bernard Healey

Mrs. Healey shows two aspects of her work: five "Albums" in the photo-realist style of painting, and four "Jigsaws." The latter are rich, moody abstracts in overlapping, cut-out shapes. They are reminiscent of cave-dwelling paintings. Some of the figurative and sculptural developments also recall Henry Moore's massive open sculptures.

Mrs. Healey's "Albums" delve into early 20th Century Americans. They are bits of nostalgia in the sepia tones of photogravure, documenting such memorable events as "The New Essex," "Uncle Doc" and a girls "Basketball Team." More contemporary, but painted in the same mood and monochromatic tones, "Bernard" is a sensitive, serious portrait.

Several banal coastal scenes absorb the spatial horizon of Bernard Healey's paintings, punctuated, however, by two which rise to more aesthetic perception.

"Thicket by the Beach" is a delightful medley of delicate stains and linear striations which build wide horizontals of airy space. And crimson reds and violets create bold rock expenses in "Inlet," which are held in place by cool waves of pale green and frothy white foam.

Other artists whose work is worth noting are Dianne Weiss's colorful wall hanging and intaglio print; Ned Mueller's watercolor; "Navajo Spring;" Zoe Schaffer's untitled watercolor; Pierre Flandreau's thickly tactile oil paintings, "Hot Rocks"; Ronald Moe's etching, "Sunflowers"; Suzanne Gomberg's watercolor "Paris Rooftops;" and Bette Klopf's intensely lighted "Old, Old Story."

The exhibit will continue through Feb. 28 at the gallery, 2 Miller Avenue. Viewing hours are from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. on weekdays, and from 10 a.m to 5 p.m. on Saturdays.

PLAY REVIEW

'Caligula' Lacks Villainous Villain

By KAY KSANDA

One of the arch villians of all time came to a church stage this weekend with the opening of Albert Camus' play "Caligula."

It was the Renegade Acting Ensemble which used the Lady of Mount Carmel Church to bring forth the almost demoniacal personality of an evil Ceaser who threw Christians to the lions in 30 A.D. On Sunday mornings it's still altar, pulpit and pews, but on Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights, the beautiful church is transformed into a splendid stage in the round.

The stunning set, the excellent cast, and the power of the subject almost assured the production of success.

The actors aproached the stage in flowing Roman robes. Their voices, their gestures were clear, emphatic, and professional. Ahh, delight, real theater! Everyone was looking for the Emperor Caligula. His sister had died, and his mourning had plunged him into a severe depression.

At last, John Garber as the bereaved and depressed Caligula arrived, but he was more confused than crazy; perhaps it was too early to be psychotic As time went on he became noisier and more preposterous, but he never became really malignant. He murdered, but he never terrorized He was a wild dog, but not an ominous snake.

Without a truly nasty or frightening villain the sensational supporting cast could only deliver their lines perfectly, but never generate the missing dynamic power.

Appearing as Caesonia, Caligula's mistress, Mary Rose McMaster was a noble and many-faced tragic heroine. As Cherea, Will Marchetti was marvelous-absolutely in tune with his character. Robert Ari as Helicon was clear and convincing; Norman Denning as Scipio was nostagically sad, and Charles Werlin as the Old Patrician was strong in his subtle weaknesses.

As Mucius, Larry Lippert wove his timing and character expertly into the intimate group about the emperor, and Bruce Fleischer was an excellent and craven intendant.

One of the highlights of the production was the traumatic death of Lepidus, stunningly dramatized by Max Klein.

Special attention should go to special effects, with lighting by David Saxton and staging by the three directors — Will Marchetti, Larry and John Garbor — plus technical director Bruce Fleischer.

In this setting of handsome stone and stained glass windows, the costuming by Faustin Bray was outstanding, the girl has a gift, but then the whole company is a polished talented professional group.

Performances are every Friday and Saturday nights at 8:30 p.m., and Sundays at 7:30 thru February at 3 Oakdale Ave., Mill Valley

Inventor Shows 'Doggy Potty'

Hooked into household plumbing, his "doggy potty" could make curbing a dog a thing of the past.

MUSIC REVIEW

'Goldrush To Ragtime' A Pleasant Concert

By VERA M. OLMSTED

The atmosphere of an early California concert hall was amusingly recreated last night at Caleruega Hall, Dominican College.

"Goldrush to Ragtime," a benefit for the American Music Research Center, presented a varied program of music that had been performed in California during the 1850s and 1860s and even included some stride and ragtime piano to close the concert.

Soprano Corinne Swall captivated the audience in her portrayal of Eliza Biscaccianti, "The American Thrush" much as Eliza must have charmed San Francisco audiences in the 1850s.

Miss Swall, authentically costumed in a white, hoop-skirted dress, stayed beautifully in character throughout her performance. She chose five songs from the era, ranging from an Italian aria to several songs by American composers. The Bellini aria, "Qui la voce" from "I Puritani," was particularly successful in showing off Miss Swall's light, agile voice.

R. Lee Carlson accompanied gracefully and in the spirit of the music.

Ronald Ray Williams was introduced next to his role as the American composer-pianist, Louis Moreau Gottschalk. Williams, elegantly dressed and wearing white gloves, strode to the center of the stage stripped off his gloves and threw them into the audience In Gottschalk's time the gloves would have been torn to pieces as mememtos by his adoring admirers, but no one took up the challenge last night.

Williams performed four works in the stylistically exaggerated manner that Gottschalk himself used. One of the pieces "Chant du Soldat," is full of arpeggios, runs and trite pianistic effects. It is a tongue-in-cheek parody of some of the music written at that time and is very amusing and well done.

"The Banjo" is one of Gottschalk's best known works The piano imitates a strummed banjo, and fragments of melodies that resemble "Roll Jordan Roll," and "Camptown Races" can be heard at times. Williams maintained a driving rhythm in this tricky and brilliant piece, gradually accelerating the tempo until the pounding finish

The audience might have more fully enjoyed the humor and style of Williams' portrayal of Gottschalk if there had been program notes or an introduction to the characteristics of the man and his music.

Clay Roni, whose deft performance as master of ceremony helped to establish the mood of the concert hall, was joined by Earl Shenk in a hilarious drinking song "Cup of Woe." The vaudevillean antics of the two men, combined with Roni's embellishments on the vocal line, brought the first half of the concert to a fitting end.

The Primavera Trio, composed of flutist Edna Comerchero, cellist Jane Rabin, and pianist Janice Eastman, opened the second half of the concert with their own instrumental arrangement of a song by Stephen Massett, American actor, singer and composer and then wnt on to the Trio in G minor, Op. 63, by Carl Maria von Weber.

While there was some good, strong playing by cellist Jane Rabin, the ensemble had difficulty in staying together and seemed to have trouble in hearing each other. The trio is not a great piece of music, but can be quite charming when played to emphasize the contrasts.

Ragtime pianist Ray Skjelbred, who can also be heard on KQED-FM pleased the audience with his interpretations of six rags. The enthusiasm was contagious, and before he was finished, most people were smiling and tapping their feet

By BECKY LARSEN

About 50 Canal Street apartment house tenants huddled under umbrellas and their building overhangs in San Rafael Saturday for a damp noontime protest against a landlord who is evicting 13 families from two buildings which he calls "the tenements of the neighborhood."

While children held signs that read "Mommie where will we live now?" and "Why discriminate against me?" parents badgered the landlord and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Gordon, of San Rafael, who bought the buildings at 129 and 137 Canal Street six weeks ago.

Gordon and his wife finally agreed to meet with the tenants tonight in a place as yet undecided to discuss the evictions and other grievances.

According to one evicted tenant, Peggy Meza, of 129 Canal, 23 families have already decided to put their rents in escrow until their demands are met.

Most of the dispute Saturday centered on why Gordon was evicting the 13, who received their 30-day notices to leave last Tuesday.

Mrs. Meza, who has two young daughters, said that 90 per cent of those being forced out have children. "Most of our children go to school down the street, and this forces us to take our kids out of school," she said. She has lived in the building six years.

Gordon told the tenants that the 13 are families which have given managers "a hunk of trouble with children and an abundance of pets."

"Do you have your records with you?" snapped Fred Combs of 129 Canal. "I want you to accuse me personally." He and his wife have three children including a 6-month-old baby. They have lived in the building seven months.

"You're trying to make Marin County into a millionaires' country club," yelled another protester.

Another tenant being evicted, Army Sp/4 William Ankenbauer, of 129 Canal, said he found it hard to believe he could have caused trouble since he, his wife and son, 4, have lived in the building one month. He is stationed at the Presidio and said he will try now to get into military housing.

Tenant Robert W. Rehfeldt, of 137 Canal, said that his only child, a 14-year-old boy, is too old to be a problem. He said he thought he got his eviction notice after seven years in the building because of his German shepherd. "Gordon tried to open my door one day to come in and measure something, and the dog started barking at him," he said.

Mrs. Meza also told newsmen that Gordon would raise rents in the buildings as soon as he finishes remodeling the two 20-unit structures. "They're going to be raised so high that the rest of us will have to leave anyway," she said.

Joseph D. Mannino, of the Tenants Action Group of San Francisco, who was at the meeting said that Gordon was one of many landlords planning rent increases of from 5 to 150 per cent now that Phase II rent controls have been lifted. He said that his group of tenant counselors plans to help the Canal Street tenants launch a court suit against the landlord.

Present rents in the buildings now range from $165 to $185 monthly. Gordon acknowledged that he would raise them to $210 per month in the apartments which are all two-bedroom units.

But, he said, the increases are justified in view of $90,000 worth of repairs he is making. "Right now the stairs are falling down and there are holes in the decks," he said. "All the concrete around the foundations has settled away from the building. There are two swimming pools but they can't be used because they've been condemned."

Gordon said that neighbors in the area called his two buildings "tenements."

The Gordons said that they think the buildings are poor place to rear children. "Right now there are 45 of them here with no play area," said Mrs. Gordon "The garbage cans are not a good place for them to play."

She said that from now on they planned to admit only families with one child each, preferably infants.

Tenants complained that the repairs were making life in the building impossible. Several objected that garbage cans and mailboxes were moved without notice and that workmen walked into their apartments without knocking.

Talks Being Held On U.S. Sale Of Cotton To China

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Agriculture Department reports that "serious private negotiations" are under way for sales of American cotton to China.

The department, in its "Foreign Agriculture" magazine made available Sunday, said it had no information of any sales pacts being concluded. But it said earlier estimates of China's 1972-73 cotton crop had been revised from "a few hundred thousand bales" above the previous year to somewhat below the 1971-72 level because of drought.

The U.S. 1972 crop was well in excess of demand. A recent government report estimated that about 2 million bales of last year's crop had no immediate market and will be added to a carryover surplus.

Fight Quelled In Larkspur

Larkspur and Corte Madera police broke up a fight, involving about 70 youths in the streets of Larkspur Saturday night.

Larkspur police were called when a fist fight erupted at the intersection of Ajax Street and Hawthorne Avenue at 10:55 p.m. stemming from a party at the home of Zvi Danenberg at 232 Hawthorne Avenue.

Larkspur police said today that the intersection was cleared, and Danenberg concurred with their request that the party should be disbanded. Everyone left without further trouble.

New Storm Heading In For Tonight

A new Pacific storm is picking up speed and heading for Northern California, bringing more rain to Marin County by tonight, the National Weather Service reports.

San Rafael recorded .22 of an inch of rain from noon Friday to noon Saturday, but only a trace had fallen to noon today. Rainfall in the northern county area was heavier. Novato reported an even two inches from early Saturday until 8 a.m. today while Sausalito remained fairly dry with only .08.

Marin residents can expect the sun, which poked its face out intermitently over the weekend, to disappear entirely with chances of rain set at 40 per cent tonight rising to 70 per cent by tomorrow.

Temperatures are expected to remain about the same, dropping to the mid-40s tonight, while winds will be southerly from 15 to 30 miles per hour, the weatherman said.

Auto Is Found After Wreck

A 1963 stationwagon owned by George Edward Willis of 10 Park Way, Larkspur, was stolen early Saturday morning, and found at 1:15 a.m. after it hit a pickup truck parked on Millard Avenue.

Larkspur police said Willis parked his car outside his home at 7 p.m., and it was found after hitting a 1972 Dodge pickup owned by Stephen Joseph Ford, and parked outside his home at 38 Millard Avenue.

Both vehicles were damaged, said police. A witness reported seeing a long-haired youth running near the scene.

Milk Advisers Select Chairman

Leo Lavio, Petaluma dairyman, has been elected chairman of the North Bay District of the California Milk Advisory Board.

Others elected were Gordon Thornton of Tomales, vice chairman, and Walter Stonetta of Point Arena, secretary.

Local dairymen serving on the panel include James Grossi of Novato; Armin Truttman and Donald Mc Isaac of Olema and John King and Stewart Zimmerman of Petaluma.

Dead Trees Said A Fire Hazard

OAKLAND (AP) — Officials say an estimated two million eucalyptus trees killed in the severe freeze last December should be cut down and removed because they pose a severe fire threat.

The cutting project could cost $20 million, but the dried trees endanger hundreds of homes and other buildings in the Oakland and Berkeley hill area, officials say.

The dead trees are spread over 3,000 acres in the hilly residential sections, on land owned by the University of California and the regional parks.

County, city and university officials have agreed to form a committee to see how to avoid a fire catastrophe.

Suspect In Burglary Try Is Held

The man, Scott Doyle Weaver was to appear in Marin Municipal Court today.

Larskpur police said Weaver and a 16-year-old San Anselmo girl were seen by police walking on South Eliseo Drive shortly before the pharmacy's burglar alarm sounded at 10:19 p.m.

A small window to the right of the shop's front door had been smashed open, and the glass laid neatly in a pile on the sidewalk. Inside, a burned match and a powdery substance were found on the rug.

Police said Weaver's car was stopped at the intersection of Via Hidalgo and Bon Air Road shortly afterwards, and there were cuts on Weaver's shoe and trousers, and a powder was found on the front seat.

Ronald Quinton Robertson, the pharmacy's owner, said the rug had been vacuumed before the store was closed.

Police arrested Weaver on suspicion of attempted burglary. As there was no physical evidence to link the girl to the break-in she was turned over to her father.

Trip To Washington Will Be Considered

The Shoreline Unified School District board will consider authorizing a trip to Washington, D.C., for Tomales High School junior and seniors at a special meeting at 7:30 p.m. today at the high school.

The trip would be from April 4-20.

Chemist Is Candidate For Seat On Council

A research chemist has filed for election to the San Rafael City Council April 17.

Richard C. Fox, a research chemist for Chevron Co., submitted petitions of candidacy late Friday, according to Asst. City Clerk Renee J. Burdisso.

The 45-year-old Fox, who has described himself as a conservative conservationist, has called for more aid to small businessmen, use of volunteer aid in city hall to cut staff workloads, elimination of parking meters and a "continuing emphasis on unsophisticated good old-fashioned American local patriotism and teamwork."

Fox has pledged to champion the interests of residents "who are groaning under the weight of ever-increasing tax loads."

He has also proposed an incentive program whereby city employees who cut municipal costs receive cash bonuses.

Fox, of 127 Humboldt Street, received his bachelor's degree in chemistry from Massachusetts Institute of Technology and won doctorate honors in chemistry from the University of Illinois.

Fox joins Jack G. Nixon, chairman of the county planning commission, Thomas R. O'Toole, chairman of the city's planning commission, and Leo Tinkler, a real estate agent, in filing papers for the race for two seats.

Carl J. (Red) Brown, athletic director of Sir Francis Drake High School, has received nomination papers but had not filed by 10 a.m. today. Incumbent Councilman Lawrence E. Mulryan, who has announced his intention to run for election has not yet picked up petitions of candidacy.

Filing deadline is noon Thursday.

Prison Inmate Reported Dead

San Quentin officials have reported that inmate Roy Salas, 33, died in the prison hospital at 1:45 p.m. Saturday.

According to Associate Warden James W. Park, Salas had a history of epilepsy and apparently died from a condition involving that illness. He had become ill suddenly Saturday morning. An autopsy is pending.

A native of Arizona, Salas was convicted of grand theft in Los Angeles County in 1963 and sentenced to six months to 10 years in prison, Park said.

He has been in several California institutions.

According to Park, Salas assaulted personnel at the California Medical Facility at Vacaville twice and was subsequently convicted in Solano County in 1966 and 1968 on battery charges. In both cases he received sentences of six months to three years.

Location Studied For School Office

The Novato Unified School District board will consider the cost of renting office space at the San Marin Professional Building for the district administration at 8 p.m. tomorrow at Novato High School lecture hall.

The administration is now housed in permanent and portable buildings at the Marion School site. The board is considering using the permanent building for North Marin High School, a continuation school, and the portable building at Novato High School.

Flooding Report Due Council

The Corte Madera Town Council will get a report on recent flooding in the town at its meeting tonight at 7:30 p.m. at the town hall, plus a petition signed by 18 residents complaining about flooding on Tamalpais Drive.

Town public works director, Athur N. Morrison, says in his report that flooding occurred in six areas of Corte Madera: Birch Avenue and Apache Court; the Harbor Drive, Echo Avenue and San Clemente Creek area; Canal behind the Paradise Shopping Center; the 400 blocks of Tamalpais Drive and Manzanita Avenue; Lucky Drive; and the site of the proposed Hahn regional shopping center.

Most of the problems were related to exceptionally high tides, reports Morrison, with the exception of Manzanita Avenue which may be caused by an inadequate drainage pipe.

The council also will be asked to raise dog impound fees, to transfer funds to pay more police department overtime, and to consider its policy on development of land that's outside the town limits "but within its sphere of influence."

Woman Reports Her Dog Bitten

Her Lhasa Apso dog was badly bitten by a large red chow dog on Thursday evening, Anita Sommers of 78 Mariner Green Drive, Corte Madera, told town police.

Mrs. Sommers said she was walking her pet on Mariner Green Drive when the chow charged from a driveway and bit her dog on the stomach and thighs.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

South Must Have Strong Plan Of Action To Keep East Out

Any good lawyer can assure you that the laws of your country or state permit you to play a side suit before drawing trumps. This shows the wisdom of legislators in all parts of the world and should silence youthful critics. If the law compelled you to draw trumps, how could you make four hearts in today's hand?

DIAMOND ACTION

West opened the jack of diamonds, and dummy won. There was no need to draw trumps because declarer had no tricks in the side suits that needed protection.

South began by running all of dummy's top diamonds. The idea was to get rid of the king of spades as quickly as possible.

When South had succeeded in discarding the king of spades, he led the jack of spades from dummy. East put up the ace, hoping declarer still had the queen of spades, but South ruffed with a high trump.

CLUB DISCARDED

A trump to dummy's king was followed by the ten of spades. East naturally played low, and South discarded a low club. This allowed West to win with the queen of spades.

West returned a trump, but now declarer could draw trumps, ending in the dummy, followed by the nine and eight of spades, on which he discarded low clubs. West still got his ace of clubs, but he couldn't stop declarer from winning 11 tricks.

KEY TO CAMPAIGN

The key to South's campaign was that he prevented East from gaining the lead. East would have been happy to lead the jack of clubs through South's king, and then the fat would have been in the fire.

DAILY QUESTION

Your partner opens with one no-trump (16 to 18 points), and the next player passes.

You hold:
♠ - Q 6 4
♥ - 7 6 2
♦ - J 10 9
♣ - A Q 10 7.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid three no-trump. Since you have 9 points, the combined count must be 25 to 27 points. Moreover, you have two tens and a nine to help partner if the combined count is as low as 25 points. Do not be content to invite a game when you can afford to bid it by yourself.

Land Rezoning To Be Considered

Prezoning for newly annexed land on South Ely Boulevard at Casa Grande Road will be considered at the Petaluma City Council meeting today at 7:30 p.m. at city hall.

The agricultural land will be considered for preliminary designation as a planned unit development district.

The council also will officially award housing development allocations for 1973-74 and consider purchasing new equipment for the animal control center and fire department.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Chest Pain Or Distress Often Early Sign Of Heart Disease

What is an early sign of coronary heart disease? Chest pain or distress (angina pectoris) usually following effort or excitement. We hesitate to mention this because many people have chest pain that does not originate from the heart. Some will worry unnecessarily. But if there is any reason for doubt, we suggest that the physician be consulted.

Doctors David Short and Mary Stowers of the British Heart Foundation reviewed the histories of 320 victims of coronary heart disease and traced the symptom back to the first time it developed. Those who collapsed and died were not included. We know that many of these people had other cardiac symptoms that went undetected.

IN 94 PER CENT, the earliest sign of coronary disease was pain or discomfort in the chest or adjacent areas. In the majority, the angina (pain) was located in the region of the breastbone; in a third, it appeared as a band across the chest. In one-tenth, pain or discomfort was on the left side of the chest. And in an equal number, in one or both arms or in the neck. Distress was described as a sense of tightness, constriction, or gripping in the chest with or without a feeling of choking or suffocation. Only seven of the 320 claimed the pain was severe. Severe pain is not typical of coronary heart disease.

Still others mentioned that the distress appeared as a sensation of pressure like a lump, a blown-up feeling, dull or dragging pain. Some described it as raw, sore, or burning. A small percentage believed that the earliest manifestation was breathlessness, or unexplainable fatigue, fainting, palpitation, or dizziness.

MORE THAN HALF the victims develop pain or distress during physical effort or excitement. This is characteristic when angina is of heart origin. If the distress is associated with excitement, care must be taken not to blame it on nervousness.

In over half the patients, the electrocardiogram showed major abnormalities, but in the remainder, the changes were minor or absent. In other words, the device is valuable, but no infallible, in making the diagnosis. Listening to the heart is of little help.

Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.

STREP INFECTIONS

L.D. writes: Is there such a thing as a strep cold? Could it lead to rheumatic fever in the same way as a strep throat?

REPLY

Yes. Streptococci may invade the nose, throat, tonsils, sinuses, or lungs and lead to various kinds of respiratory ailments. In a susceptible person, involvement of any of these structures can be followed by rheumatic fever.

BREAST MOLES

REPLY

No, they are no different from moles elsewhere on the body. But they should not be irritated and see your physician if the lesions change in size or color. Our leaflet on moles can be obtained by sending stamped, self-addressed envelope with request.

DEAFNESS

Mr. M.T. writes: My hearing nerve is damaged. Will taking aspirin do it more harm?

REPLY

No.

ULCER IN CHILD

O.C. writes: What would cause a peptic ulcer in a 2-year-old girl to bleed?

REPLY

When an ulcer enlarges and erodes a blood vessel, bleeding occurs regardless of age.

BLADDER CAPACITY

Mrs. K. writes: I read your article about increasing bladder capacity in children. Can an adult bladder be stretched by following the same procedure of holding the urine of longer and longer periods?

REPLY

Yes, but there is no need to torture yourself unless a good reason exists.

EX-HUSBAND'S TRAITS

A reader writes: If my wife and I had children, would they show any of the traits of her former husband?

REPLY

Not unless some of his personality rubbed off on your wife or you are related to hubby No. 1.

ANGINA PECTORIS

E.N. writes: Recently I heard of a woman who was cured of angina pectoris. Is it possible?

REPLY

Yes, but let's keep our fingers crossed. This special type of chest pain develops when the heart muscle fails to get sufficient nourishment. The coronary artery usually is too narrow and hardened to deliver enough blood to the heart muscle during exercise or excitement. The supply is adequate during rest or while calm, explaining why distress disappears at these times. Cure may occur when new channels open up to supply additional blood. When the symptom is associated with anemia, cure takes place after the blood count returns to normal.

Driver Grants Nude's Request

CINCINNATI (UPI) — What do you say to a naked lady when she asks to be taken to the police? If you are a Cincinnati Transit Co. driver, you take her to the police.

The driver in question was en route to the Cincinnati Zoo early Saturday when the woman, apparently intoxicated, flagged his bus down.

The woman rode for two blocks—still naked—aboard the bus before the nervous driver spotted a telephone, stopped and called police.

Mussolini Sword Sold At Auction

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The silver presentation sword of Benito Mussolini was sold at auction Sunday to Stanley T. Wilker of Palos Verdes, Calif., for $3,000.

The sword is decorated with precious jewels and fascist symbols and inscribed "Il Duce." Wilker, a graduate of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, said he would loan the sword to the academy's museum.

Marinite Arraigned On Knifing

I-J Special Report

SONOMA — John C. Batts, 21, of San Rafael, has been arraigned in Southern Sonoma Municipal Court on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon in the knifing of a former world wristwrestling champion.

Judge Alexander J. McMahon set a hearing for Wednesday at 10 a.m. in Sonoma to consider reducing Batts's $50,000 bail.

Batts turned himself in last week at the Sonoma County Sheriff's Department. He had been wanted in connection with the Jan. 20 stabbing of James Dolcini, 22, of 6970 Red Hill Road, Petaluma, during a disturbance at the Hideaway Bar.

The incident led to a riot involving more than 150 persons and the mob tried to lynch the wrong man in the confusion, police said. Officers from four departments were forced to hold the crowd back with dogs.

Dolcini, who was world wristwrestling champion in 1970 and 1971, is the son of Arnold Dolcini Jr., a rancher and member of the Marin County Board of Education.

Growth Policy To Be Studied

New residential developments and a proposed growth control policy will be reviewed at the Rohnert Park City Council meeting at 7 p.m. today at city hall.

The council will review an environmental impact report for the 680-acre Shapell Industries' development plan and hear a proposal by Councilman Vernon P. Smith for community growth controls.

The council also will review plans for construction of a bridge on Hinebaugh Creek and consider setting a date for a town meeting.

Trustees Will Get Planning Report

The Fairfax School District board will hear a report from the district's planning committee when it meets at 7:45 p.m. tomorrow in White Hill School.

The committee will report on multiple use of White Hill School, the sale of Central School and proposed consolidation of other school facilities.

Transit Board To Study Pact For Railroad Funds

A proposed five-party agreement that could clear the way for a $2.5 million federal loan for acquisition of abandoned railroad rights-of-way in Marin will be considered tomorrow by the Marin County Transit District board.

The board, which will meet at 8:30 a.m. at the Civic Center, is listed as one of the five parties. The agreement would pave the way for the Golden Gate Bridge District to request the federal loan. Other parties include the bridge district, and the cities of Larkspur, Corte Madera and Mill Valley.

Most of the funds would be used to purchase an eight-mile stretch of abandoned right-of-way between Corte Madera and Sausalito.

Mill Valley, through which the right-of-way runs, has opposed the bridge district buying the stretch because it fears a massive rapid transit system. The city council had indicated it would prefer the stretch be used as a bicycle and pedestrian path.

The agreement would give the cities veto power over how the right-of-way would be used and would allow the cities to purchase portions within their city limits at any time by paying the bridge district the original acquisition cost.

The Corte Madera Town Council and Mill Valley City Council are expected to consider the agreement tonight and the Larkspur City Council on Wednesday.

The bridge district board, meanwhile, has scheduled a hearing on the matter for Feb. 14 at 8 p.m. at the bridge district office.

...caused by inflammation and infection.

Prairie Village, Kan.—Mr. Joseph Sutton reports: "My doctor suggested suppositories. I chose Preparation H suppositories. On a physical check-up my doctor noted how effectively it works."

(Note: Doctors' tests have proved Preparation H® actually helps shrink swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues caused by inflammation. It's so effective that in many cases, the first applications give prompt, temporary relief from pain and itching in such tissues. There's no other formula like doctor-tested Preparation H.)

PUC Slates Hearing On Federal Act

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A hearing by the state Public Utilities Commission on its proposal to comply with the Environmental Protection Act will be held this month.

The hearing will be at 10 a.m. on Feb. 21 in the State Building, 350 McAllister Street. The room number will be posted in the lobby.

The hearing before PUC Examiner Donald B. Jarvis will be to determine how to comply with the act, which requires "evaluation of projects and the preparation of environmental impact reports."

The commission asked that anyone proposing an amendment or deletion to its proposed rules, or proposing a different method, submit an original and 12 copies to it by Friday.

Anyone who wants to testify should notify the commission by Friday.

Light Standard Bids Received

Dale Contractors of Monrovia was the apparent low bidder on a project to replace light standards on Highway 37, 10 and 12 in Marin and Sonoma County.

The low bid was $19,019. The new standards will have bases which if struck will give way easily, lessening the severity of impact.

Legislative Program To Be Studied

Marin County's proposed 1973 legislative program will be considered tomorrow by the county board of supervisors, meeting at 9 a.m. at the Civic Center.

The legislative program, submitted annually by the board to local lawmakers in Sacramento, outlines the county's wants and needs. This year it proposes 17 bills for introduction and 20 for support if introduced by someone else.

Among the 17 bills recommended for introduction is one which would force city redevelopment agencies to obtain the approval of other taxing agencies before siphoning off property tax revenue.

Under existing state law, local redevelopment agencies are permitted to float redevelopment bonds and pay them off by using diverted property tax revenues from other agencies. No approval is needed.

The county of Marin has filed suit against the San Rafael Redevelopment Agency contesting that point and others.

Another proposal would take away the power of the judiciary to order security expenditures without the approval of the supervisors.

A brief rundown of other major legislation proposed follows:

A bill to clarify the controversial Marks vs. Whitney court decision. The decision makes it unclear whether the owner of a developed tidelot, affected by the decision, can use his land.

A bill to allow local government to contract with developers to limit sale and rental of low and moderate-income family housing in return for special development considerations.

A bill to eliminate the option of a blood test as one of the methods of obtaining evidence of inebriation. The tests are expensive and other means are available.

A bill authorizing the courts to require, as a condition of probation, that persons convicted of druken driving and inebriation pay county testing and expert witness costs in proving guilt.

A bill requiring an annual purge of voter registration lists rather than once every two years as is now the case.

The board's agenda also includes a hearing on the controversial Highlands housing project near Tiburon, a report on ambulance service and cost in Marin, and an explanation from the chairman of the Juvenile Delinquency Prevention Commission on comments that he hadinvestigated fellow commissioners.

Education Board Will Award Bids

The Marin County Board of Education will award contracts for school supplies, bulk paper, and deliveries at its meeting tomorrow at 8 p.m. at the county schools' office, Corte Madera.

Also on a long agenda are first readings of some sections of the 1973-74 budget, principally items requiring state and federal funds.

Joseph Amato, director of business services, will give a report on the impact of Senate Bill 90, the state tax shift school finance legislation, on county schools.

Election Of Blacks Seen As Beginning Of Trend

ATLANTA (UPI) — The election of 598 black officeholders across the South in 1972— including two members of Congress—marks a "spiraling trend which yet has far to go before it reaches its peak," the Voter Education Project (VEP) said Sunday.

The fact that 1,276 black candidates ran across the South in 1972 was a high water mark for Negro participation in Dixie politics, the VEP said. VEP is a private, nonprofit, educational organization that promotes minority political participation in 11 Southern states.

"The most important victories were those of Andrew Young of Atlanta and Barbara Jordan of Houston, Texas," executive director John Lewis said. "More than just a victory for their immediate constituency, their election as representatives in the United State Congress has great meaning for blacks throughout the South,"

Lewis said five of 10 city council seats in Selma, Ala. went to blacks. Alabama led all states in the number of blacks elected to office with 117 of 242 black candidates running successfully.

Selma and Dallas County, which saw bloody civil rights battles during the 1960's, had only 2.3 per cent of its black citizens registered to vote in 1965. But last year, 67 per cent of the county's blacks were on voter lists.

Arkansas, the last Southern legislature without a black member, elected one black to the state senate; two others won election to the state house of representatives and 96 others captured local offices.

"Such victories restore faith in the political process and keep alive our dreams for a positive transformation of the southern region," said Lewis.

He said more blacks went to the national conventions in 1972 than ever before and blacks were instrumental in the passage of prison reform legislation in Louisiana and open housing laws in Virginia. Black voters also provided a margin of victory for many white candidates, including Gov. Edwin Edwards of Louisiana, said Lewis.

Young's election as Georgia's first black congressman led the VEP's report on the state. Two blacks won election to the state senate and 14 others were sent to the state house of representatives. In other races, 46 blacks were victorious.

Louisiana appeals court Judge Ernest Morial won the highest elected court post held by a black in the South. Otherwise, 86 blacks won posts in Louisiana elections, including eight to the state house of representatives.

South Carolina elected 59 black officials in 1972, including four state representatives. North Carolina had 24 successful black office seekers.

In Tennessee, the first black to run for the U. S. Congress in modern times met with defeat, but 37 other blacks were elected.

Texas blacks placed 46 officeholders, with 27 black officials being elected in Mississippi and 20 in Virginia.

However, one VEP official, Harry Huge, said the figures only "scratched the surface, both in terms of the potential of minority voters yet to be registered and the relatively small number of black elected officials."

Broadcast License Law Asked

I-J Special Report

WASHINGTON — A bill to extend from three to five years the validity of broadcasters' licenses has been introduced by Rep. Don H. Clausen, R-First District.

Clausen said he was disturbed "over the possibility that the licensing renewal procedure could allow licenses to become a political football with government intervention in program content and editorial policy."

The bill would give license holders preference in renewals by the Federal Communications Commission if they demonstrate "substantial" performance of their duties to serve the public, according to the bill.

Clausen said the bill was needed "because of the increasing instability and lack of continuity in the FCC's handling of license renewals. Conflicting decisions by the FCC and federal courts have given rise to a chaotic situation that Congress should resolve."

The bill was referred the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee.

Ex-Convict Charged In Attack Rampage

TUSKEGEE, Ala. (UPI) — An ex-convict was being held at an undisclosed state prison today charged in a rampage of rapes and stabbings that brought state troopers and a standby force of National Guardsmen to this terrified city of 11,000.

Macon County Sheriff Lucius Amerson said Sunday night the suspect, David L. Goode of Tuskegee, "was secretly transported to a state institution for safety reasons and to preserve law and order." He declined to elaborate on the move.

The 65 state troopers who arrived Saturday to help in the search for suspects remained on patrol today, but the 100 National Guardsmen who stood by on alert near this city Saturday had been pulled out.

Amerson said that although some victims indicated there might have been more than one assailant, Goode was "the only one we have with concrete evidence. At present there's nobody we can link him with. We'd like to think he is the only one involved."

Goode was held without bail on six charges, including the murder of Evelyn Page, one of three elderly sisters raped and stabbed at their home Friday night.

He was charged with assault with intent to murder the other sisters, Carribac Carr and Josie Green, who were reported in critical condition at a hospital.

Mayor pro tem Willie Whitehead said Mayor Johnny Ford asked for the troopers and Guardsmen to back up the 50 local law officers because "whatever it took to protect people in their homes, we wanted to have it.

Smith Williams, Ford's assistant for public affairs, said "There's no sensible motive for the crime. Whoever did it apparently has some hangup over elderly women."

Williams said Goode was arrested without incident Saturday night a few hours after "someone called the mayor and said a man had been loudmouthing in public about what he had done."

"It turned out to be a pretty good lead," Williams said.

To Resume Study

The Mill Valley-Sausalito Joint School Committee, formed to study ways of increased cooperation between the Mill Valley and Sausalito School districts, will resume consideration of Joint programs at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the Mill Valley Middle School.

Charged With A Lesser Crime

Two men arrested on suspicion of burglarizing a San Anselmo natural foods store that has gone out of business have been charged in Marin Municipal Court with the lesser crime of malicious mischief.

Kenneth Charles Caramella, 27, of San Jose, and Dennis Stephen Morgan, 30, of Los Gatos, pleaded innocent Thursday and were slated to return to court Feb. 21 for a pretrial conference.

The two were arrested in San Jose Jan. 26 after San Anselmo police traced $700 in equipment reported missing from Everybody's Natural Food Store at 1 Saunders Avenue to a San Jose supplier of organic produce. Caramella and Morgan work for the company, The Well, which reportedly was owed money by the San Anselmo store.

Picket Protest Yorty Meeting

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Pickets marched in front of city hall when Mayor Sam Yorty met with the mayor of Moscow, Vladimir Promyslov, during the weekend.

The pickets protested Russian treatment of Jews wishing to go to Israel. One protester called the meeting "a slap in the face" to the city's Jews, "as if the mayor had met with Hitler if this were 1939." Yorty said he told his Moscow counterpart that American Jews are concerned about the treatment of Jews in Russia.

ATTENTION:
SELF-EMPLOYED INDIVIDUALS

If you have one or more employees, you may have previsouly considered a tax-deductible retirement plan (Keogh) but abandoned the idea when you saw the cost of including your employee(s).

If you are older than your employee(s), these costs can be substantially reduced. Take an actual case, for example:

	Age	Earnings	Keogh Contribution
Owner	58	$20,000	$2,000
Employee	29	7,000	124 (!)
		Total Tax Deduction:	$2,124

In most plans, the owner's contribution for the employee would have had to be $700. But this owner's plan isn't like most Keogh plans!

If you are older than your employees and still don't have a retirement plan, perhaps you should take another look.

Very Rough Day For Tom Watson

If you watched the television portion of the Hawaiian Open golf tournament over the weekend I bet you were pulling for young Tom Watson.

There was this 23-year-old boyish looking kid leading all the big names in the field through the first two rounds. Then Saturday, just in time for the TV cameras, Watson holed three consecutive birdie putts of 20, 30 and 25 feet on television holes, 15, 16 and 17. Time ran out and we didn't get a chance to see him par the 18th hole to take a four-stroke lead at the tourney's three-quarter mark.

YOUNG MR. WATSON, as the story goes, didn't get much sleep Saturday night. It's no easy thing to be staring first prize of $40,000 in the eyes.

Then came Sunday and the showdown for the young man who is on the tour for just his second year. By the time the TV cameras clicked on, Watson's lead had disappeared and now he was tied for first, but sinking fast. A double bogie on hole number 13 had helped that fat four-stroke bulge vanish. Yes, No. 13 had been unlucky for the curly-haired Watson.

STILL IN THE fight, there was Watson faced with a chip shot to the green which would have to carry over a sand bunker. These are the kind of shots that make you and I tremble. Too often we look up and send the ball straight to the sand as if directed by radar. Watson's ball had ended up in a tire track of some kind and he requested but was refused relief from the lie. When he finally chipped up, it looked just like my last chip shot on the ninth hole at Peacock Gap. Watson's ball was lofted directly into the sand.

He shook his head, walked up to the ball and did the same thing I did last time I was faced with a bunker shot at Indian Valley. He got too much ball, not enough sand, and sent it soaring over the green.

WHEN I MEET disaster in the sand dunes of a golf course, it just costs me a chance to break 100. For Watson, a bright fellow who just a few semesters back was deep in his books at Stanford University, it meant much more.

That's why I was really pulling for him when he finally reached the 18th hole and had a long putt for an eagle 3. He came close and had a tap-in for a birdie which gave him third place and a check for $14,200. He was still trying to fight back on that 18th green. Orville Moody was a stroke better and made $22,800, but the brass ring went to John Schlee, 15 under par with 273, three strokes better than Watson who had shot a 75 on this closing day on the Waialae Country Club course in Honolulu.

SCHLEE, 33, has been battling golf courses and other golfers for eight years on the tour and this was his first victory, so the top prize was well deserved.

Anyway, if you were watching the tourney in color, wasn't it beautiful? Hawaii is really a land of paradise. When I was there last March during some Giant exhibition baseball games against a Japanese team, I broke away from the hustle and bustle of Waikiki Beach long enough to drive around the Waialae course and the setting is really breathtaking. But alas. I didn't have my golf clubs along.

Marin Cagers Smash Solano, 89-42

By LEW CODDINGTON

A basketball team with an 18-3 record played a 4-17 team Saturday night in Kentfield, and the outcome was exactly what could be expected, only more so.

College of Marin, making 10 shots in a row at one stage and scoring 18 points in a row at another, pulverized Solano College of Suisun City in a Camino Norte Conference game before about 400 fans, 89-42.

The beating was even worse than the final score indicated, if that's possible. With eight minutes left, Marin had a 75-29 lead, and twice later got the margin up to 48 points.

The game concluded the first round-robin of the conference schedule, and left Marin (now 19-3) tied for first place at 6-1 with West Valley College of Campbell, 85-58 victor over Canada College of Redwood City Saturday night. Solano (now 4-18) which has not won a CNC game since 1971, is 0-7.

Wil Garner scored 18 points, Len Smith and Joe DeMaestri 14 apiece and Joe Casteel 10 for Marin. When the reserves entered, John Crozier and Mike Lindquist distinguished themselves, Crozier getting 11 points and four rebounds and Lindquist seven points and eight rebounds.

"We went to the offensive boards tonight, which is something we didn't do against Skyline Tuesday (in a 74-69 victory)," said Tar head coach John Panagakis. Marin outrebounded Solano, 50-27.

The Tars left no doubt from the beginning, opening up a 13-2 lead. When Solano closed to 13-7, Marin went on another tear to make the score 24-7.

The 21st and 22nd points came as Smith fed DeMaestri, and began the string of 10 straight successful shots from the floor. DeMaestri and Garner made four each and Lindquist and Casteel hit the others. At the end of the hot spell, Marin was ahead, 40-13.

The Tars led at halftime, 49-23, and a little later were on top 55-27 when they went on another rampage, scoring 18 straight for a 73-27 lead. DeMaestri, Garner and Casteel got four points each.

Solano scored only six points in the first 12 minutes after intermission, and just 19 in the second half, the seventh time this year Marin has held an opponent to 20 or less in a half.

Sonoma Five Rallies, Tops Hayward By 11

By PAUL DWORIN

For the second game in a row, Sonoma State college fell behind early and then buried an opponent in the second half with an avalanche of points as the Cossacks beat visiting Hayward State, 76-65, for a Far Western Conference basketball victory in Rohnert Park Saturday.

The two weekend victories raised the Cossacks conference mark to 5-1; they are now in a first-place tie with Chico State, 99-89 victors over Sacramento State Saturday. Sonoma visits Chico Saturday, 8 p.m.

Down 41-34 at halftime, the Cossacks came out gunning in the second half, canning four quick baskets on jumpers by Bill Belander and Steve Tiedeman, and a George Schandelmier tip, to take over the lead at 42-41.

Hayward then regained the lead and held it for six minutes until Belander put in four straight baskets and Tom Fitchie one to put the Cossacks back on top to stay at 58-50.

In the next four minutes, Sonoma outscored the Pioneers 13-4 as Belander made four more baskets.

"I don't know what was wrong in the first half," said Belander who scored just six points in the opening 20-minutes, "but I felt good in the second half." Good is not the word for his performance. The 6-foot-4 junior from San Diego put in a game-high 28 points and grabbed nine rebounds. For the game, he hit on 14 of 26 field goal attempts.

The Cossacks got off to an early 24-14 lead behind the inside work of Dan Heien and the outside shooting of Steve Tiedeman, but with ten minutes to play in the half, Sonoma went ice cold and was outscored 15-0 before Fitchie got them back on the scoreboard with two straight 25-footers.

It wasn't so much that Hayward was shooting well from

Marin Catholic To Host Novato

Marin Catholic High School, which three weeks ago was trying to think of ways to avoid the cellar, will have a chance this week to make a run at first place in Marin County Athletic League basketball.

The Wildcats will host Novato at 7 p.m. tomorrow in an important game, and will entertain league-leading Drake Friday in an even more important one. Tomorrow's other games find San Marin at San Rafael, Terra Linda at Redwood and Tamalpais at Drake, all at 4 p.m.

"Actually, there never has been a 'turning point,' " said Marin Catholic coach Dave Gonsalves. "We've played only one bad game all year. The ones we lost early were close, and we made the other team win them."

The "bad" game was a 52-45 loss to Redwood Jan. 16 which dropped the 'Cats' record to 1-3. They have not lost since, and their four-game winning streak is the longest in the league this year.

The lone Wildcat of any great size is 6-foot-4 center Tom Cronin, who scoed 22 points Friday in a harrowing 48-46 win over San Marin. Anothe leading rebounder is 6-1 Ben Partee, who did a stellar defensive job Friday, combining with 5-10 Paul Bartolini to hold San Marin's high-scoring Hoza Wright to nine points.

Despite the lack of size, the Wildcats have outrebounded their opponents, chiefly because they permit their foes few defensive rebounds. They wait patiently for the good shot on offense, frequently hitting 50 per cent or better despite being the league's lowest-scoring team. On the other hand, they lead the league in defense.

Enigmatic Novato (4-4) has lost three straight on the road after holding the unchallenged league lead at one point. The losses have come by one, four and five points, but it's rapidly becoming apparent in the balanced league that to contend, a team must win the close ones.

Tamalpais (2-6) beat Novato Friday, and is a wholly different team from the one Drake demolished by 31 points in their first meeting. "The team that's going to win the championship is going to have to beat us," insists coach Bernie Schneider.

Drake (6-2) has won three in a row since a two-point loss to Novato Jan. 19, or more to the point, since forward Don Asay and guard Rick Herbert were installed in the starting lineup. The two have scored 92 points in the three games.

Redwood (5-3) rebounded from a shattering 81-60 loss to Drake to defeat San Rafael Friday and remain on the Pirates' heels. The Giants face a Terra Linda (4-4) team which has dropped three of its last four, including a 75-70 loss to Drake Friday.

Like Novato and Terra Linda, San Marin (4-4) has reached the point where it cannot afford any more losses. The Mustangs lost to San Rafael last time around, 70-57, but the Bulldogs (2-6) have lost all six games since then.

Sabich Triumphs In Ski Slalom

BURNSVILLE, Minn. (UPI) — Spider Sabich, Snowmass, Colo., nipped 6-foot 5 Austrian skier Harald Stuefer for first place Sunday in head-to-head slalom competition at the St. Paul Winter Carnival's McDonalds' Cup at Buck Hill.

Sabich, 28, hiked his point total in the Benson & Hedges Grand Prix Ski Tour to 162 and raised his earnings to $13,325. Stuefer remained in second place with 156 points and picked up $1,500 to increase his total earnings to $12,900.

Jean-Claude Killy of Megeve, France, fastest slalom qualifier and winner of Saturday's giant slalom competition was leading his race against Mike Schwaiger of Austria when he fell and spun into the crowd. He was not hurt.

Schwaiger went on to take third place money of $1,200 and moved up to 16th in the tour standings. Killy retained his third place overall position with 134 points and earnings of $11,400.

Gregg Reaches Goal With Car Race Win

Combined AP & UPI

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Curly haired, handsome Peter Gregg reached his goal. Curly haired, handsome Hurley Haywood crossed the threshold to the future.

The pair of skilled race drivers, so alike and yet so different, made a perfect team in piloting a Porsche Carrera to a surprise victory in the 24 hours of Daytona sports car race yesterday a triumph so easy Gregg said, "We didn't run the car any harder than I will drive my Porsche 911 going back to Jacksonville."

In the first half of the race that began Saturday at 3 p.m. their performance was overshadowed by the 119 m.p.h. laps around the 3.81-mile course Mike Hailwood and Derek Bell of England turned in a pair of Gulf Mirages as they dueled with Francois Cevert and Henri Pescarolo in a French Matra that won last year's 24-hour race at LeMans.

But the Mirages and Matra fell victim to mechanical troubles under the brutal pounding. Then Gregg and Haywood had to play a supporting role to the glamorous pair of Indianapolis winner Mark Donohue and CanAm champion George Follmer in a sister Porsche Carrera until it, too, went out ear the halfway point with a broken piston.

They finished nearly 85 miles ahead of a second-place Ferrari GTB driven by Milt Minter of Los Angeles and Francois Migault of France. A Corvette shared by David Heinz of Tampa, Fla., and Bob McClure of Bethel Park, Pa., was 15 miles farther back.

Gregg, at 31, says he is reducing his racing schedule to spend more time with wife Jennifer and sons Jason, 10, and Simon 8.

"It's not my goal to become famous at racing," said Gregg, who owns a lucrative foreign car dealership in Jacksonville 95 miles to the north.

He called Haywood his protege, and predicted a big future for the 24-year-old who found his way from his native Chicago to Florida, where he enrolled in business administration at Jacksonville University and met Gregg at a racing event.

"In two days time, I taught him to drive around the track within two seconds of my time," Gregg said.

Haywood declares his goal is to be "a top flight professional driver. I'll be in CanAm on my own this year. If I do well, I look for better things in the future. Maybe this victory will help."

NHL BRUINS

Guidolin Replaces Johnson

BOSTON (UPI) — The Boston Bruins today fired coach Tom Johnson and named Armand "Bep" Guidolin of the American Hockey League Boston Braves to replace him.

The move came on the heels of a mid-season skid in which the Bruins had won only four of 13 games since Jan. 4.

Johnson will remain with the team in an administrative capacity.

Mangaging director Harry Sinden said he "felt a change was necessary at this time." He said Guidolin would take over immediately.

Guidolin, 47, has coached the Braves in the AHL since the team's inception a year ago. Last year, he guided the club to the Eastern Division title and this season the Braves have been holding down the second spot behind the Nova Scotia Voyageurs.

Previously, as coach of the Oshawa (Ont.) Generals, Guidolin had coached Bobby Orr, Wayne Cashman and Nick Beverley, all now with Boston.

Guidolin turned pro with the Bruins during the 1942-43 season when he was only 16-years-old and he still holds that distinction as being the youngest ever to play in the National Hockey League.

His major league career was interrupted by a hitch in the Canadian Armed Forces but he still managed a nine year NHL career with the Bruins, Detroit

IDLE WARRIORS SET PRACTICE TOMORROW

OAKLAND (UPI) — Golden State Warrior coach Al Attles wishes Jim Barnett could handle himself in every game the way he did against Seattle.

Barnett and Cazzie Russell combined for 62 points Saturday night to give the Warriors a 123-101 National Basketball Association win over the Supersonics.

Barnett got 30 points, tying his second high game as a Warrior.

"It was a great game for Jim," said Attles. "If we could expect that type of game from him all the time, we'd be set."

However, Attles added that Barnett is "not that type of player all the time, and we know it."

The Warriors were idle last night and will have today off.

"Then it's practice Tuesday and Wednesday," Attles said.

The Warriors host Portland Thursday night. The Warriors are 9½ games behind the first-place Los Angeles Lakers in the Pacific Division.

Goalie Meloche Is A Model Of Frustration

OAKLAND (UPI) — Montreal's Canadiens won a National Hockey League game 6-1 Sunday night and the busiest and most frustrated man on the ice was goalie Gilles Meloche of the California Golden Seals.

Twice he tried and failed to stop breakaways while his teammates attempted to skate back in time.

Chuck Lefley, who had picked the puck off the stick of Seal Ivan Boldirev, faked left and shot right to score on the first breakaway.

A shot by Murray Wilson, the second breakaway, was blocked by Meloche who had to leave the net. But then Jacques Lemaire picked up the rebound and made the goal.

In all, the Canadiens took 39 shots, making three of them good in the first period and putting the game away early.

There was a boisterous and unhappy crowd of 9,022 in the Oakland Arena for the game and at least two of them had more or less violent words.

Seal Coach Fred Glover said one disgruntled fan moved behind his team's bench and "called everybody on the team everything in the book."

Another spectator pushed the critic over the rail into an area between the Seal and Montreal benches.

Innsbruck Is Olympic Games Site

Combined AP & UPI

LAUSANNE, Switzerland — The reverend made an impassioned plea, mustering all the eloquence of a sermon from his pulpit. But the Olympic executives were unmoved and gave the 1976 Winter Games to Innsbruck, Austria.

"We knew we were working against heavy odds," said the Rev. Bernard Fell, main spokesman for the group which had been hoping they could persuade the executive body of the International Olympic Committee to award the Games to Lake Placid, N.Y.

"We had only four days to prepare our application, get it printed and then come over here to argue our case," said the minister of the United Methodist Church. "If we'd had a little more time, we might have made it. Even the film we showed them of our skiing slopes at Lake Placid was six years old. It was all we could manage at such short notice."

Fell had told the IOC executives: "In 1976, we will, as the world is our witness, be good to the Olympic Games.

But the effort was all in vain for the community of 5,000 which, in 1932, had hosted the first Winter Olympics in the United States.

Innsbruck, a city of 116,000 with all the facilities of the successful 1964 Winter Games still intact, ran away with the selection yesterday.

Besides Lakes Placid, the IOC executives also turned down bids by Chamonix, France, and Tampere, Finland.

The crisis preceding the selection of Innsburck began when Denver, Colo., the original host, withdrew. In a statewide ballot last November, Colorado voters had overwhelmingly refused to approve the use of state funds to help stage the Games.

Meanwhile, Lord Michael Killanin, Avery Brundage's successor as IOC president, went

Lakers Burst Bullets' Bubble

By U P INTERNATIONAL

The Los Angeles Lakers burst the Baltimore Bullet bubble

The Bullets anxious to wrap up the Central Division title early to prepare for their first round playoffs against its Atlantic Division opponent were riding a four-game winning streak Sunday when they were shelled by the Lakers heavy artillery—Jerry West and Gail Goodrich

The Los Angeles Happiness Boys scored 28 points apiece as the Laker troupe posted its 18th consecutive National Basketball Association victory 125-115

Our problem was letting them jump out too early," explained Baltimore guard Phil Chenier who scored 22 points against the Laker defense 'West shoots off those Los Angeles picks, but that's not saying I could stop his jumper even if I fought my way past Chamberlain Wilt just moves me out of the way Whe West is shooting I guess there's nothing much you can do."

Baltimore held the Lakers even for the first quarter, but lost the game in the second period when Los Angeles outscored the Bullets, 38-29. Wes Unseld tallied 24 points for the losers, but was outclassed by Chamberlain under the boards, 20-8 Archie Clark also scored 24 for Baltimore

In other NBA action, Chicago ripped Milwaukee 121-99; Boston topped Philadelphia, 123-115· New York beat Cleveland 114-97 Houston routed Buffalo, 130-118 and KC-Omaha mauled Seattle 120-98

Bob Love scored a career high 49 points as Chicago cut Milwaukee's lead in the Midwest Division to 4½ games.

The haple·s 76ers led Boston by 12 points going into the fourth quarter, but couldn't contain the Celtics in the final period as Jo Jo White scored 11 f his game high 38 points in the session.

Earl Monroe powered New York to victory over Cleveland by hitting all seven shots in the fourth quarter after the Knicks trailed by a point with 9:37 left in the game.

Houston, playing its fifth game in six days, received a 30 -point shooting performance from Jack Marin. Rockets team captain Jimmy Walker was ejected after drawing two technical fouls.

KC-Omaha's Nate Archibald became the first player to score 2,000 points in the National Basketball Association this season when he poured in 31 points against Seattle. spencer Haywood topped the Sonics with 27 points.

NHL ROUNDUP

Ex-Olympic Hero Stars For Detroit

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Just one year ago Henry Boucha was helping work a miracle for all of America. Now, he's merely trying to achieve the incredible for the Detroit Red Wings.

Boucha was one of the star performers for the United States Olympic hockey team that amazed almost everyone by winning the silver medal at Sapporo, Japan, last February. Immediately after his return home, he signed a professional contract with the Red Wings.

Although he was nowhere near an immediate success in the National Hockey League last year, Boucha now finds himself in the middle of another budding Cinderella story as Detroit continues its surge for a playoff berth that just a short while ago seemed out of reach.

Boucha, a tireless worker even when he isn't scoring, came up with his seventh and eighth goals of the season Sunday night as Detroit bombed the Vancouver Canucks 8-2. It was the fourth consecutive victory for the Wings, who at one time were 14 points in back of fourth-place Buffalo, but now trail the Sabres by only a single point in the East Division.

Buffalo, which had to struggle for a 1-1 tie on Long Island Saturday night managed to maintain its slim hold on fourth place by beating the Islanders 5 -1 in a home ice rematch Sunday night.

In the West Division, the Chicago Black Hawks stretched their lead over second-place Philadelphia to 10 points by belting the St. Louis Blues 5-2 while the Flyers played to a satisfying 2-2 tie against the slumping Bruins at Boston.

The Montreal Canadiens maintained their four-point edge over the Rangers in the East race by beating the California Golden Seals 6-1 after New York had stretched its winning streak to eight games by belting the Atlanta Flames 6-0. In an afternoon contest, the Minnesota North Stars avenged a Saturday loss at Pittsburgh by edging the Penguins 4-3.

Mickey Redmond scored his 17th goal in his last 17 games and Marcel Dionne added a goal and two assists to support Detroit's attack.

Chico Maki, Jim Pappin and Dan Maloney scored within a four-minute span of the first period to provide Chicago all the offensive power it needed to stretch its unbeaten string to eight games. The Blues, making a late run at a West Division playoff berth, had their non-losing skein snapped at nine games.

Wooden Is Upset With Newsmen

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Coach John Wooden of No. 1 UCLA is just a little bit upset with newsmen covering his Bruins

'No question, Walton is our big man " Wooden said after his Bruins whipped cross-town rival Southern California 79-56 Saturday night to extend their Pacific 8 Conference record to 5 -0, 1972-73 overall record to 17-0 and winning streak to 62.

"But Keith Wilkes had two great games last week when we broke the record (consecutive victory mark to 61). You sports writers keep saying he's overlooked and then you go right ahead and overlook him."

Walton scored 20 points and grabbed 17 rebounds in the victory over USC while Larry Farmer, another overlooked Bruin, and Wilkes scored 16 and 14 points, respectively.

The score was tied at 12-12 in the early minutes when Walton hit on a layup to start a 12point spurt that put the Bruins in front and the Trojans never came close again.

"We looked good in those early minutes," said Trojan coach Bob Boyd, "but then we lost our poise and any concept of what we were doing out there. Some of our players got caught up in the tenseness of it."

Wooden, befitting a coach of a super team, said he never thought his club was in trouble and figured it was just a matter of time before it exploded.

The loss was the first of the year in conference play for the Trojans, who now are 4-1 in the Pac 8 and 13-5 overall

Only one other Pac 8 game was played Saturday and in that one Rick Kelley, Stanford's 7-foot center, hit on 20 of his game-high 28 points in the second half as the Cardinals came on to beat California 73-68.

In the West Coast Athletic Conference, University of San Francisco and Santa Clara continued on their winning ways, the 19th ranked Dons beating Nevada-Reno 89-66 and the Broncos routing Nevada-Las Vegas 95-73.

Santa Clara and USF, old WCAC rivals, are tied for first with 6-0 records. They have their first showdown of the year this Saturday in San Francisco and then meet again three nights later at Santa Clara. Those two games should decide the division title.

All America Ed Ratleff scored 28 points to lead fourth ranked Long Beach State to an easy 103-82 victory over Los Angeles State and into a tie for first with San Jose State in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association. Both the 49ers and Spartans are 4-1. Long Beach meets San Diego State twice this week while San Jose plays Pacific twice.

out of his way to warn all concerned with the Winter Games that any more blatant professionalism or commercialization in them could mean their death.

"I draw your attention," said Killanin about the hubbub caused by his announcement of Innsbruck, "to the fact that there are a lot of people critical of the winter Olympic Games on the grounds of eligibility, the small number of countries involved and of the commercialization.

"I want particularly to stress that the position of commercialization at Innsbruck will be watched very carefully Much will depend on our future attitude on what happens at Innsbruck," Killanin said.

Marilyn Wins Bowler Of Year Tourney

Marilyn Epidendio defeated Roberta Thorsen in the finals yesterday, 179-169, to win the Marin County Women's 600 Club Bowler of the Year tournament at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael

Mrs. Epidendio finished first in the qualifying with an 861 score for four games, then sat down as Mrs. Thorsen, who qualified fourth, defeated three opponents for the right to challenge her

The tournament involved 12 bowlers, the top one from each month of 1972. Mrs. Epidendio was the January winner and, coincidentally, is also the January winner for 1973, so she is certain of returning to defend her title.

Mrs. Thorsen, the December winner qualified with a 747 series, placing her behind Mrs. Epidendio and Penny Tauscher (July) and Barbara Eastland (May), who tied at 753. Jackie Newsom (August) was fifth at 719.

Mrs. Thorsen defeated Mrs. Newsom, 177-170, and then working her way up the ladder, beat Mrs. Eastland, 178-154, and Mrs. Tauscher, 182-153, before confronting Mrs. Epidendio.

Mrs. Epidendio won $50 cash plus a $25 paid entry to the State Queens Tournament later this year in Bakersfield. Her qualifying games were 218, 225, 194 and 224. High game for the day was bowled by Anne Maillard, 229.

In the second half, Cossack coach Bill Trumbo changed to a zone and that caused Hayward to shoot outside. The Pioneers shot 27 per cent in the second half after a 45 per cent first half effort.

In the preliminary game, the Sonoma State junior varsity avenged an earlier loss to North Peralta College with an 87-78 victory.

UNSER, KELLY WIN

Deacon Has Fun In Golf Tourney

SAN JUAN P R. (UPI) — Del Unser and Leroy Kelly won the $10,000 first prize Sunday in the American Airlines Golf Classic but Deacon Jones got the biggest cheer

Unser slender Philadelphia Phillies outfielder and Kelly rugged Cleveland Browns running back, shot a 54-hole net 177 over the El Conquistador Hotel course to win the $30,000 tournament for baseball-football player teams by five strokes

Jones the gigantic defensive tackle from the San Diego Chargers hit the 410-yard 18th hole with two well-played shots. His ball was about 30 feet from the cup. All he needed was two putts for a net birdie

Back and forth he putted taking four strokes on the green. As he picked up his ball from the cup with Puerto Rico television cameras grinding away the Deacon turned and hurled his putter about 100 yards in a nearby lake. Then he wound up and threw a perfect pitch with his ball to follow the putter

He turned to the gallery with the wide grin on his face and said, "that was more fun than getting a quarterback."

The win was a fortuitous one for Unser and Kelly.

Unser who has been traded twice in the last two years, needs the money to move his family again.

"Sure I'll take the $5,000,' he said 'I'm no super star like most of these other fellows With a batting average like mine I need all the money I can get Unser, after a slow start hit .238 for Cleveland last year.

Kelly lost $1,000 in cash while dancing in the hotel lounge Saturday night.

'I don't feel so bad about the money I lost now," he said "I've got five times as much as I had last night."

Kelly who was dancing to the singing of Deacon Jones, said he thought he put his money clip in his pocket, but later discovered the trousers did not have a pocket

The San Francisco team of Giant pitcher Juan Marichal and 49er placekicker Bruce Gossett finished second at 182 and received $2,500 each. Both said they intended to give the money to charity, the major portion of it to the Roberto Clemente Memorial Fund for Nicaraguan earthquake victims. Third, worth $1,000 each, went to two Houston representatives, Astro outfielder Jim Wynn and Oiler quarterback Dan Pastorini.

AFTER HAWAIIAN OPEN WIN

Golfer Schlee Dons Gold Blazer

HONOLULU (UPI) — When Tom Watson finished the third round of $200,000 Hawaiian Open Saturday holding a four-stroke lead, John Schlee, who was second exclaimed "I hope he wins it. We non-winners have to stick together.'

Little did Schlee know at that time that he would be wearing the gold blazer given to the Hawaiian Open champion Sunday

Schlee, who had never won a tournament since joining the tour in 1965, fired a four-under-par 68 while Watson crumbled.

'I'm going to put the $40,000 into the bank along with all of the $500 I've won this year," he laughed.

His 15-under-par 273 was two strokes ahead of Orville Moody, who finished with a 69 to pocket $22,800.

Watson had a disastrous double bogey on the 13th along with two bogeys on the front nine to finish with a three-over par 75 and a 276. It was still good enough for third and $14,200, his biggest purse to date

Gay Brewer, who shared the first-round lead with Watson and George Archer, was alone in fourth with 277 after a 69, good enough for $9,400.

Schlee, who was tutored by Ben Hogan, moved into the lad on the 14th when he carded a birdie on the par-four hole. One hole back, Watson ran into problems with a water meter and soared to a double bogey.

But Schlee said the turning point was the 15th when he hit his drive into the right rough. "I tried to recall what Ben Hogan had told me," he said.

Using a four-iron, gripping the club like the way he was taught and playing the ball the way Hogan would have done it, Schlee hit around a tree and landed 12-feet from the green where he got his par.

Schlee credited Brewer and J.C. Snead, who was playing with him, for encouraging him all the way

"Snead was even more nervous than I was," he said.

"I was tense and nervous" said Watson, the 23-year-old Stanford graduate who is in his second year on the tour.

Snead finished with a 69 and 278 for $8,200 while Hale Irwin and Johnny Miller were at 279 with 66 and 69 respectively.

Lanny Wadkins, who had a 66, was at 280 while Archer, Billy Casper, Brian Allin, Juan Rodriguez, DeWitt Weaver and Larry Ziegler were at 281.

Archer had a 71 as did Allin, while Rodriguez, who is playing seriously, finished with a 67 Weaver and Ziegler both carded 69's while Casper had a 70.

Lee Trevino managed to break 70 for the first time this year with a 68 for a 282 while Bruce Crampton, winner of the Phoenix and Tucson opens came in with an even-par 72 for 283.

Rod Funseth, who started off the year winning the Los Angeles Open, had a 69 for 285.

Petaluma Hosts Santa Rosa '5'

Petaluma and Santa Rosa high schools renew their old rivalry tomorrow night at 7 o'clock when the Panthers invade the Petaluma gym; but with both schools out of contention for the North Bay League basketball crown, nothing much more than pride will be at stake.

In other prep basketball action tomorrow night at 7 o'clock, Rancho Cotate of Rohnert Park, travels to Forestville for a Sonoma County League clash with El Molino, St. Vincent hosts non-league for Cloverdale in the Kenilworth Junior High gym in Petaluma, and Tomales hosts Calistoga in a North Central League II contest.

The Trojans are in a three-way tie for fifth place in the NBL with a 2-6 mark, six games behind the league leading and undefeated Vallejo Apaches. Santa Rosa is four games behind at 4-4, good for fourth place.

Last time the two teams met, the Panthers edged Petaluma 63-59 in the last minute of play on free throws by Chris Allen. Allen, a 6-foot guard who has scored over 1,000 points in his varsity career, is the leading scorer on the Santa Rosa squad with a 20-points per game average.

Rancho Cotate has virtually eliminated itself from the SCL race, barring any second-half miracles, currently standing in sixth place with a 2-4 record, four and a half games behind Cardinal Newman of Santa Rosa. El Molino is in last place with an 0-6 mark.

St. Vincent, which kept its North Central League II record spotless Friday night with a 55-53 win over Kelseyville, takes a 10-4 overall record against the powerful Cloverdale Eagles, 12-4 overall.

Tomales, which got its initial NCL II victory of the year with a 77-57 win over Upper Lake, has a good chance to win against the Wildcats who are also 1-3 in league play.

EGO INVOLVED

Mays-Namath Fuss: A View Of Elements

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — They were talking about the Willie Mays-Joe Namath fuss in Puerto Rico, and someone brought up the word "ego"

"What's wrong with having an ego? I see nothing wrong with it at all." said Warren Spahn, a superstar in his own right elected to the Hall of Fame the other day and one of those honored here Sunday night by the Milwaukee chapter of the Baseball Writers Association of America.

"When I first heard about the Mays-Namath thing, I thought it was a publicity gag," Spahn went on. "I wasn't down there in Puerto Rico and I don't know what actually happened, whether it was a matter of two egos or not, but without ego, you have no ambition and without ambition you have no purpose."

That could be oversimplification on Warren Spahn's part, but in at least one respect, he's right. some degree of ego was involved in what happened between Willie Mays and Joe Namath in Puerto Rico last Friday.

What happened was that the two were paired together as partners in the opening round of the American Airlines Golf Classic, and when Namath showed up 40 minutes late, saying he didn't get a wakeup call from the hotel operator, Mays refused to play with him

Each was assigned a new playing partner and Namath later apologized to Mays, which should have ended the entire matter right there, except that it didn't.

Little Del Unser, the Philadelphia Phillies' new outfielder, and Leroy Kelly the Cleveland Browns' running back, won the tournament Sunday, but people will hardly remember that

Instead they'll only remember the episode between Mays and Namath even though both later insisted it was much ado about nothing. Human nature is like that. Few people care who won the tournament. People are now likely to keep wondering what got into Willie to make him stalk off the way he did.

The fact Mays said his walkogg esd "nothing against Joe personally," and that he was willing to play with anybody, even "a rookie", so long as he showed up on time, does not take away from the fact that Willie Mays feels he has reached the station in life where a certain amount of respect is coming to him—even from someone like Joe Namath.

The entire incident smacked of Hollywood's old "star system", a system which prevailed among movie actors and actresses 25 years ago, far more than it does now.

Getting back to the golf tournament, though, the sponsors, American Airlines, do everything to make all the contestants feel at home. They even pamper them and nobody among the 64 contestants were pampered more than Mays and Namath.

Both were provided with private hotel suites while all the other contestants had to rough it in mere luxurious $80 a day rooms.

A guy can get a little spoiled in an atmosphere like that.

Curiously or not, most of the other contestants sided with Mays. They felt Namath should have been on time, whether he missed his wakeup call or not.

For his part, Namath was generally sorry about all the trouble he caused.

"Willie has always been one of my heroes," he said, "Look, if they want to kick me out of the tournament, they can, and I'll go."

Mays had no desire to see Namath disqualifed as the Jets' quarterback certainly would have been had the tournament been played under offficial Professional Golfers Association rules.

All Willie wanted to do was get going and the way I saw it, he shouldn't have gotten so overheated.. He might have had to wait a while but he would have been a lot better off making a joke of the whole thing.

and Chicago before hanging up his skates in 1952.

After a slow start, the Bruins had spurted to the front of the NHL's Eastern Division lead in front of Montreal in late Demcember. But the losing skid dropped the club into third place with 67 points, only five points ahead of Buffalo and six ahead of Detroit.

Sunday night, the Bruins settled for a 2-2 tie with the Philadelphia Flyers to pick up only their 12th point in their last 15 games.

Gourmet Wine And Glass Shop Due In Downtown San Rafael

A gourmet wine and glass shop will open in downtown San Rafael at 891 Fourth Street (corner of Lootens Place), where Gallenkamp Shoes was formerly located.

Owners of Gourmet Wine and Glass will be John J. Collins and his wife Adrienne of San Rafael.

"We're shooting for about a March opening," said Collins. "We plan to have 300 varieties of wines, mostly premium wines, both domestic and imported." Collins said he will have the largest display of cocktail and wine glasses in this area — about 2,000 different glasses.

The store will also carry a complete line of bar supplies and tools. Collins plans to use rough redwood, some tiffany lamps, and subdued lighting to create the wine cellar mood.

Collins has been an electrician in San Francisco for about 12 years and did considerable work at Ghirardelli Square. He was also bartender and liquor store employee for about four years. He and his family came to Novato in 1962 and have lived in San Rafael for the past five years.

Gallenkamp Shoes, which operated at the site until last month, closed its San Rafael outlet and consolidated operations with its Northgate Mall store.

RALPH C. LEWIS of Novato, vice president of North American Reinsurance Corp. in San Francisco, was elected president of the Insurance Company Managers Association of Northern California.

He succeeds Harold M. Steele, assistant vice president of Fireman's Fund American Insurance Companies.

Wilson

LARRY G. WILSON has been named assistant manager at Crocker Bank's Corte Madera office, replacing John F. Brown, who was appointed assistant manager at Crocker Bank's Kentfield branch.

A graduate of Tulane University in New Orleans, Wilson joined Crocker Bank last year. He lives in San Francisco.

REDHILL BARBER SHOP at Redhill Shopping Center in San Anselmo is under new ownership.

Leo J. Alexander, who formerly operated Hub City Barber Shop in downtown San Anselmo, and Frenchie Blankenship of Novato bought the Redhill Barber Shop from Joseph Hildreth and the estate of Lloyd Sanders. Sanders died in a motorcycle mishap in San Rafael last Sept. 8, and Hildreth has entered the trucking business.

Alexander operated the Hub City Barber Shop at 564 San Anselmo Avenue from 1966 until last month. The old barber shop is now a part of the expanded Miscellaneous gift shop.

MARC PHILLIP LEIBOVITZ, 25, of Mill Valley has joined the San Rafael law firm of Bagshaw, Martinelli, Corrigan & Jordan as an associate and full-time attorney. He was former law clerk for the firm, located in the Albert Building at 1010 B Street.

Leibovitz graduated from University of California at Berkeley in 1969, won his law degree from Hastings College of Law in June of 1972, and passed the July California bar examination.

Leibovitz

Raube

JEROME H. RAUBE of San Rafael has been named assistant vice president and manager of the real estate department of the Bank of California's main office in San Francisco.

Raube joined the Bank in 1963, transferred in 1966 to the Portland office, and left the bank in 1968 to join a small business. He returned to the bank's San Francisco main office in 1971 as real estate loan officer.

JIM'S SPORT SHOP at 703 Grant Avenue in Novato is conducting a final sale before calling it quits after 22 years in business.

Arthur L. Gee of Novato, one of the partners, said he is closing because of illness. His partner is Harold Greenwald, also of Novato.

They said the exact date of closing will depend on how soon the entire inventory and fixtures are sold out.

Jim's Sports Shop was established in 1951. Greenwald took over in 1964 and Gee joined him in 1966.

REALTORS BREAKFAST — A savings and loan official will discuss "Money Prognostication — 1973" at tomorrow's breakfast meeting of the Marin County Board of Realtors. The meeting is set for 8 a.m. at the Corte Madera Lions Club. Speaker is Mrs. Pat Mikel Mello, vice president and chief loan officer of Homestead Savings and Loan Association office in San Francisco.

AMERICAN FOREST Products Corp. in San Francisco announced the appointment of George J. Ehlers of Fairfax as senior industrial engineer in the applied technology department. Formerly with Fibreboard Corporation, Ehlers joined American Forest Products last Nov. 9.

THE CHAIR PLACE, which opened last year in San Rafael at the corner of Fourth Street and Tamalpais Avenue, is expanding into adjoining space at 939 Tamalpais Avenue. The dividing wall was removed to provide space for a wider selection of chairs.

"We have a greater variety of bar stools and counter stools, with different styles and price ranges," said owner Karel Langer.

The space at 939 Tamalpais was occupied last year by Carnaby's gift shop, followed briefly this year by Thomas C. Ryan of Marin Restaurant Associates selling Diner's Out tickets.

MILDRED HOWIE of Corte Madera, who operates Mildred Howie Public Relations, has been named one of the judges for the San Francisco Advertising Club's 22nd annual Point-of-Purchase advertising exhibition.

Winning entries will be on display at the Sheraton Palace Hotel for the Point-fof-Purchase Day luncheon meeting on Feb. 14.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Explanation Given Of 'Floating Supply'

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. There appears to be a need for an explanation of how "floating supply" of a stock is determined. — R.C.

A. Shares held by company officials, by members of their families or indirectly through trust accounts are considered "closely held." In other words, these are not usually available for trading, but are held as long-term investments. Changes in such stockholdings are reported weekly in the Wall Street Journal under the heading "Insider Transaction."

In addition, one company may hold shares of another firm as an investment. These shares under most conditions would be excluded when determining floating supply. Institutionally held shares are also thought of as closely held, although these are frequently unloaded on the market creating sharp price fluctuations. After deducting any of the above holdings from the outstanding common, the resulting number would be the "floating supply."

Q. Why does Florida Steel (NYSE) have the lowest price/earnings ratio in the steel industry when it earns more than any of the other companies? I own 100 shares bought at $26. — J.M.

Florida Steel produces steel reinforcing bars used in concrete construction. Since more than 70 per cent of sales emanate from the construction industry, the company is generally classified with this group rather than with the steel producers. However, among the five firms fabricating similar products, Florida commands the lowest multiple.

Because all company mills are operating now at close to full capacity, only modest increases in output will be possible with present facilities. However, a 75 per cent larger furnace is scheduled to be in operation at the Tampa mill by April. The prospects for higher product prices are dim, despite the relaxed Phase II rules, since Florida's profit margin is now higher than in any of the base years. An upgrading in product mix to the higher profit lines would generate some earnings gains. Shares no trading at only 6.5 times estimated 1973 earnings are undervalued andshould be held in conservative accounts.

Claim Rate Is Boosted For Airline

LOS ANGELES (BW) — The Civil Aeronautics Board has granted authority to the Flying Tiger Line to increase the minimum amount a shipper may claim for goods lost or damaged in most domestic air shipments from 50 cents a pound, or $50 (whichever is higher), to $8.16 a pound, or $50.

In granting the increase, effective immediately, the board said it would study the results and compare them with the existing lower liability conditions which remain in effect for other airlines.

The all-cargo carrier said this is the first time an airline has been granted the authority to increase the amount payable on shipper claims.

Flying Tiger retained the 10-cent excess value charge per $100 of excess declared value. The international shipment charge will remain at 40 cents per $100 of total declared value.

Under Flying Tiger's new rules, shippers may declare excess valuation on a whole shipment or a portion of a shipment.

Prices Dip Narrowly On Market

Declines led advances by about a 7-to-6 margin among the more than 1,780 issues on the tape.

Phase III and a weakening dollar still troubled investors. Also, increases in interest rates have led many to fear the Federal Reserve System is clamping down on credit. While this can help inflation, it has a bearish market impact inasmuch as it could slow expansion in the latter half of 1973, analysts said.

American Stock Exchange prices moved lower in slow trading.

INCOME TAX FACTS

By PETER J. WIKEL, C.P.A.

Political Contributions May Be Deducted If Form 4908 Filed

Political contributions are deductible if the candidate or the campaign committee qualified by filing Form 4908 in the case of a candidate, or Form 4909 in the case of a campaign committee directly with the Internal Revenue Service and fully complying with all of the rules.

The political candidate or campaign committee can secure a copy of Technical Information Release No. 1145 dated Feb. 23, 1972, from the Internal Revenue Service which gives details for qualifying.

If the candidate or the campaign committee has qualified, then contributions to them are deductible, but you will need a receipt on the form prescribed by the Internal Revenue Service for each contribution, or you will need a cancelled check showing the payment and what it was for and you may be called upon for further verificaiton if all you have is your cancelled check.

A contribution to a national, state or local committee of a national political party is eligible for credit or deduction without the national, state or local committee filing these Forms 4908 and 4909, since this has been taken care of on a national level.

The amount of the credit which you can deduct on your income tax return is not more than one-half of the total contribution that you made and in no event more than $12.50 on a single or separate return, or more than $25 on a joint return.

As an alternate to a direct deduction of a credit against taxes, you can deduct the total amount of your gift, but not in excess of $50 on a single return or separate return, or more than $100 on a joint return as an itemized deduction under miscellaneous deductions on Schedule A of your tax return if you itemize your deductions.

If you are paying taxes on your top dollar at a rate in excess of 50 per cent and you itemize your deductions, then obviously it would be to your benefit to claim the itemized deduction for the contribution rather than the credit since the credit only permits a 50 percent deduction from taxes whereas a deduction from income with a tax rate in excess of 50 per cent will give you a greater deduction.

Antihijacking Measures Are Started In Oakland

OAKLAND (BW) — New antihijacking procedures were to go into effect at noon today — one day early — at Oakland International Airport using the so-called "sterile concourse."

The Federal Aviation Administration has ordered local agencies to provide police and a search of all hand-carried luggage for every flight effective Feb. 6.

With the "sterile concourse" plan all passengers will be screened at a common point, rather than at individual airline gates as in the past. At Oakland International this point will be at the entrance to the concourse, just off the main lobby.

Carry-on items of passengers will be searched and the passengers themselves screened with magnetometers, which are metal-detecting devices. Police surveillance will be provided by the Oakland Police Department.

The sterile concourse, with all passengers for all airlines passing through a single check point permits the most economical methods since a minimum of personnel can be used.

To avoid flight delays airlines are urging passengers to check in earlier for their flights. Allowing 45 minutes instead of the usual 15 to 30. This will be especially important at peak morning, mid-day and evening hours.

Passengers also are urged to check as much of their luggage as possible so that as little search as possible will be necessary.
